THE SARGENT SERVICES

Since 1915 Porter Sargent and Staff have served as educational advisors to parents.

Information on a great variety of schools, colleges and camps is available from our office, and a bureau is maintained to advise parents and guardians.

Thousands have been helped by sending details of their child's needs.

A complete form will be sent on request, to be filled in with data that will make our suggestions pertinent and helpful. Write to Porter Sargent, 11 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass., specify name of child, age, school and class, grades received, the type of school sought, tuition range, and desired geographical location.

With this and additional data provided on the form which will be sent from this office, recommendation will be made in the best interest of the child.

Compensation to defray expenses of handling inquiries is usually asked of parents able to pay, as we accept no enrollment fees from the schools.

NEWS AND THE SCHOOLS

News concerning the schools reveals a quickened pace. Trends confirm the patterns set by a rising tide of potential enrollment. More selective admissions for those of greater aptitude bring rising academic objectives. The private schools are not able to expand apace with the influx of war babies, as earlier explained to readers of this Handbook. Tuitions often do not meet current expenses, let alone allow the building of new plant!

Yet the recession has certainly not curtailed private schools. Rather are they humming with heightened activity and acceleration of their academic pace to meet the higher standards demanded by colleges. As competition stiffens increasingly for well-known schools, the backlog of applicants mounts before many schools where yeoman work has been traditional in preparing for college both able students and those with academic problems who have turned to them for help.

The following are remarked as signaling the trend of developments this past year in academic boarding and day private schools described in this Handbook:

A marked decrease in non-college-bound students and the raising of academic standards and goals paralleling the more selective admission.

An increase of enrollment resulting in 3%-5% overall, with the boarding schools holding to the lower figure.

College admissions hold to 90%-95% for the leading preparatory schools in various regions of the country, although graduates are attending more widely dispersed colleges.

Continuing faculty-student ratios hold below 11 students to each teacher in leading preparatory schools.

Scholarships are fewer and now benefit approximately 13% of the students with the greater number offered in large eastern boys preparatory schools, and fewer in the girls boarding schools.

Teachers' salaries increased more this year,—7 to 9% across the board, averaging 25 to 40% over a 5 year period. More is needed even at expense of plant.

Plant expansion drives are not appreciably slowed by recession with functional emphasis now on classrooms and dormitories.

The dollar value of scholarships holds, yet the proportion to the total tuition decreased while competition among schools for extremely able students grows with emphasis on honor courses.

Tuition charges have advanced more this past year than ever before, with more than one-half the boarding schools reporting increases averaging 9.9%, while in day schools, somewhat less than one-half report an increase of 14%.

The new schools announced exceed those closing, yet they are but a minor factor in meeting the acute demand for independent education.

Tutorial and makeup offerings, greatly curtailed, this year are reported as offered by 123 or less than 1 in 4 of the leading boarding schools,—or a reversal of the ratio prevalent a decade ago.

Remedial reading now is provided on a broader basis in 219 of the leading boarding schools reporting and while Developmental Reading gains prominence in 116 schools these rewarding fields of work are closely watched.

The specialized school is assuming at greater cost the more complex and analytical educational problems and this area of education is expanding. The need is great today for schools that offer help for those whose academic work has been markedly poor. (The Directory for Exceptional Children, 3rd edition, just published by this office, reveals phenomenal growth in thousands of facilities,—homes, schools, clinics,—for the handicapped.)

Honors courses are increasing and acceleration and advanced work is being offered in more grades at more schools with the greater attention and incentives for those of superior abilities.

Science courses are strengthened and being reorganized in a significant number of schools. Perhaps in the sciences the progress which has been manifest from experiments and pioneering finds greatest popular interest. The Introduction this year touches upon this work. Persons in the field will recognize that this is but a glimpse of the many new developments being forged in Public and Private Schools. Many new science programs are not yet announced while others have received wide notice through foundation sponsorship.

This year despite the busy schedules which are prevalent among educators everywhere, we are once again indebted to persons in private schools for contributing a number of interesting articles in which they discuss matters that are receiving attention today;—How shall science and related subjects be integrated into both the primary and secondary curriculum? We wish to take this opportunity to thank individual contributors for their help in revealing the several aspects of Private Schools to the interested public and our readers.

THE SUSPICION OF QUALITY

BY HAROLD H. CORBIN, JR.

Lake Forest Academy

Four years ago I encountered on the street one morning a friend whose task it was at the moment to search out a principal for the new elementary school in a village nearby. I asked him how it was going. "Oh, I've seen quite a number of candidates. But it's the same old business, you know; not a one comes close." "The same old business?" I queried. "What's wrong with them?" "Their suspicion of quality," he replied quite simply.

Not wishing to appear uninformed, I changed the subject, and we went our ways. The enigmatic phrase, however, stuck in my mind. "The suspicion of quality"—what was he getting at?

I think I now understand. I understand it in terms of the convulsive attitudinal shift now evident in educational thinking across the nation. In this shift the concept of quality figures prominently—among parents, students, teachers, and the public at large. The new thinking deserves recognition and clarification: if there is change, to and from what is it taking place? What's behind it? Whither does it tend? Let us trace three broad issues, one at a time.

THE TEACHER IN AMERICAN SOCIETY: A STEREOTYPE

A 'depth study' of many citizens over fifty years of age would dredge up, I am sure, a tenacious stereotype labeled 'teacher.' An angular spinster with a lace choker, the sexless and unsuccessful daughter of propriety, performing a necessary but dull duty for those who should be seen and not heard (do you remember how Tom Sawyer felt?). Or an indigent eccentric, an itinerant fellow classed somewhere below the local parson, a bemused tyrant with a switch in one hand and McGuffey in the other, a pedant without privilege (how we loved Washington Irving and Oliver Goldsmith!). As obsolete and affectionately cock-eyed as these memories are, they are still with us—but they are changing, as change they must. Shaw didn't help: "Those who can, do; those who can't, teach."

Awareness is breaking in on the wings of space. "Is it really true that in Europe, especially in Russia, teachers are honored members of the community, that they are often held above the doctor and the lawyer, that they are rewarded by high incomes, respected, emulated, and deferred to? Is it really true that we don't have enough teachers to go round? What is happening here? What do industry and technology mean by snatching these people away from their proper duties? What is this I hear about teachers' unions?"

Questions, if repeated loudly and often enough, get answers. Answers about teachers are now available to the man on the street every day in almost every newspaper in the land, and they are being read and discussed with mounting interest. Facts and necessity produce, in time, changes in attitude; in turn they produce action. If quality in education means survival, a persuasive thesis, then teachers must be our prime concern, and whatever is necessary to produce them in enlightened numbers, to dignify them with compensation appropriate to their function in society, to give them classrooms and laboratories, to bring them back from the wasteland of professionalism (a natural retreat from neglect) to the fields of true scholarship—these things must be done, and done quickly. They cannot be accomplished by worry and words, for quality cannot be so easily induced. This is being recognized. The big shift is on—in government, in P.T.A.'s, in the press, among school boards, among teachers, in public and independent universities and schools the country over. A three-column headline in the Chicago Daily News for Thursday, January 23, 1958, proclaimed, "Urge Pay Up to $12,000 for Winnetka Teachers." Who urged it? A Citizens' Board. Similar sentiments are finding expression in many a community today. Amen, Amen.

THE FATE OF THE ABLE: DEMOCRACY AND MEDIOCRITY CONFOUNDED

The anti-intellectual attitudes to which the United States has become habituated are and have been recognized. Too few, till now, have been concerned by them.

Even fewer have understood the degree to which they have vitiated the structure and purpose of American education. These attitudes are so deepseated that both trauma and time are needed to unseat them; yet even here change is afoot and hope rises. To clarify such hope let me indulge in another brief depth study and see what figure labeled 'Intellectual' comes to the surface.

The stereotype this time is a gaunt, consumptive fellow who needs a haircut. Thick horn-rimmed glasses do not disguise a satanic and disquieting glance, best left unmet. He looks vaguely foreign. His dress reveals his poverty. The best that can be said of him is that he is an impractical visionary too full of books to make sense, too lazy to keep a job, too snooty to be 'like us.' The worst that can be said is that he is un-American, he'll never amount to anything, and we'd better keep a close eye on him.

Who can say that it has not been partly because of an uneasy aversion to this specter that intellectual mediocrity seems a comfortable middle ground and that doing is more desirable than thinking? Note the faintly derisive sound to the words 'theory' and 'visionary,' as against 'practice' and 'doer.' Our preference for ingenuity, drive, and practicality, things which 'get you somewhere,' is reflected in our curricula, at the inevitable and shocking sacrifice of intellectual discipline. Not long ago an applicant to one of our leading universities presented a transcript of his work in high school. It revealed that in junior year he took English III, American History, typing, speech, chorus, and physical education. In senior year he exercised his intellect with English IV, journalism, speech, personality problems, marriage and family, and chorus. Needless to say he was not admitted—perhaps on the fair assumption that he had been so well insulated against the threat of intellectual discipline at the age of 18 that no university could teach him to think.

This historical aversion to intellectualism, it seems to me, is half effect, half cause of a fundamental confusion about the meaning of democracy. Nowhere in the documentary or philosophical origins of American democracy is it equated to mediocrity, or to the 'divine average.' Men are born equal—but only equal in opportunity, opportunity to use or let perish the disparate endowments bequeathed them by their Creator. The dictum which holds that a high school diploma is a 'right' for all, rather than a privilege for the ambitious and the competent, is naught but perverted folklore—and yet how deeply this perversion governs our practice. As a result, down come the standards of performance, up goes the number of 'soft' courses, out comes the 'no-flunk' order, away go parents and children happy in their deprivation, around goes the cycle of benevolent degeneration of our intellectual muscle. Abetting the entire process are those who direct much of the educational machinery of the nation, the professional educationists.

The unintentional and now well entrenched orphans of the university tradition of learning, the professional educationists, control the major portion of the teacher supply, influence through their teacher colleges, state universities, and the regional accreditation agencies what shall and shall not be taught, ally themselves perforce with the political activities of the state legislatures, and thus exert, in defense of elaborate vested interests, a monumental influence upon the educational patterns of the nation.

And yet even here, on the anti-intellectual front, there is strong evidence of attitudinal shift—toward quality. People are beginning to remember a lost truth—that the main purpose of education is intellectual training. They are beginning to suspect that the permissive mishmash of 'preparation for living,' 'cosmetology,' 'better boy-girl relationships' and so on are lethal opiates for a competitive nation's future leaders—its young. Suspicion has finally alighted on curved grading methods pegged so high that no one fails and A's no longer mean perfect; on 'diplomas for attendance'; on sectioning policies that 'democratically' lump the gifted with the laggard and deliberately teach between them; on 'licensed' teachers who have been led to believe they can teach because they know 'how' but not necessarily 'what.' I do not mean to suggest that such unfortunate practices are universal; many public schools and virtually all independent schools eschew them. There is, and has been, however, far too much indulgence in these fatuous errors. A reverse trend is under way.

Such influential voices as those of Yale's President, A. Whitney Griswold, and Illinois historian Arthur Bestor—to name only two—decry the recent history of our elementary and secondary academic standards (hear President Griswold in an editorial of November 25, 1955, in the Chicago Tribune; Dr. Bestor in an interview published January 24, 1958, in U. S. News and World Report). Note that many of our independent schools are flexing and intensifying their already traditional practices of pushing the able student, through honors or accelerated sections aimed at acceptance at college with advanced standing. Observe citizens' groups, public school leaders, the press, and other articulate moulders of opinion as they react to the needs now so plainly before us. It is not like Americans long to settle for anything second-rate, whether it be homes or automobiles, mousetraps or bombs, churches or schools. Our schools—far too many of them—and the job they have been doing have been inadequate. Recognition has been forced upon us. Attitudes toward quality are swiftly changing. Action is beginning.

THE CHILD: FATHER OF THE AGE

Being ours, and being not persons but 'becomings,' no depth study yet devised can bring to light a stereotype of the American boy or girl. They are, as they always have been, our basic wealth, our only true resource, and our first and foremost product. A lush economy has put our inventory in long supply, and since we cannot warehouse them (they require continuous processing), we are now faced with problems obvious to all—too few plants, a short supply of skilled workmen, and hence a product unequipped to perform duties far more complex than ever before. What forces work upon this sensitive product? What is its reaction? The answers are fairly logical ones; once we understand the causes, the effects are not surprising.

Basically, boys and girls grow up in spite of us, not because of us. God, in His Infinite Wisdom, has so arranged it. Some, having drunk deep of the neural tensions created by their elders, take things into their own hands, no one but the cops saying them nay, and become delinquent. More and better schools with greater challenge could have saved some of these.

The great middle group do mainly what is expected of them (this has been made palatable), proceeding through grammar school and high school learning lifemanship, choosing the easier right rather than the harder wrong (sic), becoming happy, well 'integrated' and busy adolescents only faintly sensing, with some uneasiness, that their academic chewing gum will lose its savor in time, and that the intellectual provincialism which drearily awaits them is not entirely of their own making. They know and too readily accept the indictment of the 'long hair.' They have little idea where Saudi Arabia is or what might go on there during the next five years. Their brush with Tennyson takes place on page 212 of a suitcase anthology, their Latin experience (if any) consists in a toothless textbook and a creative experience with the home economics department in the form of a Roman banquet. Modern educational science, as in technology, has happily succeeded in reducing the writing of compositions to oral exercises in the 'Speech' class, compressing homework into the library period, emasculating chemistry and physics into total sterility, leaving more time for classes in cheerleading through the creation of the multiple answer quiz, and teaching philosophy through the 'guidance' department. What's left can be cleared out through field trips and the growing library of film strips, which I suspect takes care of the archaisms of grammar, orthography, and the multiplication tables. Learning by doing has replaced learning by cerebration. And from each home room wall looks down the wise face of a man named Abraham Lincoln, who learned by both.

The group at the top? These are the hungry and able ones who would learn all they need to know no matter where, if need be in a vacuum. The miraculous complexity of our expanding knowledge is a stimulus, not a frustration to them. They by themselves sift and select, judge and reject, devour and digest. These are the ones whose vital futures are dictating the attitudinal shift now pervading the land—these and the ones who have their potentials of greatness but who are now unidentified and unchallenged among us. If these are given quality from the beginning, who knows what miraculous hand might lift the minds of the slower ones behind them?

Could it be that in our kindly and democratic way we have put the academic horse behind the intellectual wagon? Perhaps. At last necessity may be forcing change, quality may be set right side up, and our tomorrows made secure by great leaders whom we lesser ones are proud to follow.

their zeal for narrow exploration, their competition to establish for their own branch of knowledge an arrogant superiority over all others. We must also free them from the propaganda with which our commercialism frequently abets this fragmentation and competition. Thoughtful people, young or old, will find a sound new starting point for their thinking, by reading John H. Storer's "The Web of Life". Further, let me quote that devoted British conservationist, E. B. Balfour:

"If our experience of the last twenty years has not taught us sufficient humility to realize that we are incapable of ordering our lives successfully in a Godless society, then one is tempted to wonder whether as a species we are worth preserving. In every activity, from the management of our soil onwards, we have regarded ourselves as self-sufficient, and in every activity that attitude of mind has led to disaster. We are the youngest of the world's species, and we have all the arrogance of youth. We have played havoc with the elaborate structure that was laboriously built up before we came, and now we find that we are not gods after all. We have been all-powerful in our destruction, but we cannot recreate the life we have destroyed.

"Human ecology demands that we should think less of our 'rights' and more of our duties to all other living things, including each other. We must start again, with a new and better attitude towards life. Indeed we must in some cases relearn that life exists.

"The outcome and production, both in vegetable and animal bodies, have been hitherto considered so much under the prepossessions of chemical and mechanical philosophy that the physiologists have entirely lost sight of life . . . But unless we consider life as the immediate cause of all actions occurring in either animals or vegetables, we can have no just conception of either vegetable or animal matter."

Must our arrogance lead us to a total conquest of outer space and the colonization of the moon, reportedly a rather cold and cheerless place? If it does, will 'homo sapiens' be any closer to God and his own destiny? Undoubtedly our school boys, who are seeing Buck Rogers' exploits come to life, will count on the adventure of space-ship travel, just as they have dreamed of climbing Everest and K-2, or of camping and exploring in the Arctic and Ant-

Arctic. Yet is it their destiny to spend their vacations playing tag in the ionosphere, clothed in space-suits to ward off cosmic rays, and breathing oxygen canned and carried from the atmosphere of an already deserted earth? In the present thinking of some of our physicists and many of our youth, such speculation is not as fantastic as it seems. A twelve-year-old today can, with utmost complacency, say that we need not concern ourselves with preservation of the earth's surface to grow food, because the sea has ample supply for thousands of years, easily put in capsules and preserved by synthetic chemicals and atomic refrigeration. If this same lad has concerned himself with the function of water in life at all, he may find assurance in the prospect of drinking the oceans, when purified. Yet rarely does he extend his imagination to the prospect of a land without rain, all rocky mountain tops and bare desert, uninhabitable by man, beast, birds, or insects.

LESSONS IN NATURE

Our courses in history teach that, during man's many centuries on this mysterious earth, he has created several so-called 'great civilizations'—all of which have been honored for their specific contributions to man's evolution. Do these courses teach the cause of their declines? Where is it clearly pointed out to our young people that these now defunct civilizations destroyed their own environment, that they raped the good earth until they ended under blowing sands? List them—Ur of the Chaldees, Babylon, Egypt, all of North Africa, much of China—even Greece and Rome—today barren countries in what was formerly a lush green world. What course tells today's American youngsters of the despoliation of their own forests and grazing lands, of the rapid expansion of our dustbowls and deserts, and the ever-shrinking space left for agriculture? Who studies our critically sinking water-table, and projects for a few years the inadequacy of any present supply to fill the needs of a growing population? Who concertedly records, measures or raises exception to the slow chemical and radiational poisoning of wild life, from bees to boys?

Not all our youth will be 'scientists'; yet all who would seek survival must share the use, control, and care of our planetary home. Everyone of us must come to know it better, relearn to respect and cherish it. Let this be the first task of science in the elementary school. Let this understanding and this challenge be given to all students, so the race may prosper under 'natural law.' From some of them we may also develop a new group of natural scientists, who will purposefully shoulder the responsibility of leading an informed country in the understanding and the preservation of its God-given surroundings.

Fear, and the peculiar glamor of electronics, space travel, and a modern chemistry fast approaching alchemy, will bring us specialists enough in the more spectacular branches of science. Let our concern be the basic one of LIFE.

A GOOD BEGINNING

How shall we elementary schools accomplish our goal? First, let us, with a mighty heave, cast out most of the graded science textbook series that have been published within the past thirty years. Most are guilty of fragmentation and of deadly repetition, grade after grade. Too many are written to be read only, on the presupposition that laboratory facilities do not exist, nor any surrounding nature. Blessed exceptions have been published, which are more laboratory and exploration guides than they are textbooks. Some even incorporate a vocabulary that does not 'talk down' to the grade level of the independent school pupil. Having decided to cherish only a few textbooks and guides, or to import some of the excellent English ones, let us fill the laboratory reference shelves with innumerable well-written volumes on every topic of known or potential student-interest. As long as they are written for the layman, they will not prove too adult for a really interested boy or girl.

Since we study life, good sunlight in the laboratory is a first essential. Next comes plenty of space to observe, under controlled conditions, from microscope to aquarium and terrarium, from window-box to greenhouse, from breeding cage to the limitless out-of-doors.

Who should teach science? Men and women who are whole people, well-adjusted, believers in God, — whose own lives express unity, beauty, reverence, and whose insatiable minds incessantly seek answers from all nature. Let them be woodsmen, — bird-watchers, — gardeners.

It matters not what their hobbies, as long as they share in learning with the children and communicate enthusiasm. The late Alfred Kinsey, as a young man, was one of the greatest teachers about birds, insects and trees that one might hope to know. While the science teacher need not be an expert scientist, he must have had sufficient training to communicate the "scientific spirit" of accurate and tested inquiry, controlled experiment, and meticulous record-keeping. Let him also cast out dogma and learn to say, "As far as we now know . . ." Then let him suggest testing each suggested hypothesis for truth and be ready to seek anew.

Who should study science? Every single elementary school boy and girl, from Grade I through Grade X, with the possible exception of omitting it in either Grade VIII or Grade IX for especial concentration on another branch of social studies! Too long have we given more than three-quarters of our academic time to language and mathematical skills. Too often has science been omitted from our independent school curriculum altogether, or assigned as a "snap course" or "busy work" for the low-verbal boy or girl. Little wonder the cry from government, industry, and colleges is for more scientists! Our ablest people have been steered away by the paucity of offerings, and the pressure of two-language requirements. Yet who dares affirm that the scientific discipline and training of the mind is less demanding or less creative than that of Latin or mathematics?

What shall we teach? Ay, there's the rub! Every good and effective science teacher we have consulted claims that his courses are experimental! Is not such approach, with the constant change it implies, the very essence of the subject? Let us never lose sight of the fact that it is life we are studying—its understanding, conservation, and its use to our country.

Most effective learning moves from the familiar to the unfamiliar, so start near at hand. Beginning study opportunities will vary incredibly from school to school, according to its location and climate—city, suburb, seashore, desert, mountaintop. Yet nature at first hand is not far off, even in the cities with their parks, zoos, aquaria, museums. Birds fly almost everywhere and the heavens need not be obscured with smog, if one plans his observations! Wherever out-of-doors is difficult to reach and space permits (and it always should), much of nature may be moved into the laboratory.

It has been observed that much of the best science learning is accomplished in voluntary science clubs. These often tend toward such physical studies as electronics and radio, or chemistry, but can just as well, if stimulated, concentrate on "earth-science" and "life-science". Every grade or science class should be, to a considerable extent, a club,—permitting the following of a particular interest and the carrying on of individual or small group projects. Wherever possible, the classroom should lead to the out-of-doors, both in class and "free" time. Soil, erosion, water may be studied indoors or out; earthworms and the microscopic life that nourishes plant growth must be seen in the laboratory and the results of their labors observed in the field. Ants and bees are easily observed indoors and out. Bird-watchers can conduct banding stations and observe the effects of mass spraying from the air on insect life and winged population. Woodcraft groups or Rangers may cherish and observe the proper care of a section of woodland; a zoo of collected wild or tame animals — snakes, fish, birds — may be indoors or out.

It matters little what the point of beginning, as long as it is close at hand, familiar, and can be meaningfully related to the totality of life and its conservation. Climate will often be a controlling factor. New England schools may concentrate on the out-of-doors in spring; save anatomy, astronomy, geography, physical and chemical aspects for winter. Food, its production, use, and relation to health are too often overlooked, and may fit in any season, as may study of the weather.

Whatever the course outline, let it be constantly flexible; take every opportunity to emphasize ecology, the concept of totality. Let us refuse to bind our minds with textbook rigidities and remember that on our doorsteps, wherever they may be, nature is calling us to come and know her. We must not waste the wealth of knowledge she spreads before us. It will be sheer joy to lead young people to the rediscovery, and the care of the environment which supports us all.

ACCELERATING THE SCIENCE PROGRAM

BY DR. J. ROLLIN GRANT

The Francis W. Parker School, California

With the increased emphasis now centered on the teaching of science and mathematics, an emphasis stimulated by the acute shortage of personnel qualified in these areas, it became evident that a long range program of instruction needed to be initiated. Further local emphasis was added because of the importance of the aircraft and electronic manufacturing and research in the San Diego community and because of the proximity to major naval installations. While our original plans called for an advanced program of these subjects in the fifth and sixth grades, expediency necessitated that, for the current year, the attention be focused on the students in grades seven and eight. It was interesting to note that with a public announcement of this program the applications for enrollment in these grades were the highest in the history of the school.

SELECTION OF STUDENTS

Our first problem was to discover the abilities of students in the two basic areas of science and mathematics, and batteries of tests were studied to determine the best devices for gaining the desired data. It was our opinion that we needed to have data that would not only give us information about the individual's aptitude in the two areas but also his achievement. To selected data gathering devices in these areas were added a test of mental ability and interest inventories. Past performance of the student as evidenced by grade records were studied and interviews were given each new student enrolled. After considerable study, the Sequential Tests of Educational Progress developed by the Educational Testing Service were selected since our philosophy was in agreement with the stated philosophy of these tests, namely, that students should gain an "increased knowledge of scientific concepts and an increased ability to reason with scientific information." While both the science and mathematics tests were used, we will limit this report largely to the data derived from the science test.

The test indicated six types of scientific reasoning to be tested and the values assessed included "the abilities to (1) identify and define scientific problems, (2) suggest or screen hypotheses, (3) select valid procedures, (4) interpret data and draw conclusions, (5) evaluate critically claims or statements made by others, and (6) reason quantitatively and symbolically." The greatest weight in the test was given to the second and fourth abilities with approximately one-half of the questions designated to discover these abilities. The subject matter fields covered included Biology, Physics, Chemistry, Astronomy, Geology, and Meteorology. The test included sixty items with four multiple choice answers for each. We considered the test valuable for (1) identifying students especially advanced in science abilities, (2) suggesting levels of instruction, and (3) grouping students of similar abilities.

Forty-four students were enrolled in the seventh grade and thirty-three in the eighth, and it was our intention to divide these students into two sections in each grade. Upon completion of the test, the weighted scores in the science and mathematics areas were arranged in rank order and although the composite rank of the two tests was used to select students near the median of the group, in general the two rankings were quite similar. Where there was significant difference, emphasis was placed on the score derived from the science test.

The average school mean of forty-seven schools in grade seven and forty-two in grade eight used for norming purposes by the Educational Testing Service were studied for comparison purposes. The science norm of the school means was 261 for grade seven and 266 for grade eight. The mean for our seventh grade group was 272 and only ten students were below 261. When the groups were separated on a basis of this test, group "A" had a mean score of 280 and Group "B" 263. Group "A" of the eighth grade had a mean average of 278 compared to the 266 norm and group "B" 268. It was interesting to note that even the "B" groups were above the norms. Similar variations were noted for mathematics and a recent comparison of average means of California Association of Independent Schools in the areas of Reading and Listening showed our "A" groups to be highly rated. It should be pointed out also that the average IQ as determined by the Otis Group Test was 132 for the seventh "A" group and 127 for the eighth "A".

At the end of the first six weeks an appraisal was made of the performance of each student and as a result, three students in each grade were shifted from one section to the other. With the exception of one student, the shifts involved students who had scored near the median in the original evaluation.

It was our contention that when it had been determined that the student had the basic abilities for beginning the program, he should then be allowed and urged to proceed at his own ability and interest level. He also should not be restricted by conventional grade levels and practices but should be urged to progress at the fastest pace possible. We also believe that both the normal and the accelerated groups must be taught similarly in certain areas where there were common abilities. While increased stress was being placed on the two mentioned subject fields, students in both sections were required to complete the other school requirements in English, History, Foreign Language, Music, Shop or Art, and physical education. In the Francis W. Parker School, all students are required to study either French or Spanish beginning at the third grade. Latin is offered at the ninth grade level and about one-third of the class carries both Latin and one of the above two mentioned languages.

In the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades, the course of study covers a survey of the main fields of science including the areas of astronomy, atomic energy, meteorology, chemistry, geology, physiology, genetics, biology, physics, (including heat, sound, electricity and machines), aeronautics, embryology, and photography.

TEACHING METHODS

The teaching method used to cover these subjects varies with the grade and section level and while both sections of a grade may cover the same general subject, the detail and advancement of the study is dependent on the interest and ability level as determined by the sections. In many instances, individual students are far in advance of the remainder of the section and are studying more advanced work, something that is possible because of the size of the classes involved. Very often, students are at least two grade levels above the usual in subject matter content, a likely situation, since the section is very much above the normal group in ability and "I.Q."

To stimulate and maintain interest in the science program, the teacher uses a variety of procedures in the classroom. Demonstrations before the class, with or without the students depending on the nature of the demonstration, the philosophical premise being that these age groups learn best by observing rather than by the lecture or through reading. It must be emphasized that the two latter methods are also used. The philosophy of the present teacher, Mr. Robert Taylor, is based on creating interest and inspiring the student to pursue fields of a scientific nature on his own, believing this to be of more value than the memorizing of subject matter or through "busy work."

While advanced mathematics is being taught in the regular mathematics class, every possible opportunity for coordination with science is observed. For example, a practical application was made of the formula $t = 2\pi \sqrt{l/g}$ by eighth and ninth grade students by setting up an experiment with pendulums. This would appear to be a rather complicated formula and experiment for the average student of this grade, but the experiment was used to discover to what level the students were able to progress. Another example of the coordination was in the field of electricity when formulae and experiments were indicated for explaining Ohm's Law, resistances in series and parallel and transformer problems and also for determining the cost of electricity using the Kilowatt hour formulae.

PROJECT TYPES

Individual projects are being carried on both at home and in the classroom. Two eighth grade students are building continuous wave oscillators and the section is constructing a Taylorcraft airplane on a one-fourth scale. A seventh grader is working at a chemistry level of at least high school standards. This same group will study Biology including the dissection of frogs and in general will be at a stage much more advanced than usually expected of students of the indicated grade level. The atomic energy knowledge and understanding of the group would more than match that of most graduating high school students.

It was discovered early that the regular science books for grades seven, eight and nine were much too elementary to challenge the advanced groups and had not more advanced materials been used, the interest and enthusiasm for Science would have been lost and the study would have become a routine class procedure.

While science has always been an integral part of the curriculum, the procedures indicated here have been employed during the current year for the first time. Science is taught in all grades with special emphasis from the third grade through the ninth. The inception of the program has met with overwhelming approval of parents and students and plans are being formulated for initiating the same type of program in the sixth grade in the next school year and the following year in grade five. A complete rebuilding of the laboratory has been effected largely through a substantial donation from the Mothers' Club of the school. A photographic dark room has been added to the regular laboratory facilities. Additional equipment will be added during the coming months in order to meet the growing demands of the program. Of major importance has been the use of the science library in stimulating and maintaining student interest. Considerable materials have been donated by major manufacturing corporations as well as such organizations as the San Diego Blood Bank. It is hoped that as progress is shown and results indicated that other contributions will be available. Consultants have been furnished by some corporations and many assembly speakers have been from the science fields.

FUTURE PROGRAMS

One additional feature is projected for the future. It is planned that an inexperienced teacher candidate may be employed to not only assist in the program but also to gain valuable class experience under the supervision of a master teacher. When such an addition can be made, the program can be broadened to include more grades and sections. We hope also that more scholarship funds may be available in order that superior students who might not otherwise be able to take advantage of an accelerated science program may have that opportunity.

The deciding factor in any successful educational program is the presence of a master teacher, one who is an expert in his field, has a knowledge of teaching techniques, and above all has consuming interest in and enjoyment of working with children. It has been our good fortune to have such a person to initiate this pilot program in the Francis W. Parker School.

SCIENCE AT GEORGE SCHOOL

BY WILLIAM S. BURTON

Chairman of the Science Dept.

The Science Department at George School is composed of five men who work together as a team in the development of departmental aims and objectives, and take a broad, cultural view of science education without favoring one subject matter field over another.

Using the study of the fundamental beliefs and concepts of science, it is the aim of the department to lead the student to develop an active philosophy of life based on a reservoir of Christian ideals which will give him the strength to deal with life as he finds it, and to be a contributing, constructive member of a democratic society. We find ourselves in opposition to those movements which tend to popularize science in order that we may train more and better scientists in competition with Russia's emphasis on technical education. We prefer to emphasize the need for scientists to raise world standards of living, and the opportunities for lives of service in scientific occupations.

In order to implement this philosophy we have stated the following departmental objectives:

1. To give the student the information and attitudes which are necessary for understanding and living in the world of nature.
2. To show the place of science in the development of our present social order, and the responsibility for this development which it imposes on science and scientists.
3. To develop an awareness of God in the universe.
4. To acquaint the student with the scientific method, and to emphasize its use in the solution of problems, both social and scientific.
5. To awaken and nurture possible vocational and avocational interests, and to give a foundation, both aesthetic and factual, for their further development.

In the 9th grade, rather than giving a conventional course in general science which would be a mere repetition and expansion of previous grade school work, we are developing a hybrid course, in cooperation with the Social Studies Department, which seeks to show the relation of science to man's social development. This course is both a social history of man and a survey of man's major achievements in science. The course is required of all 9th grade students.

One of the distinguishing features of George School is its 'Sequence Curricula' in which students of similar interests and aptitudes are grouped together in order to foster continuity, breadth, and depth in their classroom work during their last three years of secondary education. The 'NS' (Natural Science) Sequence is composed of boys and girls who have shown a strong interest in scientific subjects, are capable of thinking in quantitative, mathematical terms, and, in general, have expressed interest in scientific vocations. This is a 'high aptitude' sequence for students capable of rigorous thinking, and able to handle courses considerably more difficult than the usual high school level.

In the 10th grade, this group takes a course in chemistry which seeks to give a broad, cultural appreciation for the structure of the physical world, emphasizing modern atomic theory, and the nature of chemical reactions. It also serves as the foundation course for 11th grade biology, and stresses the chemical nature of living organisms.

The 11th grade biology course, with its strong foundation laid in 10th grade chemistry, is able to attain sufficient depth and breadth to prepare many NS students to qualify for the 'Advanced Placement Program of the College Entrance Examination Board. Considerable emphasis is placed on human biology, covering genetics, heredity, reproduction, etc., so that the student may better understand himself.

The 12th grade physics course is a part of the new high school physics program being developed by the Physical Science Study Committee, sponsored originally by the National Science Foundation, and administered by the Department of Sponsored Research of MIT. (The program is now jointly sponsored by NSF, The Ford Foundation, The Sloan Foundation, and The Fund for the Advancement of Education.) The Chairman of the George School Science Department joined the PSSC in April of 1957, and has worked continuously with the committee since that time.

This new physics program is entirely in keeping with the departmental philosophy, and builds on the 10th and 11th grade courses in science and mathematics. It seeks (1) to plan a course of study in which the major developments in physics, up to the present time, are presented as a logical and integrated whole, and (2) to present physics as an intellectual and cultural pursuit which is part of present day human activity and achievement. George School is one of eight schools which are making use of the PSSC materials during a developmental year prior to an extended introduction of the program through NSF Institutes, and expected large scale adoption of the course. To date, the course exceeds the expectations of the PSSC. Students are excited by the new approach which emphasizes physical phenomena rather than technological application, and leads them, through scientific methods, to arrive at basic concepts of the physical universe.

Throughout the NS Sequence science courses there is a continuity of thought, philosophy, and purpose. Without studied integration, each course builds on or for the others. There is a continued emphasis on laboratory work, with the laboratory used as a place where the student learns techniques of problem solution rather than going through a prescribed procedure of directed activity. The sequence of courses provides an educational experience, rich in breadth and depth, which has proven itself to be good college preparation.

In addition to the NS Sequence courses, we also offer courses in Chemistry, Biology, and Physics to students in "Division E", the exploratory curriculum which presents the usual range of college preparatory work for those who do not enter one of the "sequences". Since these courses are not part of a sequence plan, each course must stand by itself without the benefit of foundation courses. They do not offer quite the same breadth or depth of experiences as the NS courses, but the same departmental philosophy governs the content, and the courses provide sound college preparation. (PSSC materials are used in physics.) In this division biology is normally a 10th grade subject, with chemistry in the 11th grade, and physics in the 12th.

The "General Curriculum" students are often interested in science and its technological applications, and we feel that special courses in biology, chemistry, and physics for this group are of great importance. These courses are not just watered down versions of the college preparatory classes, but are carefully planned courses, based on selected materials which have proven to be of significance to the student who is not capable of the abstract, mathematical reasoning inherent in the work expected of college preparatory students. For the General Curriculum student, science is related to problems of everyday living, and he is taught to use scientific reasoning in the solution of his daily problems. He is also given laboratory work, but the activities are more definitely directed, and more practical in nature. He is helped to understand the everyday world in which he lives, and to live in it more constructively.

We often think that the General Curriculum courses are the most significant part of our work. For these students George School is likely to be terminal education. This is their last opportunity for formal study of an increasingly complicated environment, and we are responsible, to a large extent, for their adjustment to it.

By presenting science courses at three distinct levels George School attempts to meet the needs of all of its students for orientation to and understanding of the world and its social order which has evolved largely through our understanding of the forces of nature.

EXTRACURRICULAR SCIENCE AT ANDOVER

BY JOHN WARD KIMBALL

Physics Dept.

Phillips Andover Academy

The recent focus on science education in this country has resulted in a good deal of self-examination on the part of the secondary schools. Andover, too, has felt the need to reassess both the form and content of her science offerings. Each of the various science courses is being re-examined, and where deficiencies are noted, plans are being drawn to eliminate them. New courses have been created to satisfy the needs of students unusually talented in science and to exploit the gradual merging of what have been, in the past, separate disciplines.

Recognizing that a student's activities outside the classroom may have an equally important effect upon his overall development, we have also reappraised the extracurricular program with special emphasis on the many science-oriented activities. Most of the students, but by no means all, choose to carry on their projects and experiments as members of one or another of the several science clubs which exist at the school. Each of these clubs is under the supervision of a faculty sponsor. In some cases, the success of the group hinges almost completely on the enthusiasm and efforts of this faculty sponsor. In other cases, the club may thrive under the sole direction of its student officers, the sponsor only serving in an advisory capacity.

One of the most active school organizations in the past decade has been the Astronomy Club. Starting with a dismantled, six-inch refracting telescope, which had lain unused for years in the basement of the Science Building, the members have developed an observatory that they can well be proud of. The observatory building was designed by the students, and a large portion of the land clearing, excavating, masonry work, and carpentry, was performed by them. The refractor, with its complex clock drive, was gradually assembled and mounted in position, an exacting and time-consuming task. In addition to visual observation, photographic records can now be made as a result of later additions and modifications to the equipment.

The members have also built a reflecting telescope to increase the flexibility and scope of their program of observations. With two instruments, they are able to provide increased viewing time for the twenty to thirty boys who regularly gather at the observatory on Saturday evenings. Unfortunately, the mounting for the reflecting telescope is out-of-doors, necessitating the assembly and disassembly of the telescope each time it is used.

In addition to their program of observations whenever sky conditions are satisfactory, these young astronomers meet weekly to exchange information and to plan their activities. Usually one of the members is expected to address the group on these occasions on some topic of astronomical interest. From time to time, guest speakers, including Harvard's Dr. Harlow Shapley, have come to Andover to address them. The members have also visited the Harvard observatories in the past.

Twice a year, the members of the Astronomy Club sponsor a special program to interest first-year students. A tour of the club's facilities, observations through the telescopes, and talks on the stars are included. This provides a successful means of introducing new students to the activities of the club and of keeping the roster of enthusiastic members well-filled.

Boys interested in natural history have long received encouragement and assistance from the school. Since 1933, the students have operated an active bird-banding program, banding approximately seven hundred song birds each season to aid the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service in their study of the distribution of the bird population. The school has supported this activity by providing traps, food, and headquarters. Although under nominal faculty supervision, the program has, in actual practice, been organized and operated exclusively by the students.

Bird study, and nature study in general, is greatly facilitated at Andover by the close proximity to the campus of the Monerieff Cochran Sanctuary. This tract of land of over one-hundred acres was set aside in 1929 for the preservation of birds, wild flowers, trees and shrubs as a "natural history laboratory of abiding interest to boys."

Thanks to the generosity of Mr. Thomas Cochran, it was quickly developed into an area of rare beauty. An elaborate program of raising and releasing ducks, geese, quail, pheasant and partridge was instituted. Feeding areas were established throughout the Sanctuary for attracting all types of bird life. A small zoo was created, and also a nursery was established to supply evergreens, rhododendrons, azaleas, laurel, and other shrubs, both native and exotic, for planting in the Sanctuary.

With changing economic conditions, many of the early activities had to be curtailed. However, feeding of the wild life continues, as does the operation of the nursery. The students have recently aided in the establishment of a fern walk, which already boasts thirty-five to forty species, a large percentage of those capable of living in this part of the country. At the present time, a determined effort is being made to secure additional funds to expand the activities in the Sanctuary so that it can play a still larger role in our curricular and extracurricular plan.

Our youthful students of natural history have other outlets for their energies and interests. Several times a term, day trips are sponsored under faculty supervision to enable the boys to explore other locations in this region notable for their wildlife. Marshes, tidal flats, rivers, and the Atlantic coast, all yield myriads of examples of plant and animal life for the young ornithologist, ecologist, or marine zoologist. Other trips are scheduled to visit museums, laboratories, and plant experiment stations.

Those students whose chosen line of scientific study and investigation is not shared with a large group are nevertheless encouraged and supported in their efforts. The Science Experimenters Club serves as a clearing house for information for the many students working independently on scientific project work. The members meet together at dinner about twice a term to exchange information on progress. Younger members are given assistance, if necessary, in setting up a project which is in their field of interest and also practical, considering limitations of equipment and experience. The club regularly makes small grants to various members for the purchase of equipment or supplies which the science departments do not possess and which the individual experimenter might find prohibitively expensive. From time to time, members of the faculty or outside scientists are invited to address the group on some scientific topic. Occasionally, movies of unusual scientific interest are shown.

Through the years, the different activities and projects have been as varied as science itself. In the field of chemistry, students have done significant work on ion-exchange resins, synthetic rubbers, organic and inorganic syntheses, studies of particle size and colloids, and the properties and synthesis of a variety of plastics.

In the field of biology, projects in recent years have encompassed an extraordinary variety of activities, such as the classification and mounting of insect collections made both in this country and abroad, an intensive study of the hormone of insects which controls metamorphosis, and an investigation of the infective agent in certain reptile diseases coupled with a determination of the proper antibiotic therapy for these diseases. At the present time, several members of the club are collaborating on a study of genetic recombination in bacteria. Others have volunteered to try out a large number of new experiments in biology for possible inclusion in the regular curriculum here at Andover as well as at other secondary schools across the country. These experiments, with a definite emphasis on the physiological approach to plants and animals, were created this past summer by a group of secondary school and college biology teachers assembled at Michigan State University. Many of the experiments have not yet been tried under actual laboratory or field conditions, and so, in a sense, these boys are treading new ground and perhaps making a real contribution to secondary science education in general, as well as to their own intellectual development.

In physics, the opportunities for creative work are somewhat more limited for boys at the secondary school level of achievement. Nevertheless, each year finds one or more students engaged in such activities as examining the effects of electrostatic and magnetic fields on cathode rays, or measuring the wave lengths of light emitted from incandescent gases. In those cases where the experimenter is enrolled at the time in one of the physics courses, he may be permitted to substitute his individual project work for a certain number of the regular laboratory exercises. This procedure is not only reasonably sound pedagogy but is also expedient in view of the serious overcrowding which now occurs in the physics laboratory and shop. The demands of increased enrollment have made it extremely difficult to locate space for the youthful experimenter to set up apparatus and leave it assembled between periods of operation. Precisely the same difficulty occurs in the biology and chemistry laboratories where every available bit of locker and counter space is now pre-empted, at least during the major portion of the week, by the regularly scheduled courses.

One field of physics consistently explored by student experimenters is electronics. This field is so large, its opportunities so varied, that there never seems to be a lack of suitable projects for every level of ability and interest. Most of the twenty to thirty students anxious to work in this field join the radio club, which enables them to use this organization's facilities. These include an electronics workshop in the basement of the science building, which is stocked with tools, supplies, and test equipment. Here are produced radio receivers, high-fidelity components, intercommunication equipment, and other electronic gadgets of every size and description. Notable among the current projects are a radio telescope for detecting radio emissions from outer space, a wireless teletypewriter system, and a computer mechanism designed to control a robot. The latter created a great deal of interest while displayed recently at a regional science fair.

In addition to the electronics workshop, the radio club operates W1SW, one of the early "ham" radio stations in this region, which is housed in a building located near the astronomy observatory. Except for the war years, the station has operated regularly since the early twenties. The present equipment includes a transmitter for voice and code transmission, which will soon boast five hundred watts of radiated power. With this instrument, the fully-licensed operators are able to establish contact with any spot in the world. There is also a low-powered transmitter in the shack for use by boys who have secured only a novice license. Each year from four to eight boys are qualified to use one or the other of the transmitters, and they give up many Saturday evening motion picture shows for the privilege and fun of doing so.

To keep a supply of new blood coming into the club, older members sponsor code classes, which meet two or three times a week during the school year. During these sessions, the boys listen to an experienced member "send" international Morse code with a telegraph key and sounder, and then try to duplicate the signals. In this way they gradually gain competence in understanding and transmitting code messages. Activity in this line is particularly intense during the fall term, as the younger members strive to achieve the level of proficiency necessary for them to gain a novice license at Christmastime.

In addition to a minimum level of skill with the Morse code, the boys hoping to gain novice "ham" licenses must present a basic knowledge of electronics and radio theory. Thanks to the efforts of the club's sponsor, this need is filled by theory classes, which meet weekly throughout the year. These classes not only serve to prepare boys for the license examinations but also give other interested members a better understanding of the principles underlying the operation of the equipment which they may be constructing or using.

Even the automotive mechanics club, which has flourished at Phillips Academy for over a decade, gives its members a chance to come to grips with some of the problems inherent in scientific exploration. One of its chief activities centers around a dynamometer, a gift to the school, with which the members try to measure the performance of one or another of the several engines in their possession. The difficulties involved in properly assessing the effect of one variable at a time, such as carburetor adjustment, timing, etc., while all other factors are held constant, may well teach them more about controlled experimentation than long discussions in the classroom. This small group of boys, with their tiny automotive shop, also performs a valuable service for the school in keeping the outboard motors of the crew launches in top condition.

As part of our effort to nurture scientific talent whenever it appears, we have consistently encouraged gifted students to enter science competitions held outside the school. Four of these have achieved nation-wide honors in the annual Westinghouse Science Talent Search, the most recent winner occurring in the present year. In addition to passing a rigorous science aptitude examination, the students also have had to submit reports on a well-conceived and mature scientific project carried out in their spare time. These projects have varied from studies on antibacterial agents to original work in the mathematical field of topology. Other students have successfully entered nearby science fairs with the fruits of their long hours of extracurricular effort in science. One of these recently received high praise from examining officials at the Army's Redstone Arsenal for his ingenuity in designing and building a six-foot, liquid-fueled rocket.

What then are the strengths and weaknesses of these many diverse activities? On the positive side, we hope that participation in them creates a more mature understanding in our students of the essential nature of the scientific process. Unavoidably, our classroom work in science must revolve about the accumulated facts and achievements in science. By active participation in project work, however, the young experimenter may well get a glimpse of the techniques needed to elucidate these facts, and even some of the many hazards to be overcome before the goal is reached. The difficulties in controlling variables not under investigation, the inherent limitations of measuring devices, and the limitations imposed by available apparatus are some of the many factors of which one quickly becomes aware when experimental work in science is undertaken. An acquaintance with these factors is a very important part of education in science.

On the negative side, an increase in school population has strained our science facilities to the point where it is now simply impossible to provide adequate accommodations for the ever-increasing number of boys anxious to do project work. However, plans are already being made to enlarge our science facilities so that once again we can enable our students to pursue their scientific interests as far as their talents and energy permit.

Naturally, we are proud whenever one of our students goes on to join the distinguished group of Andover alumni working in science, but our primary mission is not the production of potential scientists and engineers. We feel, rather, that instruction in the materials and methods of science constitutes one vital segment of a truly liberal education, and that it is a liberal education which will enable tomorrow's leaders to act with wisdom and balance in whatever capacity they may find themselves. Our task is to start young men on this road.

INTEGRATION IN THE TEACHING OF PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY

BY JOHN C. HOGG

The Phillips Exeter Academy*

Educators are being asked to respond to two persistent clarion calls (1) to discover gifted students at an early age and (2) to place more emphasis on the teaching of science. The two calls are not necessarily unrelated. The rapid growth of the integrated course in Exeter reflects its popularity among the student body. It attracts able students into the sciences, stimulates them when they get there, and holds a high proportion of them for three years.

It is now twenty years since the integrated physics-chemistry course was introduced into the Exeter curriculum. The development of this course and the steady increase in its enrollment are probably worth recording, particularly as the new emphasis on science teaching inevitably raises problems similar to those encountered in Exeter when this program was launched.

Twenty years ago, as now, seventeen credits were required for a diploma. These included four years of English, three years of mathematics, two years of Latin, two years of a modern language, a third year of either Latin or a modern language, and one year of history. That is to say, thirteen of the seventeen units were rigid requirements. The remaining four could include advanced English, advanced mathematics, advanced language, additional history, or science. This tight schedule left little opportunity for experimenting in the teaching of science.

To ease this situation the faculty voted, in 1936, to "release" twelve to fifteen selected boys a year from the second year Latin requirement to enable them to embark on a two-year science course. This decision also opened up the possibility of a third year of advanced work in science for these boys. The immediate problem was to devise a suitable course (a two-year sequence) beginning in the 10th grade that would lead to advanced work in the 12th grade. The usual one-year courses in physics and chemistry (the so-called College Board courses) were already offered. But these for obvious reasons were unsuitable—the physics course assumed more mathematics than was offered in the 10th grade; the chemistry course included many concepts which, unless bolstered by physics, would be largely unintelligible at this early stage. The obvious compromise was to draw up a syllabus which included both physics and chemistry, but planned in such a way that the physics would not get beyond the range of the advancing mathematics, and the chemistry would derive the maximum benefit from the physics. Thus a physics-chemistry course (a two-year sequence) was established.

One of the disturbing things about teaching elementary chemistry (as opposed to the teaching of elementary physics) is the large amount of factual material that must be dispensed at the outset. There is far too little opportunity for intellectual exploration. An alert young student may and does ask many questions that must go unanswered because of deficient background. If he is familiar with the phenomenon of vapor pressure some of his questions can be explored even at an early stage, questions such as: Why does the solubility of a gas decrease as the temperature rises? Why do some hydrates lose water vapor and some anhydrous salts pick up water vapor under similar conditions? Why does a dissolved substance raise the boiling point but lower the freezing point of a solution?

Suppose the student asks (as he does) such questions as: Why does zinc react with dilute sulfuric acid? Why must the acid be dilute? Why is carbon dioxide a gas and common salt a solid at ordinary temperatures? The only possible reply is to assure the student that the questions will be answered later in the year when the background has been supplied.

Lack of background is the bane of chemistry teaching, especially to a beginner. The student is probably excited by the wide variety of phenomena he observes but he is rarely intellectually stimulated. He is required to learn too much by rote and he is not encouraged (indeed, he cannot be) to ask How? or Why?

In the second year of the combined course real integration of physics and chemistry can be accomplished. The first "item" in the second year program is electricity, and after electricity the chemistry part of the syllabus is completed. With a background of electricity, ionic chemistry is meaningful and, on the other hand, with an ionic background the chemical effects of a current (usually treated inadequately and inaccurately in elementary physics texts) can be presented in a comprehensive manner.

Still another integration area is the new field of atomic energy. Chemistry students have a knowledge of isotopes and of the make-up of the nuclei of atoms. But the mass-energy relation means very little to the young chemist. To understand the meaning of packing effect and mass loss, a background of work and energy is needed. Moreover, the E of the familiar Einstein equation is measured in ergs, an energy unit not usually mentioned in an elementary chemistry course. In the combined course, however, ergs and even electron-volts have meaning, and the mass energy relationship in nuclear reactions makes sense.

In 1939 the Exeter diploma requirements were radically changed. The Latin requirement was dropped and, among other things, all students were required to take five major courses in the 10th grade. One of the immediate effects of this change was a marked increase in the enrollment of the combined physics-chemistry course, and a corresponding decrease in the separate courses of physics and chemistry. Through the years the increased enrollment in the combined course has been maintained and new instructors have been needed. Today eight of our ten science instructors are engaged in teaching the new course, some in part, others in toto.

The figures show that the total enrollment in the combined course today is considerably higher than in the separate courses of twenty years ago (and this in spite of the drain to the biological science courses not offered twenty years ago). They also reveal that ten times as many students are enrolled in the combined course as in the separate courses of physics and chemistry. How can we account for this striking shift in emphasis?

During the years 1940-1950 the numbers in the combined and separate courses were comparable. Common objective tests were devised to enable us to compare achievement in the different groups. The tests were taken by all students in the combined course and also by the physics or chemistry students after they had covered the corresponding parts of the syllabus. The results of the tests given over a number of years showed the "combined" students to be markedly superior although they were in general a year younger than students in the separate sciences. Similar differences were observed in the results of the CEEB examinations in physics and chemistry. That is to say, students who had taken the combined course had, in general, a higher ranking than those who had not.

The statistical evidence of these examinations simply confirmed the impressions of instructors familiar with the two approaches. Is it possible to be specific and to isolate the favorable factors in the combined course? Here we are on debatable ground but there is general agreement that the following four items are contributing causes:

(1) The sciences of physics and chemistry are interdependent, chemistry showing the greater degree of dependence. A student with a background of both sciences instinctively uses one to assist the other. That is to say, one science is enriched by the other.

(2) The combined course is graded in difficulty. It is far more flexible than the separate courses. The mathematics, for example, can be steadily stepped up through a two-year period. In other words, the combined course is easier than the separate courses.

(3) There is constant cross fertilization in the combined course. This is inevitable when the instructor teaches both sciences. For example, heat of neutralization is measured in calories or B.t.u.'s; an ammeter can be calibrated by an electrochemical cell; an absorption spectrum is associated with quanta and energy levels in the atom. Cross fertilization produces a more mature student.

(4) The combined course is more interesting to teach than the separate courses. There is more variety in classroom teaching and demonstrations, and also in the laboratory work. And presumably if it is more interesting to teach, it is the more stimulating approach for the student.

There is yet a more potent reason for urging the combined course—it makes possible the teaching of advanced science courses in school. If both elementary physics and chemistry are required for admission to an advanced course of physics or chemistry (and this is a reasonable prerequisite) it is inevitable that the serious study of science begin in the 10th grade.

In Exeter roughly 75 percent of the "combined" students take the course in grades ten and eleven; 25 percent take it in grades eleven and twelve. Of those who finish in grade eleven, a relatively large number (thirty or so) wish to pursue the subject further. Here then is a group of able boys, interested in science, and prepared for advanced work; they constitute a potential source of future scientists. Should a school offer advanced courses in physics and chemistry, even at the risk of early specialization? We believe that a school has an obligation to its gifted students and that they should be stretched intellectually to the limit of their capacity. Boys in these advanced courses take the advanced placement examinations. They are usually dealt with sympathetically by the colleges and placed in courses consonant with their ability and achievement.

Those of us who have taught the combined course are convinced that this approach is sound pedagogy. But it is far more than this. The combined approach may be one way of solving the national problem of greater emphasis on the teaching of science in high schools.

SCIENCE PROJECTS AT MILLBROOK

BY EDWARD PULLING

The Millbrook School

I have been asked by Mr. Sargent to describe some of the special projects connected with the study of science at Millbrook School. This I am glad to do in the hope that they may be of interest to the readers of "The Handbook of Private Schools."

First, let me explain that all the projects I shall mention stem directly from the imaginative teaching and contagious enthusiasm of three members of our faculty: Frank W. Trevor (the head of our science department) in the field of natural science, Neale E. Howard in the physical sciences, and the late Xavier Prum in physics. We are deeply indebted to them for whatever of significance has been accomplished at Millbrook in the teaching of science.

Second, I should like to make clear that all the projects have grown out of and are closely related to the regular courses in the science curriculum:

Biology—a required subject in the ninth or tenth grades
Advanced Biology—open to boys in the tenth or eleventh grades who have shown unusual ability or interest in the regular biology course

Chemistry } —elective courses in the eleventh and Physics } twelfth grades; considered essential for prospective science majors in college

Senior Science — designed for students in the two upper years who wish to approach science from a wider standpoint than is possible in the fields of chemistry or physics. It includes the study of astronomy, meteorology and navigation.

Third, before referring specifically to the Millbrook science projects which may be somewhat unique, I want to summarize the objectives of all our science teaching, which I assume are similar to those of other secondary schools:

- (a) to help students acquire the habit of careful reasoning based on actual observation and experimentation,
- (b) to give them an appreciation of the wonders of the physical and living world,
- (c) to introduce them to some of the scientific concepts upon which so much modern thought is based,
- (d) to interest students with scientific aptitude in science as a vocation and to provide them with the elementary training necessary for more advanced work in college.

Now as to the projects themselves, which supplement and vitalize the regular classroom and laboratory work.

OPERATION MOONWATCH

A project that seems to have special current interest and significance is our participation in "Operation Moonwatch," the observation of satellites during the International Geophysical Year.

In recent years many boys have developed a keen interest in astronomy. This resulted at first in the grinding and polishing of small telescopic mirrors and subsequently in the construction of a 12½ inch reflector of high magnifying and resolving power. Originally this was used in a temporary wooden telescope; now it is housed in a regular observatory built entirely by the boys under Mr. Howard's direction. It has cinder block walls, a cement floor and a converted aluminum silo top as a dome. The telescope is driven, to follow the stars, by a one-twentieth horsepower motor which originally was used to open and close the drafts on a furnace. The gear system was worked out in the physics class. Recently the observatory's equipment has been augmented by the valuable gift of five "Quaester" telescopes from the Research Corporation. When "Operation Moonwatch" started, the Millbrook Observatory was designated by the Government as an observer station for this area. A specially trained group of boys sends reports direct to the Smithsonian Observatory in Cambridge, Mass. Preparation for carrying out this important assignment necessitated the building—by the boys—of eight small portable telescopes from parts of binoculars. Each is mounted over a mirror set on the top of a camera tripod.

The dramatic advent of "Sputnik" electrified our team into action. After many hours of rigorous training and patient observation they were rewarded by repeated views of the satellite and subsequently by seeing their findings included in the recently published official report of the Smithsonian Institute. I think the value of this experience in scientific training for the Moonwatch team will not need explaining.

There are two other projects being carried out for the Government.

METEOROLOGY

One is in the field of meteorology, a science of rapidly growing importance in the new air and missile age. To stimulate an interest in this subject a U. S. weather station was founded at Millbrook some years ago by the physics department. The School's meteorologists take observations twice daily and make reports to the following agencies:

- (1) Temperature and precipitation data to the U. S. Weather Bureau at Albany;
- (2) Special flood condition reports to the U. S. Weather Station at Bradley Field, Conn., which operates a flood control warning system;
- (3) Temperature and precipitation reports to the Agricultural Research Section of the Department of Agriculture;
- (4) Weekly weather records to the local paper (Millbrook Round Table).

In addition, the meteorology group is cooperating with the Agricultural Research Section of the Department of Agriculture in measuring the rainfall run-off in our watershed. The A. R. S. has built a special spillway on the dam of our pond for this purpose and provided the School with the necessary measuring instruments.

Many other instruments used by our "weather bureau" have been loaned us by the Government, but others are part of the physics department's equipment, such as the barograph, a thermograph, and three-cup anemometer and a weather vane with electrically operated dials.

Occasionally our meteorologists' records are of value not only to the U. S. Weather Bureau but to the School and to neighbors as well. A few years ago, for instance, the data on "degree-days" proved very useful to the engineers who designed the heating system for a new dormitory. At another time a neighbor needed evidence of unusually heavy rainfall in connection with a lawsuit about farm land. The Millbrook weathermen produced their records, which were accepted without question as evidence.

BIRD BANDING

The third project carried out for the Government is the bird banding station, which operates under the auspices of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior in Washington. An average of nine boys share the responsibility for this project. Usually they work in pairs, opening the traps in the morning, weather permitting, and closing them in the late afternoon when birds caught during the day are banded. Records are entered on an individual card for each bird and transcripts are forwarded to the Fish and Wildlife Service, which acts as a clearing house and notifies each banding station when any of the birds banded by it are trapped elsewhere.

Among the problems bird banders help to solve, those dealing with the distribution and migration of North American birds are of primary importance. In addition, individual boys specialize in investigations about dispersal, ecological preferences, family groups, bird personality, etc. As reports of banded birds caught elsewhere are received and as station records are checked for the same birds trapped in successive seasons, the bird bander soon gets the feeling that he is an effective factor in a nation-wide organization. Occasionally there is the thrill of an unusual record as that established by a snow bunting banded here one January and recovered three months later on board a British convoy vessel beyond Iceland. The Millbrook bird banders take a vicarious pride in the achievement of this snow bunting because it furnished one of the rare case histories to substantiate the theory that our American snow buntings migrate to Scandinavia to breed.

THE ZOO

The oldest and most important of all the science projects is the Zoo. From the moment that Mr. Trevor arrived to teach biology here twenty-one years ago fresh out of Cornell in an old station wagon overflowing with an assortment of wild animal pets, it was a sure thing that a Millbrook zoo was in prospect. In fact, it was only a matter of weeks before the nature study enthusiasts had stripped to the waist and were hard at work on the foundation of their first building. The original zoo has been a center of amazing interest and activity through the years. The personnel of mammals, birds, reptiles and tropical fish changes, but the enthusiasm of the boys who care for them continues. Aside from the importance of the Zoo for purposes of scientific observation, taking care of pets is in itself a valuable experience in a boy's life. Few other activities provide a better definition of responsibility or demand more patient and consistent effort.

The next building to be constructed 'over at the Zoo' by Mr. Trevor's cohorts was the greenhouse. This makes possible plant experiments and observation during the winter. It also provides tables in the School dining room with a constant supply of flowering plants.

More recently the boys have been at work on the 'Bird House,' where the School's extensive collection of ornithological specimens is to be displayed in 'habitat' groups. The area around these buildings is gradually being converted into a wild life sanctuary and botanical preserve. The important thing to note about this whole project is that all the buildings were actually constructed and are operated by the boys themselves.

It is not surprising that after studying natural science in this manner a number of Millbrook alumni have chosen a career in medicine, research, conservation or animal husbandry; or that a much larger group have retained a keen avocational interest in some aspect of the subject.

In conclusion, I think it should be mentioned that all these science projects—as well as various projects connected with other departments—are carried out as part of our Community Service Plan, in which every boy, every year, is entrusted by the Student Council with actual responsibility for the functioning of some School activity. Serving on the Zoo Committee or the Bird Banding Squad or as a Meteorologist or as a "Moonwatcher" not only involves shouldering responsibility for the good of the school community but also, in many cases, stimulates his enthusiasm for the study of science—as a profession or as a hobby.

A HUMANITIES COURSE

BY JOSEPH E. BROWN

Verde Valley School

In 1957 the Verde Valley School enlarged its curriculum to include a new course which, through the classroom, should help to bring into the lives of the students those values and principles upon which this school has been founded. This new course, called Humanities, is offered for college credit, and is compulsory for entering Freshmen and for new 10th graders.

In accord with the philosophy of the Verde Valley School, the main goal of this course is to assist in developing within the student an understanding of, and appreciation for, the fundamental principles underlying the cultures and civilizations of the world, past and present. It is felt that today, in our world of growing tensions and crises, it is imperative for the establishing of a truly united world, that there be awakened within our youth the realization that they are all citizens of a world community, and that as such they have the responsibility to understand their neighbor. This understanding should reach deep into fundamentals, for here underlying the surface differences, there is very often found a common ground or Essence, which is always the greatest force for uniting peoples. As the student begins to recognize this unifying force operating outside of himself, so it is hoped that he will be stimulated to search out this Power within himself, and thus will find his true Self.

To work towards the achievement of these goals the course is organized in the following manner. The first unit of work is devoted to areas of a theoretical nature. The concept of race, for example, is studied, and it is shown why it is unscientific to think of race in terms of superiority or inferiority. Concepts such as primitive culture vs. civilization are also discussed and debated in class. These theoretical concepts are later applied to a survey of the aboriginal cultural areas of the Americas, and these studies are so timed that they help to orientate the student for the annual eight day field trip which the school takes to the Indian reservations of the Southwest. In thus extending class work into the field, what was once possibly only theoretically understood, can now be actually integrated within the student, to become a real and living experience. In similar manner the Indian, Colonial, and contemporary cultures of Mexico are studied in class prior to a three week field trip into that country.

In the second semester the cultural areas of Africa are studied, and some attention here is given to contemporary problems which have arisen from the impact between two cultures manifesting very different values. In our studies of the Near East much attention is given to the Islamic religion, and to the great accomplishments and developments which this religion is responsible for throughout very large areas. Later in the year Hinduism is studied in relation to its cultural forms in India, and also Buddhism is examined, especially in the form as it now exists in Tibet. Toward the end of the year Confucianism and Taoism are studied in relation to China, and Shinto and Zen Buddhism are discussed in relation to the people and life of Japan.

Although much emphasis is placed on the study of religion within cultures, nevertheless this is not presented as is so often done in courses in comparative religions, where all too often the goal is to show the superiority of one particular form over another. Rather it is believed that the material should be presented as objectively as possible, as if the teacher actually belongs to whatever culture he happens to be discussing, and the student is then free to draw his own conclusions.

In order to enrich the learning experience, and to encourage an appreciation within the student for the people or culture under discussion, the course makes much use of slides, films, film strips, recordings of music, and actual artifacts. It is felt that the student is able to have a more intimate contact with the idea or subject under discussion, when he is able to have before him a concrete form which reflects the abstract idea. Wherever possible visiting speakers from the particular culture under discussion are invited to lecture, or lead an informal discussion with the class. Thus the students have had contact with American Indian priests of several tribes, Hindus from India, Muslims from the Near East, Taoists from China, and a Buddhist once came from Korea. It is our feeling that these personal contacts are of the greatest importance, and it has been noted that they immediately stimulate the interest of the student.

For the purposes of this course it is also felt that the teacher should have the broadest possible traveling experiences, so that when he talks of the life or thought of a foreign people, he is able to bring them to life, and thus stimulate the appreciation and understanding of the student, because he has had this first hand contact.

This course is still young, and it is thus possibly too early to state how positive the results have been. One thing does seem to be very clear, however, and that is that a course of this type, for students at this open and flexible age, may very well bear more fruit, and contribute more towards the development of a responsible and intelligent world citizen, than if the course were given later during his college years when opinions are already well fixed.

In our world today of great scientific developments, it is felt that a course of this type is of the greatest importance, in that it stresses those values and qualities by which peoples have lived, and recognizes the dignity and worth of the human individual. Thus a more balanced point of view may very well be developed, and the individual may become a more complete person.

INDEPENDENT SCHOOLS AND INDEPENDENCE

BY CHARLES MERRILL
The Commonwealth School

Two years ago, when working in Paris, I attended a convention of French teachers discussing the problems of adult education. At this convention there also spoke two Russian students, in fact, just about the only two Soviet students in the whole of Western Europe. One was an elegant young man, Princetonian in appearance and manner, Anatoli Bessarabov, from the University of Odessa. The other, more like a member of the University of Missouri, came from Moscow. Now early 1956 was a period of greater hope than early 1958, and our French hosts at the opening lunch rather self-consciously placed the three of us at the same table, where we became acquainted over a laborious conversation about Russian and American literature. In the course of the convention, which took place out near Versailles, I had the chance to chauffeur both of them back to the city, and Bessarabov mentioned how unusual it was for Russians and Americans to be able to exchange ideas together and that probably this could take place only in Paris. Going on from here, I invited them both to have lunch at my house and to meet my family.

At this lunch we discussed impressions of both American and Russian students at the Sorbonne. The surprising conclusion was how similar were both our reactions in the face of the lonely, isolated, almost atomized lives of students at a French university. We were trying then to find more points in common than of difference and were willing to share a certain terminology without going too deeply into the meanings behind the words. Therefore, it seemed possible to say that the student at the University of Odessa, as well as at the University of Missouri, led a more democratic life than the students of Paris, if one interpreted democracy by the narrow but not unreasonable definition of a system that aimed to satisfy the people's needs or the people's will, even if the people's will was not necessarily carried out by the people themselves. At least in the group life that linked the individual to the university, in the sense of common purpose between what one studied in the classroom and what one hoped to do outside, there appeared a similarity of approach between Russians and Americans missing at the Sorbonne.

Now this discussion of Russo-American democracy was obviously questionable even if at that time its real purpose was to build up human contact with those two young men I never would have met any place else. My lack of real success became obvious when I tried to sketch in the differences between what one would call popular democracy as opposed to liberal. The liberal belief that government exists not merely to serve the people's will but to express the feelings of individuals who may interpret in their own way or even, within certain limits, deny the popular will, was an idea that made no sense at all or seemed simply rationalization of anarchic selfishness. My effort to describe the American system of parochial and independent education combined with state education as an expression of democracy was like praising the use of cobwebs to stop bleeding.

For the French themselves, our educational system is confusing enough, so much more and so much less democratic than their own. It is not true that the French Minister of Education can look at his calendar and tell exactly which theorem every fourteen year old geometrician in France is studying on that day, — but it is almost true. The freedom of a local school board to hire its own director, pass on the choice of textbooks, or decide whether the policy of its high school will be to justify the UN or to extol old-fashioned patriotism is hard for them to imagine. A system of private education where each school has freedom to arrange its own curriculum, subject only to the acceptance given its graduates by the universities, heads straight for chaos. On the other hand, American timidity before the expression of conflicting ideas has less place in France where Communists and conservative patriots, Socialists and Catholics will work together in the same lycée. These teachers will attack the falseness of the others' beliefs, but they will also be proud that only in France does such an atmosphere of belligerent freedom exist.

When one realizes how rare is our American concept of independent education, the right to set up one's own goals and standards in a profession rigidly governed in most other countries by the Ministry of Education, one can draw two conclusions. The first is our good fortune; the other, perhaps, is our failure to make full use of this privilege.

The purpose of the private school is not to help maintain the status quo by supplying a berth for mediocre children of nice families. The private school should rather be a sign of the health and confidence of a democratic society which permits diversity, in fact, which knows that only in diversity can it grow and stay alive. This potentiality for freedom is ignored where the atmosphere of nice schools is only that of polished conformity or where independent teaching in the handsome ivy-covered buildings is rewarded by salaries thinner even than at the public schools.

The public schools have the duty to teach what the community wants. That is a reasonable belief in a democratic society, but it does not have much to do with either freedom or intellectual distinction. If private schools are to justify themselves, they must be willing to accept the responsibilities that public schools cannot. This means harder work and stiffer challenges to the student whose special abilities give promise of leadership. It means tolerance and aid to the child whose personality fits less well with easy norms. It means a willingness to offer subjects tougher to justify before the school board, not merely stricter classes in physics, our post-Sputnik panacea. If we have fallen behind the Russians, more than our science teaching has been at fault. To recover leadership, we need a total use of our democratic potentialities. That involves study of history, of the backgrounds of Europe and Asia and our own country, not just cheap discussion meetings about this week's magazines. Our children need understanding of music and art and architecture so that they gain some idea of what is civilization and what is their responsibility towards its preservation. They need skill in foreign languages to learn how to speak with other men as equals. And they need some practice in handling the contradictions and paradoxes of ideas. What is man's relationship to the state? What are the demands of religious belief? When religion and patriotism clash, where does the priority lie?

The community, the state, the Pentagon are setting exacting duties upon our schools. Many of these duties should be fulfilled better than we have in the past. Nevertheless, the injunction to render unto Caesar what is Caesar's implies that certain matters are not Caesar's. And where Caesar has no right, whether in demanding a deadly practicality or a patriotism interpreted as unquestioning docility, it becomes the duty of independent schools to show that democracy also means the privilege of saying NO.

A DECENT RESPECT FOR HUMAN INTELLIGENCE

BY GENERAL OMAR N. BRADLEY

*National Chairman,
St. Albans Anniversary Development Program*

The central problem of our time—as I view it—is how to employ human intelligence for the salvation of mankind. It is a problem we have put upon ourselves. For we have defiled our intellect by the creation of such scientific instruments of destruction that we are now in desperate danger of destroying ourselves.

Our plight is critical and with each effort we have made to relieve it by further scientific advance, we have succeeded only in aggravating our peril. As a result, we are now speeding inexorably toward a day when even the ingenuity of our scientists may be unable to save us from the consequences of a single rash act or a lone reckless hand upon the switch of an uninterceptorable missile.

For twelve years now we've sought to stave off this ultimate threat of disaster by devising arms which would be both ultimate and disastrous. This irony can probably be compounded a few more years, or perhaps even a few decades. Missiles will bring anti-missiles, and anti-missiles will bring anti-anti-missiles. But inevitably, this whole electronics house of cards will reach a point where it can be constructed no higher. At that point we shall have come to the peak of this whole incredible dilemma into which the world is shoving itself. And when that time comes there will be little we can do other than to settle down uneasily, smother our fears, and attempt to live in a thickening shadow of death.

Should this situation come to pass, we would have but one single and thin thread to cling to. We call it rationale or reason. We reason that no Government, no single group of men—indeed, not even one willful individual—would be so foolhardy, so reckless, as to precipitate a war which would most surely end in mutual destruction.

This reasoning may have the benefit of logic. But even logic sometimes goes awry. How can we assume that reason will prevail in a crisis when there is ordinarily so little reason among men. To those who would take comfort in the likelihood of an atomic peace to be secured solely by rationale and reason, I would recall the lapse of reason in a bunker under the Reich Chancellery in Berlin. It failed before, it can fail again.

A WAY OUT

Have we already gone too far in this search for peace through the accumulation of peril? Is there any way to halt this trend—or must we push on with new devices until we inevitably come to judgment before the atom?

I believe there is a way out. And I believe it because I have acquired in my lifetime a decent respect for human intelligence. It may be that the problems of accommodation in a world split by rival ideologies are more difficult than those with which we have struggled in the construction of ballistics missiles. But I believe, too, that if we apply to these human problems, the energy, creativity, and the perseverance we have devoted to science, even problems of accommodation will yield to reason. Admittedly, the problem of peaceful accommodation in the world is infinitely more difficult than the conquest of space, infinitely more complex than a trip to the moon. But if we will only come to the realization that it must be worked out—whatever it may mean even to such sacred traditions as absolute national sovereignty—I believe that we can somehow, somewhere, and perhaps through some as yet undiscovered world thinker and leader, find a workable solution.

I confess that this is as much an article of faith as it is an expression of reason. But this, my friends, is what we need, faith in our ability to do what must be done. Without that faith we shall never get started. And until we get started, we shall never know what can be done. If I am sometimes discouraged, it is not by the magnitude of the problem, but by our colossal indifference to it.

I am unable to understand why—if we are willing to trust in reason as a restraint on the use of a ready-made, ready-to-fire bomb—we do not make greater, more diligent and more imaginative use of reason and human intelligence in seeking an accord and compromise which will make it possible for mankind to control the atom and banish it as an instrument of war. This is the real and—indeed—the most strenuous challenge to man's intellect today. By comparison with it, the conquest of space is of small significance. For until we learn how to live together, until we rid ourselves of the strife that mocks our pretensions of civilization, our adventures in science—instead of producing human progress—will continue to crowd it with greater peril.

We can compete with a Sputnik and probably create bigger and better Sputniks of our own. But what are we doing to prevent the Sputnik from evolving into just one more weapons system. And when are we going to muster an intelligence equal to that applied against the Sputnik and dedicate it to the preservation of this Satellite on which we live.

How long—I would ask you—can we put off salvation? When does humanity run out?

I would like to believe that we are addressing ourselves to this problem of how to make human intelligence work for humanity in just such an undertaking as the one that occupies us here this evening. We are met here with a common concern for the educational welfare of our children. In our endeavor to provide more adequately for their needs, we have departed from the tradition of public schooling. In a sense, therefore, we might be said to have engaged in an act of social protest.

It is a protest against the parsimonious mistreatment of our public school system—not only by this community, but by communities almost everywhere. It is a protest against the exploitation of dedicated teachers who must reconcile themselves to a marginal existence for the privilege of following their calling. It is a protest against that slovenly lack of intellectual discipline we have tolerated in our nation's educational institutions. And finally, it is a protest against that anti-intellectual prejudice which appears to disparage learning.

UNCOMMON OPPORTUNITY

We have come—most of us—to St. Albans because St. Albans can provide those qualities of education that so many schools lack. We have come because we have found at St. Albans a decent respect for human intelligence—and because we want to engender that same respect in our children.

Here—as in schools anywhere—that respect can be taught only by teachers who are qualified to teach it. For a school is not so much an institution as it is a band of teachers, joined in dedication, in professional competence and in the desire to help humanity lift itself up by making better use of the infinite capacity of human intellect.

There is no calling more worth while than this. The teacher is the real soldier of Democracy. Others can defend it, but only he can make it work. He carries the guidon of human progress in his hands, for it is he alone who can cultivate the extraordinary intelligence that will be required to extricate this world from its accumulating burden of peril.

THE ROLE OF TEACHER

With such a role as this, the mission of a teacher is a proud one. And we who are the parents and grandparents, or graduates, are most fortunate to have found in St. Albans a body of masters who characterize these noble purposes and who enrich the lives of our children by them. I know that I speak for all of you tonight when I call upon the masters to hear our gratitude and know our respect for their dedication, their devotion, their compassion, and—above all—their diligent labors in the behalf of our children. I only hope that our children will show themselves worthy of this privilege by devoting themselves with equal earnestness to learning and to the welfare of the community of mankind in their later lives.

Meanwhile, we parents and alumni have incurred some present responsibilities of a very real and practical nature. For while protesting against some of the abuses that have caused us to turn from the public schools, we have nevertheless condoned some of those very same abuses in our exploitation of the masters at St. Albans.

The word is a hard one. When I chose it, I also flinched. But little though we may like it, we've all been accessories to a form of hypocrisy in the payment of masters. And the best way to correct this situation may be to start with an unpleasant admission. The salary scale for our masters—like that of the teachers in public schools—is better fitted to servitude than it is to the public service. Teachers may not live on bread alone, but they cannot subsist on devotion. If we are to encourage a decent respect for human intelligence, we might best begin by respecting the value—as well as the intelligence of our teachers and reward them fairly for it.

A school such as ours—I believe—can be justified socially in a democratic society only if it maintains such rigorous standards of learning that it serves as a stimulus to all others. Unless it can pioneer in, and propagate those higher standards, it will serve only to produce an educated aristocracy among those who can meet its extraordinary qualifications and whose parents can afford the cost.

These standards begin with a standard of teaching—and a standard of teacher. St. Albans, fortunately, has been able to meet those community obligations of leadership, but it has done so too much at the expense of its teachers. Our masters have—in effect—helped to subsidize St. Albans' higher standards by foregoing just compensation for themselves. I am confident that none of you wish to be a party to this inequity any more than I do. If we are to have a St. Albans for our children, and if we are to make this St. Albans a beacon for the community's schools, then we must be prepared to bear the cost of these standards according to our means and provide more adequately for our teachers. I would hope that with these increased inducements for qualified teachers, we might—in some small way, here in this capital of the nation—testify to the dignity in which we hold the teachers of our children and make the world a little better for those who believe that the cultivation of intellect is the highest calling of any man.

STANDARDS SET

Our nation is crowded with extraordinary children of extraordinary intellect, few of whom have the opportunity to cultivate their talents in an atmosphere as stimulating as that of St. Albans. Many of them are permitted to clot in indifferent school systems. As a result, each year we suffer an appalling waste in the very human resources on which our salvation depends.

What we are able to do here at St. Albans is very little in terms of the total national problem. But we can hope that we may—in some small way—enlighten the problem, set a standard and encourage so great a respect for human intelligence here as to communicate greater respect for it everywhere.

All of us learn from our children. And as we watch them grow in a school as demanding in its intellectual disciplines as St. Albans, we come more and more to the realization that the human mind is a noble thing, that the capacities of human intellect are boundless. Call it faith—if you will—but believe in those capacities and you will believe also in the ability of an educated mankind to discipline itself so securely as to put an end to this peril with which the world is now encompassed—even its regions of outer space.

In all the great undertakings of mankind, in the beginning there was belief, belief in what had to be done, could—as a matter of fact—be done if only man would persevere in the doing. If enough of us believe strongly enough in the ability of intelligent human beings to get together on some basis of a just accord, we might somehow, somewhere, in some way and under some auspices make a start on it.

Unless we soon get started, it may be too late. We can't sit about waiting for some felicitous accident of history that may somehow make the world all right. Time is running against us, and it is running against us with the speed of a Sputnik.

If we're going to save ourselves from the instruments of our own intellect, we had better soon get ourselves under control and begin making the world safe for living.

DESCRIPTIVE TEXT

LEADING PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Individual Statistical and Critical Descriptions

Representative and important primary and secondary schools are listed and described here. They are selected impartially on the basis of their educational contribution and do not pay for space in these write-ups. All facts have been carefully checked. We hereby express our gratitude to those contributing data to us.

The schools are arranged geographically by states and grouped alphabetically under cities and towns to bring neighboring ones together. The order follows from New England down the east coast to the south central states, and from the Great Lake states through the Rockies to the north pacific states, California, and Hawaii.

For listings and descriptions with objective information on post secondary schools, consult Junior Colleges and Specialized Schools and Colleges; for special schools, the Directory for Exceptional Children; and for summer programs, the Guide to Summer Camps;—all separately published in the Sargent Handbook Series.

This small, home-like school, which accepts students throughout the year, provides an individualized program for boys who are behind in their academic work, who may be socially maladjusted, but who recognize that they need help and are willing to work. The school does not accept boys with severe emotional disturbances, or retarded boys. A feature of the program is three months of travel when the entire school body transfers to a foreign country. Recent visits have been made to Mexico and the Caribbean, while during the camp season a month is spent on an island refuge in Canada.

SO. BERWICK, ME. Pop 1830. B&M R. R. Equidistant from Boston and Portland, and 5 mi NE of Dover, N. H. Rt. U.S. 4. Berwick, on the Salmon Falls River, is a quiet town in southernmost Maine. The old Academy in the town, associated with Sarah Orne Jewett, has graduated presidents of five colleges.

The oldest school in Maine, the Academy holds a charter, signed by Gov. John Hancock when Maine was a possession of Massachusetts, as an institution of higher learning. Long serving local needs and with preponderant day enrollment, the board of trustees has, with the advent in 1957 of Mr. Kerr (who came from Gov. Dummer Academy and the Gilman School), emphasized the college preparatory curriculum and re-established the boarding department for boys through acquisition of additional property and facilities.

Attracting students from families of moderate means along the entire eastern seaboard, with half the boarding pupils from out-of-state, Gould offers equipment and advantages made possible by generous benefactions, and unusual for the region. This traditional New England academy came under the able and spirited direction of Mr. Ireland in 1940, succeeding a long line of distinguished head masters.

A program of academic and recreational activities under an able faculty offers many opportunities for development. Among student activities are home economics, outing, camera, and language clubs. Graduates of the preparatory curriculum go to representative institutions and colleges about the country. See page 788

BIDDEFORD, ME. Pop 20,785. B&M R. R. 15 mi. S W of Portland, Rt. U.S. 1. This trading center on the right bank of the Saco River dates back to 1616. Nearby are the famous Old Orchard Beach, Fortune Rocks, and Hills Beach. The school and college are at the mouth of the river, four miles from the Town.

This preparatory school was founded by the Franciscan Fathers to meet the needs of Catholic students in this section of the New England states. The majority of graduates enter the affiliated St. Francis College, with which the school shares facilities. Activities include music, dramatics, sports, and various clubs, including printing. The Rev. Laplante succeeded the Rev. Norman Thibodeau as principal in 1955.

BRIDGTON, ME. Pop 1866. Altitude 405 feet 40 mi. NW of Portland, Rt. U.S.302. Long Lake and the attractions of the Sebago region have drawn many summer camps. Pleasant Mountain, nearby, has been developed as a popular ski and winter sports area, and Conway, N.H., is but 25 miles away. The Academy is in North Bridgton.

This academy, organized by a local group when Maine was still part of Massachusetts, has always maintained close relationships with the community. H. H. Sampson, principal for two decades, was succeeded by Mr. Goldsmith in 1943. He has opened two dormitories, added an ice rink and other facilities, and extended the academic work, which now includes remedial reading. College preparatory students enter the universities of Me. and Mass. and other colleges and universities throughout New England. Extra-curricular music, art, dramatics, and publications, along with sports, are emphasized.

A new science laboratory was completed in 1956.

This sound college preparatory school developed from the conservative old Waynflete Latin School. Flexible programming and diversified courses in art and music were introduced by Barbara Woodruff Freeman, head mistress from 1931 to 1948. The elementary grades were opened to boys when S. Activities include music, dramatics, community service, and a limited program of sports. Waynflete sends many of its graduates to such colleges as Wellesley, Wheaton, and Smith.

Established by five influential and scholarly Friends who desired a select school for their children, and having had among its principals such Quakers as Rufus Jones, Oak Grove enjoys patronage from many lands and from all denominations.

For seventy-five years a coeducational institution, since 1925 under the present heads it has devoted its full program to girls. A new quadrangle of modern buildings, and a loyal body of alumnae are among the fruits of the untiring zeal and devotion that Mr. and Mrs. Owen have given their girls and the school. A chapter of the Cum Laude Society was established in 1948. Graduates choose widely from among the foremost colleges, large and small. Programs to further individual interests are chosen from a variety of electives. This was originally the coeducational Andover Academy, re-named in 1879 in honor of a local benefactor, and long affiliated with the Unitarian Church though undenominational in practice. After 1936, when J. Halsey Gulick was appointed head master, the school considerably broadened in scope, with the curricula adjusted to meet individual requirements, and with greater opportunities for students with aptitudes along more practical lines.

Mr. Farrell, appointed head master in 1952 after seventeen years as assistant head master, under whose leadership the extensive remedial reading and mathematics programs were built and who is identified with the Proctor honor system and school government, continues the tradition of gearing academic work to the demands of the time, with development of courses for the intellectually gifted. He has also undertaken a building and renovation program adding notably to the attractiveness and utility of the campus. Thorough college preparation is emphasized, with graduates entering Middlebury, the Univ. of N.H., Bowdoin, Wesleyan, Yale, and others. The liberal course permits

A new trend was given education in America in the establishment of St. Paul's. It was the first of the Church schools to make appeal to the new class that was rapidly acquiring wealth from the development of water power, textile mills and exploitation of the continent. In 1855 Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck gave his country place near Concord for "a school of the highest class for boys, in which they may obtain an education which shall fit them either for college or business, including thorough intellectual training in the various branches of learning, gymnastics and manly exercises adapted to preserve health and strengthen the physical condition, such aesthetic culture and accomplishments as shall tend to refine the manners and elevate the taste, together with careful moral and religious instruction."

The Rev. Henry Augustus Coit, then only twenty-five, was chosen by the trustees as the first rector. Of a family long prominent in American education, his early training had been under the Rev. William Augustus Muhlenberg, at whose suggestion he was later an instructor in the College of St. James, Hagerstown, Md. Dr. Muhlenberg's school at College Point, L. I., which later became St. Paul's College, in its eighteen years existence exerted a great influence on the future private schools in America, for among his pupils in addition to Coit were several future bishops who were later influential in organizing the earliest Episcopal church schools. From his master, Muhlenberg, Dr. Coit adopted the "in loco parentis" attitude, and from the English public schools which he had visited he adapted much. Even in outdoor life English influence was at first apparent. Dr. Coit encouraged cricket rather than baseball. The English schoolroom nomenclature, too, was here introduced to the American boy. St. Paul's still has "forms" and "evensong," but the "removes" and "matins" of Dr. Coit's time are forgotten. Most of the boys in the four upper forms have separate rooms. The young boys have "alcoves" in the dormitories similar to the "cubicles" of many of the English public schools. This custom here first introduced in the American private schools has been followed by Groton, St. Mark's and other schools.

So awe-inspiring a man was Dr. Coit that only in recent years have his old pupils been able to write of him realistically. Owen Wister describes him as a "stern, sad man in clerical black, born seven hundred years later than the days of his spiritual kin." Arthur Stanwood Pier, long a member of the faculty, in his history of the school reviewed in an earlier edition of this Handbook, speaks of him "in character and zeal and temperament very like the man of wrath, John Brown . . . a ruthless fanatic." To John Brown whose aims and "actions he abhorred . . . his soul was akin." Following Dr. Coit's death, his brother Joseph Howland Coit, who had been vice-rector since 1865, carried on, and later the Rev. Henry Ferguson, a St. Paul's "old boy."

Samuel Smith Drury was rector from 1911 for over quarter of a century. Priest, preacher and writer, a man of compulsive type, of great driving force, to his boys he was sternly aloof, to his aides an inspiration and a saintly man. Following Dr. Drury's death in 1938, Norman B. Nash resigned from the Episcopal Theological School where he had established a reputation for liberal-minded teaching to accept the head mastership, bringing to St. Paul's new life and vitality. Elected bishop-coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts late in 1946, he remained with the school until February of 1947.

Though St. Paul's boys no longer play the English game they are fully aware of what is "cricket." "Quite uncritical in his outlook," Mr. Pier says, the St. Paul boy goes out into the world with "an eagerness to join in some common effort for the good of all—if only some one will direct him where that common effort is being made! Again a qualification that indicates there may be something lacking in a school spirit that is solely one of cheerful cooperation." The largest of the Church boarding schools, St. Paul's enrolls over four hundred boys, some ninety receiving scholarships. As many as thirty-five per cent of the boys have been sons of alumni.

Henry Crocker Kittredge, with the school since 1916, and as vice-rector from 1929, was immediately made acting head and within a few months head master. For the first time a layman, a non-cleric, headed St. Paul's,—a marked innovation. The school continues a Church boarding school with the religious life under the supervision of the Reverend Charles Webb as head of the sacred studies department. The former head, son of "Kitty," famed Harvard Shakesperian scholar, has written much on Cape Cod, its people and customs. In a letter addressed to parents on his accession he stressed his hope that he might find for his faculty "young firebrands who will become expert teachers, serene and sagacious elder statesmen . . . men who have no preconceived ideas or theories of education, but to whom the many facets of life in a big Church boarding school appeal."

In the fall of 1953 the Rev. Matthew Madison Warren, rector of All Saints Church in Atlanta, Ga., joined the faculty as understudy to Mr. Kittredge, who then retired in June, 1954.

The majority of graduates enter Yale, Harvard, or Princeton, although a few attend other colleges. As the school enters its second century, the outlook is heartening. See page 623

EXETER, N.H. Pop 5664. Alt 58 ft. B&M R.R. On the coastal plain between Portsmouth and Newburyport, Exeter is the second oldest town in the state. It was the seat of the government during the Revolutionary War and the site of early mills on the Squamscott. Amidst rich agricultural lands, it is, perhaps, more than any New England town, reminiscent of an English provincial village and, with its wide, elm shaded streets, preserves an air of undisturbed tranquility. The buildings of the Academy are in the town on Front Street. The extensive buildings follow the architectural detail of the original eighteenth century structures. The Emerson School on High Street adjoins the Exeter campus.

With Mr. Emerson's resignation as head master in 1950 to join the Advisory Board of the Burnham schools. Mr. Turner, on the faculty since 1935 and yearly assuming additional responsibilities, succeeded him.

A new dormitory, completed in 1957, has made possible a larger enrollment.

Young boys from many states and from some foreign countries, with a few from the community, are thoroughly prepared for the large eastern boarding schools. Separate living quarters and programs of work and play for the different age groups indicate the thoughtful planning. Among the varied activities are dramatics, music, many sports, and numerous hobby and interest clubs.

Encouraged by the immediate success of Phillips Academy at Andover, John Phillips established in his home town in New Hampshire a new academy which was opened in 1783. William Woodbridge was preceptor for the first five years. Benjamin Abbot, the second in charge, bore the title principal. He was trained at Andover under Principal Pearson and ruled over the institution with great power and wisdom for fifty years. Daniel Webster came to him for schooling in 1796. In 1838 Gideon L. Soule, who had already been a teacher in the school for seventeen years, succeeded Dr. Abbot, and in 1872 the fiftieth year of his continuous service in the academy was celebrated. Harlan P. Amen in his eighteen years from 1895 by strong and sympathetic leadership brought Exeter again to her ancient standards.

There were strong men on the faculty, too, none more famous than "Bull" Wentworth, the terror of whose name extended into other school rooms through his innumerable mathematics textbooks. Such men gave Exeter the reputation of being faculty controlled, more democratic than Andover which then was under autocratic dominance. No theological seminary as at Andover held to strict orthodoxy, so there was freedom to question. For generations graduates resorted chiefly to the less godly and more liberal Harvard. All these things may have prompted President Eliot to characterize Exeter as "one of the most precious institutions of the country."

Exeter influenced teaching at other schools and established a pattern that emphasizes "the simplicity of an old New England village; the austerity of Puritan schoolmasters; the . . . earnestness and self reliance of boys who earn their way." However, the old maxims are still repeated,—"Exeter is still a hard school," "the process of learning is in the main irksome," "the pupil should bear the laboring oar," "from the past comes the ancient Exeter tradition of thoroughness, accuracy, and severity." The tradition of rugged democracy is made much of,—to bring out that there is no conscious distinction between rich and poor. Much has been done to expand the scholarship program and to reach out to draw students from wider geographic and economic areas.

Lewis Perry served Exeter as principal for a third of a century. His broad tolerance encouraged freedom of speech and attitude among faculty and students. His gracious manner made him a popular speaker everywhere. In his administration, Exeter undertook the great building program which has put this school among the foremost in point of endowment and facilities. John Marquand recently described Phillips Exeter as "the most beautiful and aesthetically satisfying of all New England schools." The nine-fold increase of endowment has expanded the faculty with only a small increase of the student body. Gifts of the late Edward S. Harkness, oil magnate and benefactor of many schools and colleges, made possible the present Harkness Plan of round table teaching in small, informal classes.

Mr. Saltonstall, '24 alumnus, and history teacher since 1932, accepted the mantle of principal when he returned from the service in 1946. Tall, unassuming, evidently popular, he has proved Mr. Perry's pronouncement that "The Academy is in safe hands." Francis T. P. Plimpton, of New York, is president of the Trustees, succeeding Thomas S. Lamont in 1956.

Mr. Saltonstall has stepped to the front ranks of independent school men who take a vital and significant interest in both public and private school problems as well as in other educational issues of the day. He initiated the Exeter Study Committee report, completed in 1953, which is a comprehensive objective summary of Exeter and of the place of independent secondary education in the national scene. He has lately spoken out strongly in favor of significant increases in teachers' salaries as a means of inducing able young people to enter the profession.

The extensive curriculum, the integration of extra-curricular activities and the facilities of cultural pursuits as exemplified in the excellent school library and in the Alumni Art Center, with its frequent exhibits, have encouraged an atmosphere of creativity, maturity and responsibility. Though a large school providing much freedom to students, close contact is maintained between the faculty and the boys.

Today, although the majority of graduates continue to matriculate at Harvard, Yale and Princeton, many do go to Cornell, Dartmouth, M.I.T., and other leading colleges. See page 624

"To make school life a more real, less sheltered, less self-centered venture; to educate the individual in the light of what he can later do toward solving the problems of society," was Mrs. Carmelita Hinton's vision in opening this preparatory school.

Vigorous, dynamic, broad-visioned, unsparing of her own interest and energy, Mrs. Hinton selected her faculty, including many specialists in the arts, from outstanding progressive and conservative schools and colleges in this country and in Europe. Upon her retirement in 1955, Mr. Rockwell, formerly assistant head master of the Pomfret School in Conn., succeeded.

Concerts, lectures, married instructors who have their own homes on adjoining property, integration of class and extra-curricular programs—these give a characteristic flavor not to be found elsewhere. The wide range of student activities includes compulsory attendance at evening groups, an effective school government, arts and crafts, and sports. Every student participates 4½ hours each week in the work program.

All pupils prepare for college, and in the last five years, Harvard, Radcliffe, Reed, Yale, Smith, and Swarthmore, among numerous others, have admitted Putney graduates.

In 1951 the Putney Graduate School of Teacher Education, directed by Dr. Morris R. Mitchell, was opened. See also page 792

This college preparatory school of good standing and national appeal has enrolled only boys since 1931, though for sixty years it was a coeducational school of largely local appeal. Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt, on coming to the Academy in 1934, immediately enriched both curriculum and activities, making much of clubs and fostering intellectual and musical interests. Winter sports are naturally emphasized. Recent additions to the plant include a new gymnasium and a faculty house.

The program is entirely college preparatory, and many graduates enter Dartmouth, St. Lawrence, and Middlebury, with others going to such colleges as Wesleyan, Brown, the universities of N.H. and Vt. Non-sectarian religious instruction is offered seniors, and there is a well-developed remedial reading and language program. See also page 626

Settled in 1643, Andover is on the south rim of the once great Merrimack Valley, where the Industrial Revolution first took root in America. A noted educational center, this delightful town has many substantial Colonial houses reminiscent of nineteenth century men of letters. A mile south of the center, crowning Seminary Hill, is Phillips Academy, whose campus is outstanding among secondary schools. Embracing many Colonial buildings, the present design is the creation of the last 30 years. Memorial Tower is visible from afar. The Abbot Academy buildings are grouped about a central green to the west. The plan of an old New England village was followed in laying out Brooks School on Lake Cochickewick in North Andover. The Pike School is near the Phillips Academy campus.

A pioneer in education for women, this first New England incorporated school for girls was established "to regulate the tempers, to improve the taste, to discipline and enlarge minds, and to form the morals' of its students. Named in honor of Madam Sarah Abbot, whose funds made possible the first building, it maintained for more than a century the even tenor of its traditions, undiverted by passing fashions. During the nineteen year administration of Marguerite C. Hearsey, the best of the old traditions were retained, the school took on a modern slant in its social and academic phases. She was succeeded in June of 1955 by Mrs. Crane, formerly of Prospect Hill School as well as of the Abbot Academy faculty.

Daughters, granddaughters, and great-granddaughters of loyal alumnae from every state look to Abbot for their schooling. Many graduates enter Smith or Wellesley, with others going to Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, Connecticut College, Wheaton, Bryn Mawr. The college preparatory program not only emphasizes liberal studies but encourages each student to participate in the fine arts.

Extra-curricular activities stress a successful student government, the Christian association, athletics, music, dramatics, modern dance, arts, and crafts, and current events. See also page 740

Named in honor of Phillips Brooks, one-time Bishop of Massachusetts and resident of North Andover, the school was given the land and original buildings by the Russell family.

The head master, one of Dr. Peabody's "Grotties," was aided from the start by other Groton men. Mr. Ashburn shows the results of his broad education in his writings, and unlike most school masters he can write. "Fifty Years On," a reminiscent history of Groton published in 1934, was followed ten years later by his biography of Endicott Peabody. His "Primer for Parents," 1943, and "Parents' Guide to Independent Schools and Colleges," 1956, are brilliant presentations of what the liberal education gives and does, and of the role and function of private schools in the U. S. He retains leadership in independent school activities. Each Brooks boy comes in personal contact with him through the classes he teaches.

From its beginning the school has attracted patrons of discrimination whose boys are put through a stiff traditional course and readily enter leading colleges and universities, particularly Yale, Harvard, Trinity, and Princeton. The school offers courses for advanced standing at college.

Brooks is now divided into three scholastic units: Upper, Middle, and Lower schools, each with its own administrator.

A daily work program, a full complement of sports, debating, arts and crafts, publications, dramatics, choir, hobbies, and a missionary group occupy the boys' time out of class. See page 630

Of the two Phillips academies which have become so distinctive in American education, this at Andover, the older, was founded by Samuel Phillips, who, together with his father and his uncle John, deeded both land and money for the establishment of a school to be opened at Andover, where the grandfather of Samuel Phillips had been head master of the Grammar School. The donors proposed "to lay the foundation of a SCHOOL OR ACADEMY for the purpose of instructing Youth, not only in English and Latin, Grammar, Writing, Arithmetic and those Sciences wherein they are commonly taught; but more especially to learn them the great end and real business of living." Further "it is again declared that the first and principal object of this Institution is the promotion of true piety and virtue."

Opened during the Revolution, the school was incorporated in 1780 with the title Phillips Academy, the first chartered academy in New England. Among its early patrons were Washingtons and Lees from Virginia, as well as Lowells and Quincys from Massachusetts. The first head master, Eliphalet Pearson, had been a classmate of the founder at Dummer and at Harvard. A man of force and commanding presence, he was known to his awed students as "Elephant" Pearson. Later he was professor of Hebrew at Harvard and the Andover Theological Seminary.

When John Adams came in 1810 to the master's throne, twenty-three boys were enrolled. By 1817 the number had increased to a hundred, and during his twenty-three years Dr. Adams admitted 1119 pupils, nearly a fifth of whom became ministers. Under Samuel H. Taylor, a man of picturesque and striking personality, head master from 1837 to 1871, the institution gradually took on its present character. After his death, however, it declined in prestige until it was rejuvenated and brought in touch with modern methods of education by Cecil F. P. Bancroft, principal from 1874 to 1901.

Andover long remained conservative, less influenced by the Unitarian movements which have stirred New England, and perhaps for that reason Andover early became primarily a preparatory school for more conservative Yale rather than Harvard, which soon came under more liberal influences. Of the more than twenty thousand boys that have graduated from the school, about 45 per cent have gone to Yale and perhaps twenty per cent to Harvard. Twelve thousand loyal living alumni are organized in numerous associations throughout the country and their continued interest through the years has brought increased endowments and gifts.

First of the Headmasters to give his whole time to administration was Alfred E. Stearns, in office for thirty years from 1903, alumnus of the Theological Seminary and of Amherst, under whose administration the old primitive austere atmosphere of Andover gave way to a richer life as Thomas Cochran, '90, a Morgan partner, brought wealth to the school to enlarge and beautify the plant, today an ensemble designated 'the loveliest group of buildings in America.' An enlarged teaching staff makes possible smaller classes and close and intimate supervision, though there is no study hall and to the occasional visitor Andover looks like a college. The boys wander from their dormitory rooms across the campus to their recitations. The archaeological museum, the art museums with special exhibits add to the college flavor.

Since 1942 a summer session has been held stressing the basic fields of mathematics, science, and modern languages, and serving as a 'laboratory' for trying out new ideas.

Claude M. Fuess, who from 1908 had served the school in many capacities and had established a reputation as a biographer of national leaders, became Headmaster in 1933. Under his new policies, the curriculum was revised, several buildings added, and studies of health, academic mortality, and student activities completed. In 1947 he announced his retirement at the end of the academic year, and Bishop Henry Hobson, President of the trustees, announced the appointment of John M. Kemper, whose whole life had been associated with the Army. For a time he taught at West Point and later did graduate work at Columbia and Harvard. During the war he served in the Military Intelligence and later directed the War Department's historical program. His "experience in dealing with many types of people, his skill in scholarly research, and his interest in education on all levels" were praised by Dr. Fuess.

In the years since the inauguration of John Kemper, several new projects have been launched. The faculty adopted a revised curriculum in 1951 after an eighteen-month survey and study. This curriculum adds flexibility for adaptation to the talents of the individual boy, yet continues to require a basic core of fundamentals. In 1956 Andover initiated the 'Andover Teaching Fellowships', designed to interest and give practical teaching experience to able young men.

In conjunction with Exeter, Lawrenceville, Harvard, Yale and Princeton and under a grant from the Ford Foundation, a detailed study was conducted of the top two years of prep school and the first two of college, aiming at a better integration of this four-year educational period. The committee published its report, "General Education in School and College," in 1953. The Andover Fund campaign added over $2,500,000 to the endowment, the Alumni Fund annually contributes over $200,000, a substantial portion of the school's scholarship funds. Added to the physical plant is the new Memorial Gymnasium, opened in 1952. The Letter Societies were dissolved, and proceeds from the sale of their buildings used to establish student aid funds in the name of each society.

Mr. Kemper's breadth of approach, his active interest in new trends and projects, and the student and alumni appreciation of the "spirit" of cooperation are manifestations of the new resiliency.

Today, although the majority of graduates continue to matriculate at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, many do go to the other leading colleges and universities. See also page 630

BOSTON, MASS. Pop 801,444. Alt to 169 ft. The Hub of the Universe, long intellectually, commercially and politically pre-eminent, has today been outstripped by successors to the south and west. Newer cities have usurped the long list of Boston 'firsts' that stretch through the city's notable history. Yet many achievements still find inception in this once literary and educational capital.

Most easterly and most ancient of our large cities, Boston has ignored the natural attractions of this truly choice site, and, of the wealth of the old and fine from the historic past, less has been preserved than in Philadelphia. The old North End, mecca of so many patriot tourists, is being dissipated and destroyed, while in Charlestown and South Boston great concentrations of pre-Revolutionary dwellings remain neglected. The seat of several schools for public planning, today in the century of the motor car it has become a victim of creeping paralysis. With few modern buildings and fewer plans for improvement, piece-meal measures have produced great swathes of wreckage to bear arterial traffic to the congested central streets which once were cowpaths. Its traffic courts are crowded.

Formerly a pioneer, with early one-way streets, the world's second subway system, and its Back Bay which was once a model residential area, the city has suffered from the costly vicissitudes of inefficient and decadent government, both state and local. Vacillating between extravagance and frugality, it has adopted a modified Plan A reform government in City Hall, while growing civic interest among the citizenry has lightened the atmosphere.

Paucity of natural resources early stimulated trade which built local industries and brought Boston fame. Now the largest city in New England and tenth largest in the country, though its port is in eclipse it still retains some importance as a fish, wool and shoe market. Considered a choice place of residence, it is among the more expensive cities in which to live and do business. While wage rates remain lower than the national average, high taxation and repressive legislation are inclement to enterprise.

Yet Boston maintains its leadership, medically, scientifically and culturally. Among its revered institutions are the noted Massachusetts General Hospital, the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Public Library, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and a wealth of societies that draw upon many facets of an unusually rich cultural heritage. The glories of the "Athens of America," where learning, arts and letters flourished, still flame, if somewhat less resplendently.

It is still the hub of a great educational concentration, largely private in origin and control. Among the leading higher institutions are the complex of Boston University, fifth largest in the country, the rapidly expanding Northeastern University, Simmons, Boston College and Emmanuel; across the Charles are Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard and Radcliffe; on the outer fringes, Tufts, Wellesley, Regis and Brandeis, and numerous junior colleges. Within the city are many professional and vocational schools.

The private primary and secondary schools, formerly largely in the Back Bay and along the Fenway, have dwindled in number, while increasingly the leading schools have moved to the suburbs, Brookline, the Newtons, Wellesley, Dedham, Hingham, Weston, Waltham, Cambridge, Belmont and Concord, separately listed.

A pioneer in education, introducing military training, coeducation, and kindergarten work before schools had generally adopted them, Chauncy Hall was established by Gideon F. Thayer. Franklin T. Kurt, connected with the school from 1896 and owner from 1910 until his death in 1947, was succeeded by Mr. Farnsworth, head of the mathematics department for thirty-six years.

Today, Chauncy Hall stresses preparation for science and engineering colleges, and many graduates enter Northeastern, MIT, Tufts, RPI, and WPI.

Believing a city coeducational day school offers advantage, Mr. Merrill, co-founder of the Thomas Jefferson School in St. Louis, has created a demanding school opening in the fall of 1958. The broadly based preparatory program with extra opportunities for the more able student offers unusual stress on social and cultural heritage and language studies, and use of neighboring institutions including library, museum, state house and factory, for field work and study. Mr. Merrill, Deerfield and Harvard alumnus, much interested in educational methodologies, has recently studied secondary schools abroad where he was also a teacher and lecturer for the Austrian Fulbright program and the U. S. Information Service in France. He has drawn together a faculty of breadth of interest, vigor and experience. See page 796

This oldest endowed secondary school in the nation has passed the tercentenary mark. It was established some nine years after the founding of Harvard College to prepare boys for that institution. Originally "The Free Schoole in Roxburie" for Roxbury boys, in recent years a tuition charge has been made. This now amounts to $300 per year for Roxbury boys, and $400 for others.

John Eliot, "Apostle to the Indians," when minister of the First Church of Roxbury, signed a statement with others of the town that they, "in consideration of their religious care of posterity, have taken into consideration how necessary the education of their children in literature will be, to fit them for public service, both in Church and Commonwealth, in succeeding ages. They, therefore, unanimously have consented and agreed to erect a free school in the said Town of Roxbury." In 1671 Thomas Bell, formerly a freeman of Roxbury, died in London, willing two hundred acres of Roxbury lands to the school and naming the Rev. John Eliot and two other officers of the First Church as trustees of the endowment.

William C. Collar, for more than half a century connected with the school, in his long career attained a national position in the educational world. Appointed a master in 1857 and head master in 1867, he resigned in 1907 and died in 1916. D. O. S. Lowell, a graduate of Bowdoin, became a master in the school in 1884, and was head master from 1909 to his retirement in June, 1921. Daniel V. Thompson, who came from Lawrenceville as his successor, maintained the high scholastic standards. It was during his regime that the school moved to its present site.

Mr. Weed was selected in 1947 to succeed George Norton Northrop, head master from 1932. Mr. Weed came from St. Mark's, where he had been assistant head master, and has brought new youth and vigor to the school. The curriculum adheres to the classics, with emphasis on Latin and Greek, although there is required study of physics, and many electives are offered.

Nearly half the graduates enter Harvard, with others going to Dartmouth, MIT, Amherst, Brown, Wesleyan, Yale.

A new gymnasium and a woodworking shop are recent additions.

This school has developed from Miss Winsor's School, established in 1886 by Mary Pickard Winsor, whose brother later founded Middlesex School. Its continued and successful growth led in 1910 to its removal to the present well-equipped plant. Miss Winsor retired in 1922, her successor, Katharine Lord, in 1939. Frances D. Dugan was associate director for fifteen years before taking full charge. Her lighter touch somewhat lessened the rigidity.

Miss Knapp had been associate director for ten years before her present appointment in 1951. Almost all graduates go on to college, especially Smith, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Vassar, Bryn Mawr. Many become leaders in college activities, their well organized preparatory school training standing them in good stead.

This academy was founded and endowed by General Sylvanus Thayer, distinguished "father of West Point" and attained prominence under Dr. William Gallagher, principal for twenty-three years. Stacy Southworth, principal from 1920 to 1947, inaugurated a modern country day program, continued high scholastic standards, and greatly enriched the curriculum, especially in the social sciences, music, and art.

Mr. Thayer, formerly assistant head master, and founder of the summer school, nursery school and kindergarten, and day camp, became head master in 1947. He has pioneered in the establishment of an evening development program for industrial personnel of the region. Shortly after the first World War a group of liberal minded parents, desirous of bringing to Boston more progressive educational methods than were then available, called Eugene Randolph Smith, who had successfully developed the Park School in Baltimore, to organize a similar school here. He was extraordinarily successful in his twenty-two years as head master, adding constantly to the activities and plant of the school, which became not only socially accepted by discriminating Boston families, but a national focus as a leader in progressive education.

Mr. Hodgman came from the middle west in 1943 to head Beaver. He has furthered the physical development of the school, greatly increased enrollment, and vigorously continued and expanded the educational work. Both the general and college preparatory curricula are unusually rich in art, crafts, music, languages, and social sciences. Graduates enter many colleges, including Vassar, Radcliffe, Wellesley, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Connecticut, Skidmore, Sarah Lawrence and Bennington. Extra-curricular activities emphasize music, drama, a social welfare committee, student government, and a United Nations Day Committee, as well as a program in sports.

This school was established by George H. Browne and Edgar H. Nichols along lines in advance of the times. Ralph Hoffman, the ornithologist, for more than twenty years was associated, and the late Porter E. Sargent served as science master from 1896 to 1904. Willard Reed, co-principal from 1912 following the death of Mr. Nichols in 1910, was replaced as head master in 1928 when the alumni, chiefly Harvard graduates, took over. Roger T. Twitchell directed the school for a decade. In 1948 the Upper School moved from Garden Street to its present site, and the following year Mr. Pratt, formerly teacher at Westminster School, was appointed. A new Middle School building was completed in 1956.

With the completion of the new plant in 1951, the school now offers a coordinated country day school program, with a strong college preparatory program enriched with many minor and extra-curricular courses. A large percentage of graduates enter Harvard, with others going to Dartmouth, Amherst, Yale, Princeton, Brown. There are French, photography, and literary clubs, and a variety of sports.

Deriving from Miss Markham's School under the long direction of Miss Katharine M. Thompson, a separate Upper School for girls and the coeducational Lower School were created. Miss Vailant, a member of Miss Thompson's faculty and principal since 1935, has lightened the austerity of tone and continued the sound college preparatory work of the Upper School, which in 1951 occupied separate quarters (at 80 Sparks St). With greatly increased enrollment, the school continues to be popular in the Harvard community, while emphasizing in both branches a broad program which includes athletics, choral music, and dramatics. Boys and girls graduating from the Lower School choose many preparatory schools, while continuity offered for girls in the Upper School sends graduates to leading colleges, including Radcliffe, Swarthmore, Smith, Wellesley, Oberlin, and Bennington.

Established as the College Preparatory School by Dr. Aiello and assuming its present name in 1937, the Academy stresses college preparation and offers one year of intensive review. Many of the students are children of faculty members of nearby colleges and universities. Graduates have entered more than 200 different colleges throughout the country. There is a student council, as well as a dramatic club, that is an integral part of the curriculum. See also page 797

It was incorporated after his death in 1923 and has since been carried on by men who were with him for many years and helped to make the reputation of the school. Among them is Mr. Hall, long treasurer and member of the board, director since 1937, whose son acts as business manager.

The curriculum prepares for a wide variety of colleges and universities, mostly in New England, including Brown, Tufts, Harvard, M.I.T., Northeastern, and Boston University. Summer schools, with make-up courses, are conducted in Cambridge, and at Falmouth and Wianno on Cape Cod. See also page 798

An outstanding coeducational elementary school, this grew from a little community enterprise sponsored chiefly by families of the Harvard faculty and bears the name of the estate of Charles Eliot Norton. Under Katharine Taylor's skillful administration from 1921, it was reorganized in 1927 with a governing board of parents and faculty. On Miss Taylor's retirement in 1949, Mr. Yeomans, son of the famed progressive educator who founded the Ojai Valley School, and previously on the faculty of Shady Hill and then Thacher School, was appointed.

The teacher-training program, started in 1928, enrolls college graduates who serve for a year in an apprenticeship capacity and meet in seminars with members of the faculty.

It is a literary shrine with the significance of England's Stratford or Germany's Weimar. A mecca of the patriotic, here Thoreau in jail wrote "Civil Disobedience" which, through Tolstoi and Gandhi, shook to their foundations the world's great empires.

Its schools are in no way revolutionary. Concord Academy occupies the former Samuel Hoar estate and the adjacent property on Main Street. After ten years as house master at Middlesex, Mr. Fenn established his own school for young boys. For his boarders, largely from conservative Boston families, he encourages a five day plan that permits them to be with their families over Sunday. The boys are given a happy, wholesome life in pleasant surroundings, without strain or pressure, and are adequately prepared for the large secondary boarding schools. Classes from grade 5 and up are sectioned according to ability; and from grade 6, classes are organized on the 'round table' discussion plan. See also page 634

Frederick Winsor, with the aid of his brother and a group of Harvard colleagues, established Middlesex, where he combined features of the house system, introduced at Lawrenceville, with some of the features of the church schools in England. In the middle thirties, to aid in recruiting pupils from a distance, he introduced his plan of competitive prize scholarships for boys in all parts of the country. He retired in 1939 and died in 1941.

Tall, rangy, engaging, his successor Mr. Terry, an alumnus of Groton, had been associate principal for a year and for some time previous assistant head master at Noble and Greenough.

From the first the school has maintained a solid college preparatory curriculum, but with a wider outlook that now encompasses such courses as music and exploratory work in numerous arts and crafts, and electives in ornithology, economics. Less than a third of graduates now enter Harvard, with others going to Yale, Princeton, Williams, Middlebury, Cornell. There is a full complement of athletics, student publications, dramatics, music, and many other extra-curricular activities.

First established on Beacon Hill by George W. C. Noble, who was joined after a quarter of a century by James J. Greenough, this conservative school has long been patronized by prominent Boston families whose sons have gone on to Harvard.

In 1917 absorbing the Volkman School, and since 1922, located in Dedham, today it continues its emphasis on the traditional thorough college preparation, with art and liberal courses gaining in popularity in a core curriculum.

Mr. Charles Wiggins was succeeded by his son-in-law, Mr. Putnam, who has continued to improve the attractive plant, adding in 1946 the administration and classroom building, and in 1957 a new science wing. He has increased the enrollment and offers a liberal week-end policy which encourages boys from the greater New England area.

Among the varied extra-curricular activities are rowing from the school boathouse on the Charles River, the language societies, publications and dramatics groups, as well as a full athletic program.

The preservation and restoration of the mile-long village street with its old homes is being continued by the Academy and Mr. Flynt. Nearby in interesting old houses is The Bement School. One of the nation's great secondary schools, Deerfield is the creation of its head master. Fresh from Amherst he came to head Dickinson Academy, the local high school housed in an ugly brick building. Recipient of numerous honorary degrees, Mr. Boyden is today one of the most influential men in secondary school education, playing an important part in the reorganization and planning of other schools. Former masters trained by him are following in his footsteps as head masters elsewhere. So great has been the confidence and friendliness felt for Mr. Boyden that in 1924 when the school through state statute lost the support of the town, heads of schools like Andover, Exeter and Taft cooperated in his appeal for funds for the present beautiful equipment. Here was first worked out a successful system of athletics for all. Social community activities and general participation in dramatics are made use of to train and develop the personality of each boy. Unusual, unconventional and natural are such features as the Sunday evening sings, and surveys and published reports by students on the geology of the country round about. Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Dartmouth, and Williams accept about two-thirds of the graduating classes, with other graduates scattering widely.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Boyden, the latter long teaching science and mathematics, have known individually each boy in the school. Characteristic are Mr. Boyden's personal surveyance of the development of each student and that his office is in the hallway of a classroom building.

Mr. Boyden selects from applicants those whom he can develop with greatest success, as is attested by the substantial support of his loyal alumni. With equal foresight he chooses his faculty, former members of which are now head masters at Canterbury, Governor Dummer, Hebron, Holderness, Kiskiminetas Springs School, Riverdale, and Tabor, while another is president of Wesleyan College. Under the skillful direction of Mr. Chase, associated with the founder, Howard B. Gibbs, from 1924, and head master since 1928, Eaglebrook has become one of the leading boarding schools for younger boys. Parents and alumni have helped endow and expand the plant, which now includes 115 acres of campus, playing fields, and wooded hillside, and 18 buildings. Two units—the Lower School (grades 4, 5, 6), and the Upper School (grades 7, 8, 9)—have separate dormitories, school houses, and programs, each planned for that particular age group.

Eaglebrook boys go on to preparatory schools having already had wide opportunities for responsibility and leadership in student government and in school committees that direct many aspects of school life. The demanding academic work is enriched by many electives, with particular emphasis on music and the arts and crafts. There are numerous correlative extra-curricular activities, including student publications on the Eaglebrook Press, a radio club with amateur transmitter, band, and photography.

Every boy participates in at least one of the many interscholastic, intramural and individual sports, of which skiing is a favorite. Eaglebrook's fall Country Fair and gala Winter Carnival are special occasions that bring parents and alumni to the school. See also pages 632-33

In its second century, Williston Academy is increasingly fulfilling the needs of the college preparatory students from all parts of the country and foreign lands. Established by a local manufacturer and endowing an academy where science and mathematics and English were to be held as honorable and to be pursued with as much thoroughness as the ancient classics, this non-denominational school has long offered sound instruction both in liberal arts and scientific subjects. Dr. Galbraith, who succeeded Joseph Sawyer in 1919, modernized the outlook as well as the plant, and raised academic standards. Phillips Stevens succeeded Dr. Galbraith, who retired as headmaster emeritus in 1949. Brookside-in-the-Berkshires derives from the Altaraz School, which Dr. and Mrs. Altaraz first conducted in Monterey. Since 1943 the school has been located in Great Barrington. In 1948 the name was changed to the present title.

The tuition is variable, and is determined according to the individual program of the pupil. The curriculum includes, in addition to the general academic courses, some informal vocational training.

Among extracurricular activities are sports and outdoor recreations, including riding.

Paul Argentin, Dr. Altaraz's son-in-law, is business manager of the school.

In 1930 Stoneleigh in Rye, N.H., and Prospect Hill were merged to form the present school, with funds from a bequest of Elijah Coleman financing a new building, and with Isabel Cressler and Caroline Sumner, both formerly of Stoneleigh, as directors.

Mrs. Emerson, head mistress of Mary A. Burnham School in nearby Northampton, assumed direction in 1943. She continues many of the unusual features that have supplemented the successful college preparatory work, emphasizing art and music, and adding such practical courses as typing. In 1957 her son, Edward E. Emerson, associate principal from 1950, was appointed principal. Graduates enter Colby, Mount Holyoke, Skidmore, Connecticut, Vassar, and many other colleges.

Much is made of out-door sports, riding, skiing, and tennis, and there are regular lessons in Mensendieck. The many extra-curricular activities include dancing, music, dramatics, a school paper, and various clubs. See also page 742

Endicott Peabody founded this school for the cultivation of "manly Christian character, having regard to the moral and physical as well as intellectual development." Frank Davis Ashburn, alumnus, founder and head of Brooks School, wrote entertainingly of instruction and personalities at Groton in "Fifty Years On," and published a biography of Mr. Peabody. Oliver LaFarge, a champion of private education, among other alumni, has written provocatively of his school. Rev. Malcolm Strachan, of the faculty, has stated that "The duty of a school is in reality to make its men more marked for the right reasons. The duty of all schools is to wipe away the fears of commitment to belief, the uneasiness of being 'different.' But any man of belief and conviction is separate from his generation in any period of history and 'aristocracy' has nothing to do with that separation." Ellery Sedgwick, an old "Grottie," in his autobiography pays tribute to the founders,—

Gardner of the "scholar's mind, imaginative, and unpractical," Billings, the teacher and preacher, and Peabody, "the Caesar of the triumvirate." "Always Groton was striving to be an institution, but always it was personality that made it what it was."

Open-minded in introducing innovations in advance of his peers, particularly in the last few decades, Mr. Peabody added to the curriculum printing, woodworking, academic science in all its forms, music, and studio. The plan to have masters and boys live closely together to foster the students' maturity and stimulation in academic and social matters has also been carried out by some of "Peabo's" old boys who, in emulation chose to teach school, and today head such outstanding schools as Middlesex, Brooks, Hoosac, Browne and Nichols, Lake Forest Day, Grosse Pointe University School, as well as Groton itself.

Mr. Peabody's Groton adapted the high scholastic standards of English Public School education to democratic American tradition and brought to many leading families the "Christian" view of education and to their sons an incentive towards public service and the assumption of their responsibilities as citizens. A significant number of graduates have entered the professions of government, education, medicine, and religion. Today, whereas about a third of the boys enrolled are sons of graduates, more than a quarter of the boys are receiving scholarships granted on the basis of financial need to those of outstanding promise.

Student government is centered in the Sixth Form whose leaders, the Senior Prefect and six Prefects, elected by the school meet with the head master regularly and supervise assemblies, study halls and dormitory activities. Each boy has a separate cubicle in his dormitory, and in the three upper forms, boys have "Studies," usually shared by two students, while younger boys study together in schoolrooms.

After Mr. Peabody's retirement in 1940, he lived on the school grounds until his death in 1944, but his lengthened shadow has gradually shortened. Under the new head master there is less pressure in chapel services, more intellectual freedom, more informality of spirit in the school. Mr. Crocker comes of a famous Fitchburg paper family which has sent its sons to Groton for several generations. After Harvard he attended Oxford and Yale and was ordained at the Episcopal Theological School. He taught first at Andover and for ten years from 1930 was student chaplain at Princeton. Upstanding, wholesome, outspoken, and inspiring, he recognizes the sound foundation on which he has to build and is making the necessary adjustments to meet changing conditions. Small classes, with emphasis on group discussion, prevail through all the forms. In the senior year, the student is permitted to substitute for one of his regular courses an informal "tutorial."

Approximately 75% of graduates enter Harvard, Yale or Princeton, with a very few scattering to Williams, Amherst, Trinity, and other colleges. See also page 636

Mr. Gray, principal since 1925, has made good use of the Dr. Samuel A. Green Foundation which makes up the greater proportion of the present endowment. He has enlarged and modernized the plant, developed the campus, added playing fields, and strengthened the enrollment. A new schoolhouse, which contains administrative offices, recitation rooms, science laboratories, and a study hall with library attached, was completed in 1957.

The emphasis is on sound college preparation, and in the last five years graduates have entered more than twenty-five different colleges and universities. All major sports are offered, as well as glee club, orchestra, and other organization. See also page 640

French reorganized it along modern lines, a new site was purchased, and a country day program inaugurated. Mr. McEachron, former head master of Meadowbrook, succeeded Harrison M. Davis in 1947. With a curriculum including art, crafts, music, home economics, and with work partially departmentalized, Derby sends most of its graduates to preparatory schools, chiefly in New England. There has recently been extensive improvement of the plant, including a library building in 1953, and a new building containing an auditorium, music room, conference room and administrative offices.

George Gardner Monks, who inaugurated a sliding scale of tuition, flexible programming, and the characteristic simplicity of atmosphere. Mr. Curry, an Army Chaplain during the war and formerly a teacher at St. Paul's, succeeded Mr. Monks in 1946. The sliding tuition scale is used only for parents otherwise unable to send their boys to Lenox.

The curriculum is college prep. Graduates in the last five years have entered numerous colleges, including Boston University, Williams, Dartmouth, Middlebury, Yale, and Trinity. From the first, boys have done much of the work on the grounds and in the house. Extra-curricular activities include student government, publications, dramatics, public speaking, and sports in which every student participates.

Founded and endowed with the wealth and name of a whaling ship captain by his daughter, Tabor Academy is a preparatory school with a nautical program holding a prominent place among New England boarding schools. Enrollment and facilities have been greatly increased under Mr. Wickenden's leadership. For eleven years an assistant to Mr. Boyden of Deerfield, the present head master has continued to strengthen the curriculum, encouraged a diversity of extra-curricular activities, and furthered the integration of art, music, and academic subjects. He continues the policies of his predecessor, Walter Huston Lillard, head master from 1916 to 1942, in arranging the exchange of students with England and enrollments from many other countries. While the student body represents all regions of this country, emphasis is placed upon international aspects of education.

Tabor's crews have long competed in the Royal Henley Regatta in England. An honor naval school, three candidates are chosen annually for both Annapolis and West Point. Seamanship and navigation are stressed, utilizing the school fleet of sailboats and a 92 foot schooner. The unusually full roster of student activities includes several music groups, sports, student publications, hobby clubs, and some military drill. Strong are the Math and Science courses, housed in a Library-Science Building erected in 1957, and a course in Russian is offered. Graduates attend leading New England colleges, — Harvard, Williams, M.I.T., Dartmouth, Amherst, and Bowdoin. See page 642

Although only ten miles from Boston, Milton Academy is in a community which in appearance is more rural than urban. As early as 1798 steps were taken by residents of the town to establish a local academy, which finally opened in 1807 and was conducted uninterruptedly until 1866 when, on the establishment of a town high school, it was closed. In 1885, on a new site, the Academy reopened, remaining coeducational until 1901. Under Harrison Otis Apthorp it won national prominence. William L. W. Field, a naturalist and entomologist of scientific training, head master from 1917 to 1942, was succeeded by Cyril H. Jones, and on his resignation in 1947, by Arthur B. Perry, a member of the faculty since 1921 and Boys' School principal head from 1934.

The Academy draws the majority of its students from greater Boston, although more than half the resident students are from outside Massachusetts and represent half the states and a number of foreign countries. Contacts of boarders with families of day scholars are encouraged, and the week-end policy is liberal.

There is a continuity in the educational process from the kindergarten to the senior year, both for boys and girls, and although the program is not coeducational beyond the sixth grade, many activities are shared from grades 7 to 12. The academic work, with its numerous electives, emphasizes student participation and discussion, and prepares for representative Eastern colleges and universities. Among the activities are publications, music, dramatics, debating, various scientific and sports clubs. See page 634

Mr. Rogers, former instructor at Northwood School, who took over direction in 1935, has improved and enlarged the plant, more than trebled the enrollment, added the eighth grade, and strengthened the college preparatory standards.

A new school building, replacing Academy Hall destroyed by fire in 1953, was dedicated in the fall of 1954 on the occasion of the Sesquicentennial celebration.

Academic study is supplemented by musical organizations, public speaking, dramatics, publications, social activities, and athletics. Most graduates enter N.E. colleges and universities. See page 644

At the suggestion of President Shafer, Walnut Hill was established as a fitting school for Wellesley College, which it remained under its founders and long time principals, Florence Bigelow and Charlotte H. Conant. Miss Hester R. Davies, who followed Miss Bigelow in 1932, fostered a modern informality and gracious simplicity. Much reminiscent of New England girls schools of the nineties lingers. Miss Marcy, who succeeded her in 1953, carries on the tradition of high scholastic achievement, and has added to and strengthened the departments of English, history, and mathematics.

Today, Walnut Hill sends its graduates not only to Wellesley, but to Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Wheaton, Connecticut College. In the intimate and homey atmosphere, the students enjoy dramatics, music, athletics, publications, language clubs, a forum, and a Christian association. See also page 744

MacArthur, the school moved to its new location five miles west of New Bedford to the present 68-acre estate overlooking rolling countryside. Mr. Mulliken, who was appointed in 1953, has increased the enrollment and added new buildings and facilities. Varied athletic programs for both boys and girls, nature study and class and hobby activities are offered. Individualized programs include opportunities for tutorial and remedial work, and graduates enter leading schools.

Burnham School was founded, at the suggestion of President Seelye of Smith College, as a preparatory school under the principalship of Mary A. Burnham and Bessie T. Capen. It was conducted after the death of the former in 1885 by Miss Capen until 1909, when the school divided, with Miss Capen conducting one division under her own name.

Mrs. Emerson, a graduate of the school and of Smith College, assumed the principalship in 1939. The heirs of Miss Burnham and Miss Capen gave her the records of both schools, thus making available the academic reports and names of all alumnae, and again uniting the two schools retaining the name of the original one.

Mrs. Emerson had previously founded and directed The Emerson School for Boys, and also served as principal of The Stoneleigh-Prospect Hill School for fourteen years.

The original Burnham House continues as the main center of activities. Seven other buildings are used for dormitories, infirmary, and academic, social and athletic purposes.

A good reputation for sound work in music has been established; a department of guidance to help in the selection of college or specialized school has been developed; the enrollment has been increased, and the prestige of the school enhanced. There are many extra-curricular programs, among them sports, especially riding; Mensendieck; music, dramatics, language and hobby clubs; and publications. See also pages 746-47

Now sending more than ninety-five per cent of graduates on to college, Mount Hermon was started in an old farmhouse to afford abundant opportunity for a boy to secure an education or preparation for college. In the early years, daily work on the farm or in the building was required. The founder's rigorous ideals of life and training for the guidance of youth continued under Dr. Henry Franklin Cutler, principal from 1890 to 1932. He was succeeded by the late Elliott Speer, a man of liberal religious views, president of The Northfield Schools from 1926, who inaugurated policies quite different from some held by the conservative fundamentalists then on the faculty. David R. Porter was then head master for seven years from 1935.

Mr. Rubendall, head master from 1944, was also appointed to the presidency of The Northfield Schools when in 1955 William E. Park was appointed president of Simmons College.

While this well endowed school offers many scholarships, the tuition charges are related to the family's financial means and abilities.

Graduates enter more than fifty colleges, including Brown, Tufts, Middlebury, Dartmouth, University of Mass., Harvard, Yale, Cornell, M.I.T., R.P.I., Wesleyan, Amherst, Williams, Oberlin. There are many extracurricular activities, including debating, music, various hobby and interest clubs, student publications, and athletics.

With the successfully launched development fund program which to date has supplied funds for several new buildings, horizons continue to broaden. See also page 644

Today largely college preparatory in emphasis, although there is a curriculum preparing for schools of art, music, business and other vocational fields. The first girls lived in Mr. Moody's own home, which was altered to accommodate twenty-five pupils; from this has grown the present school of more than five hundred resident students. During the headship of Mira B. Wilson from 1929, the tone of the school was modernized. Dr. Wilson retired in 1952; Barbara M. Clough then served until the appointment of Edmond S. Meany, Jr. in 1957.

Each girl works 7½ hours a week, and the plan of having some girls whose families can afford to pay up to $1750 to allow scholarship aid for others, is followed as at Mount Hermon. The academic program, with its many opportunities in art, music, home economics, and other electives, prepares the girls for such colleges as Mt. Founded more than a half century ago by Mira Hinsdale Hall and still bearing the imprint of her administrative genius, skill, and tact, the school stems from one established about 1828 by Nancy Hinsdale, the maternal great-aunt of Miss Hall, who later joined her cousin, Emma Willard, in her educational work. Miss Margaret Hall, on the faculty from 1921, who succeeded to the direction on the death of her aunt in 1937, carried on not only the family tradition, the conservative tone and standards of scholarship, but modernized and broadened the curriculum, which now makes special provisions for research projects for gifted students.

Miss Fitch had had successful executive experience on the west coast as well as in the East and came from the head mistress-ship of Oxford School, Hartford, in 1948. The curriculum has been further modernized, with workshops for all of the students. The majority of graduates now go on to college, entering Smith, Wellesley, Vassar, Barnard, Radcliffe, Wheaton, and many others. Among activities are workshops in art, the dance, and dramatics and music as well as student clubs and the student council. For thirty-five years Seaver B. Buck, founder, and Mrs. Buck devoted themselves to the development of this efficient, well-organized college preparatory school. After Mr. Buck's retirement in 1942, Albert Keep, assistant head master for six years was appointed, serving until the following year when he was called to military service. Delano de Windt, alumnus and associated with the school since 1908, succeeded him and did much to develop the physical facilities of Berkshire. Mr. Godman, who had twenty years experience in secondary education, came to Berkshire in 1951 from the head mastership of Germantown Academy. His direction has strengthened the faculty, broadened the curriculum, and through development and construction of new facilities, allowed for the increase in the school's enrollment.

The curriculum, with its many electives, prepares for numerous colleges, including Middlebury, Williams, Yale, Colgate, Cornell, Harvard. The oldest elementary boarding school in America, Fay School was founded in 1866 by Harriet Burnett and Eliza Burnett Fay. Edward Winchester Fay, head master from 1918 for twenty-four years, remains a trustee.

When Mr. and Mrs. Reinke came in 1942, they brought new life and color, a modern outlook, and sympathetic understanding of young boys. Mr. Reinke had taught at The Hill and Indian Mountain Schools before going to Eaglebrook, where he was assistant to the head master from 1937 to 1942. His initiative and vision have shown their effect in tripled enrollment, stabilized finances, new equipment and expanded plant, with completion in 1956 of a new gymnasium-auditorium, and increased scholarship aid.

The vigorous academic program prepares for St. Mark's, Deerfield, and other leading secondary schools. In 1952 a department of guidance was established. Many sports are offered, as well as numerous clubs, organizations, and programs, including music, dramatics, publications, science, craft, and hobby groups, self-help activities, student government. See also page 645

Founded by Joseph Burnett, inspired by the success of St. Paul's and by the desire to have a similar school in his native town of Southborough, St. Mark's is a church school of the parental type. All activities are carried on under one roof. Assured of prestige from the first, it developed steadily in strength and efficiency under the capable management of William E. Peck, head master from 1882 to 1894. His successor, Rev. Dr. William G. Thayer who remained in charge until 1930, zealously maintained the ideals of the school. During his regime the life remained intimate, proscribed; admission rigidly restricted; but in his later years Dr. Thayer became liberal and progressive.

The school from its opening has had a system of monitors, six or seven boys elected from the sixth form who "are the representatives of the school, have certain duties and a general oversight of the life of the boys. They stand for the school ideals and exert their influence and leadership." This is now the center of a student council. Upper school boys have separate rooms. The three lower forms live in dormitories with windowed alcoves.

Francis Parkman, of the historical Boston family, an old St. Mark's boy, in his twelve years as head master brought a new alertness and straightforwardness which won friends in every direction. The life and the curriculum were enriched with military training and elective courses in music, politics, poetry.

The Rev. William Brewster, of a family of churchmen, came to the head mastership early in 1943, resigning in 1948 to head St. Stephen's, a Church school opened in Texas in 1950. Mr. Barber, a graduate who had been on the faculty since 1932 as master in English and Greek and head hockey coach, was appointed head master in 1948. Maintaining high academic standards, he has instituted a program to make the student body represent geographically, socially, and economically, a wider range. While military training has been dropped from the curriculum, Brantwood Camp, staffed entirely by St. Mark's boys and graduates, and attended by over 200 needy boys, has remained an integral part of the educational program.

The strict academic program, including a required classical language, prepares for Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, although many graduates decide to go elsewhere. There is a wide range of extra-curricular activities, among them student government, music, debating, hobby clubs, dramatics, publications, athletics, and Christian and philanthropic organizations.

Oldest secondary boarding school in continuous operation in the country, the Academy was founded by Lieutenant Governor William Dummer of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, who bequeathed his beautiful Byfield home and 360-acre farm for that purpose. Under the celebrated Samuel Moody, who made it a grammar school of the earlier type, so many boys were prepared for "the College" that, between 1768 and 1790, one-fourth of Harvard graduating classes were from the Academy.

It was an unimportant local academy when Charles S. Ingham took over early in the century, and not until 1930 with the coming of Mr. and Mrs. Eames, who had been at Deerfield with Mr. Boyden, did it enter upon its present era of life and vigor. They brought youth, enthusiasm, and steadfastness of purpose to the building of a new school from the old, strengthened the faculty, added to the acreage and buildings, and made it one of the important secondary schools of the country.

It is unusual that four of the teachers whom Mr. Eames first brought with him as young men in 1930 are now serving as deans and department heads. This backlog of loyal and experienced teachers has given the school added stability and effectiveness.

The boys, who now come from every part of the nation, are enrolled widely among the colleges, especially Harvard, Amherst, Brown, Dartmouth, Princeton. There is a program of sports, a student council, the usual publications, and numerous clubs and activities, of which the Glee Club is noteworthy.

Boys are encouraged through their own labors and effort to contribute to the material welfare of the school, and their initiative has supplemented the efforts of the head master in raising the considerable building fund. See also page 636

Mr. Rutenber in 1941 took over the school founded and for forty years directed by Dr. and Mrs. John MacDuffie, and maintained by their son, Malcolm, from 1937. Formerly senior master at Wooster, Mr. Rutenber has brought new life to the school, trebling the enrollment in three years, and lifting the school out of debt. Parents and alumnae have given their enthusiastic cooperation to the present regime.

In 1956 the school purchased a two-building, three-acre estate to augment present facilities and permit expansion of enrollment.

Academic standards are high, with especially successful work in foreign languages and in science and mathematics, and with much independent study on the part of the students. There are special 'fast' sections in foreign languages for the ablest girls. Preparation for college includes practice in 'scanning' reading, note taking, study techniques, and gradual introduction of college-type assignments and of outside readings. Among the colleges entered are Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Radcliffe, Vassar, Smith, Conn. College. Numerous extra-curricular activities include drama, music, several publications, French and science clubs, current events programs, and sports. Much is made of the advantages of Springfield. Dana Hall was founded in 1881 under the Misses Julia A. and Sarah P. Eastman as a preparatory school for Wellesley. Under the leadership of Miss Helen Temple Cooke from 1899 to 1951, the school achieved national prominence. Her breadth of interest led to the founding of the affiliated schools, Tenacre and Pine Manor. Dr. Alfred T. Hill succeeded her in 1951 as director of the Dana Hall Schools. He resigned in 1956.

Mrs. Johnston, with experience at Bennett School and Junior College and at Yenching University, China, became principal of Dana Hall, the preparatory school unit, in 1938. Under her leadership the educational influence of the school has been enhanced. Even while directing such a large school and establishing a well-integrated guidance program, she has maintained a close personal touch with her students. Many states and several foreign countries are represented in the school body. Although most girls prepare for college, many take advantage of the exceptionally strong faculties in art and music. The students make good use of the cultural advantages of Boston.

The development of "fifth subject electives" encourages the able student to add subjects that may be granted advance credit or to extend her interest in art, Bible, philosophy, drama and speech, French, mathematics, music, and writing. See pages 752-53

This was a coeducational Methodist school, and since 1912 only boys have been enrolled. Under Mr. Mattern, former head master of the Irving School, who succeeded Charles L. Stevens in 1955, a thorough-going revision of the college preparatory curriculum has been undertaken with flexibility and opportunities for curricular adjustment to the individual needs of each boy. Graduates enter many colleges and universities throughout the country. A variety of team and other sports, music, publications, and student government are among the extracurricular activities. An outgrowth of the Buxton Country Day School established in N.J. in 1928 by Mrs. Sangster, this was opened in Williamstown in 1947 on the estate she inherited from her father.

The unusually broad courses enable students to make outstanding records at Reed, Radcliffe, Bennington, Williams, Goddard, and other colleges. Programs are planned for individual needs, and there is opportunity for extra and advanced study, as well as for much work in creative arts. Community government, work projects, and a variety of other extra-curricular activities supplement the academic program. A new building, containing classrooms and a faculty apartment, was recently constructed by the students under the guidance of the shop teacher. See page 802

First organized in 1834 as the Worcester County Manual Labor High School by a group of the leading men of Worcester, the school was re-named in 1844. Under the direction of Dr. D. W. Abercrombie for thirty-six years from 1882 it was reorganized as a boys' school with buildings and equipment elaborate for the times, and gained a national reputation, which it has continued to maintain. In 1932 the Lewis J. Warner Memorial Theatre was given to the Academy by Harry Warner, father of Lewis. Dr. LeRoy Archer Campbell, professor of classics in Hiram College, became head master in 1942.

Mr. Piper, formerly head master of Ashley Hall in South Carolina, succeeded in 1954 Paul K. Phillips, who had been appointed in 1950. The successful four year college preparatory program, with strong foundation work in science and math, sends many graduates to Worcester Polytechnic and Harvard, with others going to Brown, Boston U, Clark, Dartmouth, and others. Special attention is given to student guidance and college placement by faculty members especially qualified to do this work. The extra-curricular program emphasizes athletics, and there are also various clubs, dramatics, music, and school publications. See also pages 651

This seven-week summer session of the Burnham School affords girls of high school age the opportunity to review or to earn credits in any regular academic subjects and to profit from studying in an intellectually and culturally stimulating environment. Art and music are emphasized, along with outdoor sports, especially swimming.

The teaching staff is drawn from the faculty of the regular session of The Mary A. Burnham School in Northampton, Mass., supplemented by instructors selected from other schools. In a healthful climate, ideal recreational facilities, cultural activities, and social contacts are under responsible arrangement and supervision. Activities include dances with guests from the Officers' Candidate School of the Navy, and attendance at music festivals, tennis tournaments, and summer theatre. See also page 756

This unique institution which has so strong an appeal to head masters has created for itself a definite place in the modern educational system. Tutorial in function, giving boys virtually individual instruction, it avoids the cramming of the regulation tutoring school. In addition to the usual secondary school program, numerous special courses are available. From its inception the school has afforded boys the opportunity to save a year in qualifying for college.

With adaptability and foresight, Mr. Hatch, a man of inexhaustible energy, former member of the faculties of Bowdoin and Cornell, devotes himself zealously to his school and his boys. Graduates are successful at many colleges. See pages 654-56

Now an independent priory of the English Benedictine Congregation, this school founded as the School of St. Gregory the Great, has attained rank among the foremost New England preparatory schools. Both priory and school are American in personnel.

Father Diman, prior of the Community until 1940, was founder and long head master of the neighboring St. George's. To his administrative genius, his keen and flexible mind, and serenity, the school owes much. In 1951, the Very Rev. Graham became Prior. Father E. Gregory Borgstedt headed the school from 1942 to 1951, and Father Aelred Wall until 1957 when Father van Winkle was appointed acting headmaster.

Portsmouth Priory trains boys from discriminating Catholic families for college and for life. The curriculum, with its emphasis on English, mathematics, languages, and Christian doctrine, prepares for Georgetown, Princeton, Harvard, U of Pa., and other leading colleges. Among activities are a full complement of sports, several publications, music, dramatics, and clubs. See page 652

St. George's was founded by the Rev. John B. Diman, who later established Portsmouth Priory. Under the able administration of Stephen P. Cabot, a master in the school from 1901 and head master from 1917 to 1926, the school attained high academic standing and fame for its superb architecture. Dr. Willet L. Eccles, succeeding J. Vaughan Merrick in 1943 after service at Columbia and Andover where reforms and administrative improvements reflected his scientific training, effected at St. George's improved standards and business methods. Mr. Buell, alumnus and former faculty member, became the first clergyman to head the school since the founder.

Emphasizing English and inter-relating the various courses, St. George's successfully prepares not only for Yale but also for Brown, Princeton, the University of Pa., Harvard, Cornell, and others. Extra-curricular activities stress service groups, organization committees, clubs, athletics, and publications. See page 652

Opened as Friends School in Portsmouth, this institution was re-established in Providence in 1819 through the energy and generosity of Moses Brown, who also helped establish Brown University. It was further endowed by his son, Obadiah, and the present name adopted in 1904. The school remained coeducational until 1926, when the Moses Brown School Committee assumed charge of the Lincoln School and the girls department was transferred there.

Upon the retirement in 1955 of L. Ralston Thomas, who since 1925 brought the school distinction through liberal ideals and sound standards, Mr. George C. St. John, Jr. was appointed, and in 1957 Robert N. Cunningham assumed the acting headship.

While continuing to conform in some ways to the strictness of its tradition in preparing for college, the school offers a considerable variety of elective courses. Graduates enter many institutions of higher learning, including Brown, Harvard, Amherst, the University of R.I., and Bowdoin.

The school has upper and lower divisions, the former with its own residence department. There are many extra-curricular programs, among them camera, press, science and chess clubs, dramatics, music, school publications, and numerous sports. See page 653

Administered by the Brothers of the Sacred Heart, Mount Saint Charles is diocesan but not financed by the diocese. Emphasizing traditional subject matter, the high school offers two college preparatory programs as well as general and commercial curricula. Most preparatory graduates enter Providence College or Our Lady of Providence Seminary, but others go on to the universities of R.I. and Conn., Boston College, and Holy Cross. Extra-curricular activities stress sports, debate and public speaking, dramatics, and music.

This preparatory school was founded by Theodate Pope, Mrs. John Wallace Riddle, to restore to boys' education some of the features of the old New England community and farm life. A talented architect, designer of Westover School, she devoted ten years of her life and most of her wealth to the architectural and landscape design of the school and its setting. The school opened with Francis M. Froelicher as Provost and closed under the Rev. W. Brooke Stabler on the outbreak of the war. It was re-opened in 1948 under Mr. Pierpont, who for twelve years prior to his naval service was at St. Paul's School, Baltimore. Immediately before coming to Avon, he was on the faculty of Columbia Univ. He has been most successful in rebuilding the staff—a counsellor or 'school father' to each group of ten boys, assuring individual consideration and attention. Each boy chooses his own project and devotes some time to the work of the school community. The varied and extensive acreage provides opportunity for forestry, fishing, and hunting, and the boys participate as citizens in all operations of the community.

Graduates of the curriculum, which is now entirely college preparatory, enter many colleges and universities throughout the country. See also page 657

Mr. Sheriff, for some years dean and since 1923 head master, has developed a well organized junior school offering work in the upper elementary and lower high school years, has put the administration and scholastic work on a sound basis, and has greatly increased the plant. Small classes and supervision of each boy's progress are supplemented by individual instruction when advisable. Graduates enter not only Yale, but also Harvard, the University of Conn., and many others. Dramatics and publications, as well as many student clubs and a full range of athletics, are emphasized. In 1843, Miss Sarah Porter, sister of President Porter of Yale, began this school which bears her name. Using educational techniques ahead of her time, she made it pre-eminent through the influence of "her own unusual character. She gave to hundreds of the best born women of the land that poise and stability of character, that combination of learning and good manners, which is a mark of the noblest American womanhood." After her death in 1900, her nephew, Robert Porter Keep, and then Mrs. Keep, conducted the school, being succeeded by their son until 1943. In that year, the centenary, the school was turned over to a nonprofit corporation. The Centennial Scholarship Fund, created in 1943, the Second Century Scholarship Fund, and also the general endowment permit liberal scholarships to deserving girls.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward L. Johnson, who for twenty years directed Lawrence School in L.I., brought a new attitude and a more modern atmosphere. Mr. French, formerly on the staff, with Mrs.

French, succeeded them in 1954. The preparatory curriculum enrolling about four-fifths of the girls, prepares for Vassar, Smith, Bryn Mawr, Wellesley, Radcliffe, Barnard, and other leading colleges. A more general program meets the requirements of other four-year colleges as well as those of junior colleges and specialized schools.

Glee club, dramatics, orchestra, school publications, kindergarten, charities, a current events club, and athletics are among student activities.

Established by the English Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees in Wallingford on Choate Farm, and moved to Greenwich in 1900, this school bears the firm imprint of its founder. Possessed of broad scholarship, a masculine grasp of mind, keen human interest in her girls, graduates, and alumnae, an unusual teacher who used the classics to inspire her pupils, she created a school unlike any other. Mary E. Lowndes, also British, a skilled horsewoman, a literary scholar, was co-head from 1910 to 1938.

From 1937, Mrs. Eugenia B. Jessup, an alumna, and Mrs. Constance Evers shared executive responsibility until the resignation of the latter in 1945. Sold in 1950 by Miss Ruutz-Rees to alumnae, the school is now operated by trustees. Miss Helen Williamson succeeded Mrs. Jessup in the summer of 1953, and served until her death in 1957. Miss Alice Eaton McBee, II, was appointed Headmistress in 1958.

The conservative, closely-integrated curriculum stresses original use of information in projects and creative work; with electives in art, music, typing and shorthand for students preparing for junior colleges. Graduates enter Vassar, Wellesley,

The air of complacent repose long worn by the city has been changed by the airplane and other new industries that center here. The vigor of its life pulsates in new extensions to the north and west and blossoms periodically in a beautiful bridge or a notable building. When Mark Twain, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Charles Dudley Warner lived here, Hartford well maintained literary pretensions. Watkinson School has 95 acres in suburban Hartford. Enrolling daughters of leading local families, this was made a community project in 1929 and reorganized as a country day school under Ruth E. Guernsey. Mrs. Vachel Lindsay, widow of the poet, was head mistress from 1938 to 1942, when Elizabeth Fitch succeeded. Miss Graff, appointed in 1948, had previously been principal of Louisville Collegiate School.

The curriculum, with its emphasis on liberal studies, prepares for Smith, Skidmore, Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Connecticut, and other colleges. The varied extra-curricular program emphasizes publications, music, dramatics, as well as French, Spanish, political science, and community service clubs.

One of the nation's great schools, simplicity, self-reliance, and directness of purpose today characterize Kent as when it was founded fifty years ago. The Rev. Frederick H. Sill, a man of extraordinary genius and vigor, started the school in a small farm building. He developed the Kent plan of self-help, by which the boys do practically all the work around the place, and a sliding scale of tuition fees, whereby patrons are assessed enough to meet the year's budget in accordance with their ability to pay. Today Kent has an impressive plant, built by the donations of many devoted alumni and friends, including a fine Norman chapel, an architectural gem, the center of the school's religious life.

The present rector and head master, the Rev. John O. Patterson, was appointed in 1949. He has maintained the high academic standards while expanding the curriculum and the school plant. In 1954 a new sports building was completed, and one year later a library and an auditorium. A rigorous curriculum, emphasizing the traditional academic subjects, is followed from the second form, or eighth grade. There are special honor sections, and a tutorial plan for collateral reading for all boys grades 9-12.

Graduates enter Princeton, Yale, Cornell, the University of Pa., Harvard, Trinity, and other colleges and universities.

The earnest, studious, devout boys who make up the student body enjoy many extra-curricular activities, including sports, numerous clubs, dramatics, and publications. See also page 563

With its own board of trustees, South Kent is a distinct organization, though the school was founded by the late Father Sill and shows his influence. Samuel S. Bartlett, a former Kent boy, head master since the opening, fostering characteristic features of simplicity, high scholastic standards, and a sliding scale for tuition, built up a considerable following, and an excellent reputation for the school.

Mr. Wister, graduate of St. Paul's and of Princeton, on the South Kent faculty from 1941, and acting head in 1953-54, was appointed to his present position in 1955. The curriculum prepares for Williams, Princeton, Trinity, Yale, Brown, Cornell, Harvard, and other leading colleges and universities.

The new library, with reading and study rooms and audio-visual equipment was made possible through the gifts of students, faculty, alumni, parents, and friends of the school.

The school bears the name of its founder, Maria H. Hotchkiss, widow of the inventor of the famous machine gun, who provided plant and endowment. Under Dr. Huber Gray Buehler, affectionately known as "The King," the school developed its sturdy character, becoming a stronghold of the classics and book learning, and one of the foremost preparatory schools. Each year the King declared, "There is only one rule in this school, 'Be a gentleman!'" and the implications of this one rule have since been the keynote of this school.

The original school buildings, joined by a corridor 325 ft. long, are still in use, to which have been added many additional structures. Many gifts built a new dining hall and gym and a library has been provided by the munificence of the Ford family, among whom are alumni. In 1955 the Rev. Mr. Chappell, former Dean of St. Stephen's Cathedral, Harrisburg, Pa., and previously on the Hotchkiss faculty, was appointed upon the retirement of George Van Santvoord who during three decades maintained the rigorous academic standards while liberalizing the curriculum and broadening student programs. Art, music, dramatics, and public speaking have assumed greater prominence, and the extra-curricular programs have been broadened to ensure every boy's participation. A carefully chosen faculty affords efficient college preparation with more than usual opportunities in the classics, and ample opportunity for able boys to accelerate, and seniors to gain advanced work approximating the college level in such subjects as English, mathematics, ancient and modern languages, and science.

President Timothy Dwight of Yale was intimately associated with the founding of the school and relationships with Yale have continued very close during the years. Yale is still the most popular college at Hotchkiss, although many graduates go to Princeton, Williams, Harvard, Brown and other leading colleges.

Athletics, especially winter sports, are stressed for health and recreation, and use is made of the spacious plant and open countryside. There are also student organizations in music, publications, dramatics, and various hobbies.

One of the earliest boarding schools for young boys to be characterized by flexibility and by interest in the individual, this was established by Francis Behn Riggs, Groton graduate and friend of Dr. Peabody.

Mr. Doolittle, appointed Riggs' successor in 1939, served for four years in the army, returning in 1945. During his administration the enrollment has been doubled, and an increasing number of graduates have been sent on to leading secondary schools.

The curriculum is conservative and thorough, yet not old-fashioned. Much is made of outdoor activities, especially through the active Nature Club, and there is a vigorous sports program, all made possible by the country setting.

In 1660 this academy was established on the bequest of Edward Hopkins, seven times governor of Connecticut Colony. Early graduates entered Harvard, but after the founding of Yale, it naturally prepared primarily for that institution, and between 1795 and 1921 every president of Yale was associated with Hopkins as graduate, rector, or trustee.

Under Dr. George B. Lovell from 1916, the school entered upon a new era. Breaking with the two-century academic routine, he revised, expanded, and enriched the classical curriculum, and when the school moved to its present site in 1925 inaugurated a full country day program, and built up a faculty unusual in its breadth of experience. Upon his retirement in 1953, Mr. Sherk, after sixteen years at Milton Academy, succeeded him. He has continued to develop the curriculum, adding new courses in art, music, special English, mathematics, and physical education, and has completed a building program permitting a larger enrollment.

After completing the solid academic program, graduates now enter not only Yale, the University of Conn., and Dartmouth, but also Brown, Trinity, the University of Pa., and many other colleges and universities. Student activities emphasize publications, music, and athletics.

Long holding high rank among Catholic boarding schools for boys, and appealing to Catholic families not only in New England but also from throughout the country, Canterbury is conducted by Catholic laymen under the patronage of the Archbishop of Hartford. The work accomplished by the first head master, Jesuit trained Dr. Hume, was recognized by the Pope in 1938 when he was made Knight of St. Gregory.

Dr. Sheehan, his successor in 1948, came to the school after thirteen years on the Deerfield faculty and two as dean of freshmen at Williams. Boys are adequately prepared for college and trained in the doctrines and practices of the church. Recent developments include introduction of a honors course and advanced mathematics, and additions to faculty and plant. Graduates enter not only Catholic institutions, but also Yale, Cornell,

Williams, and other nonsectarian colleges and universities. Music, art, debating, dramatics, and hobbies are among the extra-curricular activities. See also page 665

This boarding school was founded by one of the great school masters, William E. Peck, who left St. Mark's in order more fully to carry out his ideals in a new environment. William Beach Olmsted, his successor, enlisted the interest of people of wealth and gave the school social standing. Halleck Lefferts, coming from Thacher School, California, to head Pomfret in 1929, brought warmth and sincerity, broadening and liberalizing the curriculum and raising the scholastic standing. Later he introduced a practical work program involving building construction and work in machine and carpentry shop and on the school farm.

Mr. Twichell, formerly assistant to the dean of Yale College, and on the Pomfret faculty since 1949, was appointed head master in 1951 when Dexter K. Strong resigned to accept the headship of the Lakeside School in Seattle, Washington.

The curriculum, stressing alike liberal studies and sciences, and supplemented by shop, crafts, art, and music, prepares for Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, but some graduates attend Middlebury, the University of Va., Williams, and other colleges.

A student-faculty council may take any action it considers necessary to promote the welfare of the school community. Extra-curricular activities, including many sports, are varied.

The Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Bigelow began this school as a little tutoring group in their home, and his pervading kindness combined with her untiring energy immediately attracted students. Their son has been head master since the death of the founder in 1937, and with the able assistance of his wife devotes himself to the conduct of a well ordered school with much outdoor life.

The boys are thoroughly grounded in fundamentals and prepared for secondary boarding schools, including Andover, Choate, Deerfield, Holderness, Proctor, St. Mark's, Shady Side, and Westminster. Grades five through eight are divided into fast and slow sections, and there is an accelerated program in languages for especially able students.

Remedial reading, at an additional charge, is under Page Sharp, who directs similar courses in neighboring schools. See page 667

Under Mr. Langdon, who came as head master in 1942 after nineteen years at Pomfret as chaplain and instructor, a real interest in the boys is apparent. An extensive building and development program was completed in 1951 to celebrate the golden anniversary of the school.

The solid, rather traditional curriculum successfully prepares for Yale and Harvard, as well as for Williams, Princeton, M.I.T., Dartmouth, and other colleges. Extra-curricular activities in addition to the work program emphasize publications, public speaking, dramatics, a religious society, and sports. See also page 666

Ethel Walker opened this school in Lakewood, N.J., but moved it to its present site in 1917. After her marriage in 1921 to Dr. Terry Smith, Miss Walker controlled the school through a resident head. Long popular with wealthy New York families, the school took on a new tone during the regime from 1938 to 1944 of Mrs. Elliott Speer, who did much to develop in the girls a sense of responsibility and self-discipline, allowing them an increased amount of freedom.

Mrs. Galbraith, who came from the assistant principalship of the Cathedral School of St. Mary, has continued Mrs. Speer's policies, added warmth and human understanding, and widened the geographical distribution of patrons.

The school was reorganized not for profit in 1953 and the policy is now determined by a Board of Trustees. In 1957, Miss Walker, Academic Dean, was appointed acting headmistress to succeed Natalie G. Galbraith, former headmistress.

The long maintained standards of college preparation continue and there are excellent opportunities in art, music, literature and languages. Many graduates enter Smith and Vassar, as well as other leading colleges throughout the country.

Much is made of outdoor life, and intramural sports, especially hockey, tennis, and golf, vie with the longtime favorite, riding. The school has student government, several clubs for special skills, publications, and service organizations.

Founded by William Lee Cushing, the inspiration of the school lay in the ancient Uppingham School, established 1584, in Rutland, England. On Mr. Cushing's retirement in 1920 the head master-ship was assumed by L. G. Pettee, long a member of the faculty, who in turn was succeeded by the late Raymond Richards McOrmond, head master until 1936, when he was succeeded by Arthur Milliken.

Under Mr. Milliken's vigorous and wise leadership, Westminster developed the plant, strengthened the curriculum and the faculty. After twenty years of distinguished service to the school, Mr. Milliken resigned, and Mr. Keyes, for twelve years his assistant, was appointed. Today Westminster boys enjoy to an unusual degree contacts with the head master and the faculty. Informal sports have been introduced and the prefect system revived. There is some effort to give the boys an understanding of how the school is run, and they may share in the activities of carpenter, gardener, etc., in the upkeep of the school. The musical boy has many opportunities to hear and create, and pleasant social relations are maintained with nearby schools. College preparatory work is of high standard and graduates enter the universities of Va. and Pa., Princeton, Harvard, Cornell, and other colleges and universities, though the Yale influence and attraction are naturally predominant.

Recent improvements and new construction, the cost of which was borne by friends giving to the school more than a million dollars since 1936, have added to the efficiency and attractiveness of the plant. Facilities for publications, music, discussion groups, and hobby clubs, as well as for athletics, are extensive. See also page 668

Judge William Gardner Choate, brother of the famed New York attorney, Joseph Choate, established this school, which is now among the most distinguished preparatory schools in the country. Its influence, still growing, was founded on the forty year regime of Dr. George C. St. John. His son, the present head, who joined the faculty in 1935 and was appointed his successor in 1947 on the fiftieth anniversary of the school, continues the traditional pioneering for individual education.

College entrance requirements are kept in view in planning each boy's program, but with the flexible system and unusually broad curriculum he may take subjects chosen from different forms to suit his individual needs and interests. Separate divisions for honor students, opportunities for creativity in the musical and literary programs, and facilities in art, mechanics, and aeronautics are available. Close student-faculty relations and personal contact with each boy's family play an important part. Graduates enter Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth, Williams, and other leading colleges and universities.

Athletics gauged to each boy's level, a cottage plan, daily chapel service, and a very wide variety of extra-curricular activities further characterize the school. See also page 671

Founded by Lillias Rumsey Sanford in Seneca Falls, N.Y. and conducted by her in Cornwall from 1907 until her death in 1940, Rumsey Hall long bore the imprint of her interest in her boys. Mr. Schereschewsky, after eight years of teaching and administration, including two years as head master of Suffield Academy, purchased the school in 1941 and incorporated it not for profit. After war service he returned in 1945, and in 1949 moved the school from Cornwall to its present location. While limiting enrollment to boys of normal or better than normal intelligence, Rumsey Hall provides a complete battery of diagnostic tests and intensified remedial instruction for those who require it.

Graduates have entered St. George's, Andover, Exeter, Lawrenceville, Loomis, Gunnery, Hackley, Westminster, and other preparatory schools. There are many extra-curricular activities, and much is made of team sports. See also page 675

Started by a group of parents as a local Collegiate Institute for Young Ladies, St. Margaret's was incorporated as a church school under its present name in 1875. From the first it has attracted a discriminating clientele, and students now come from many parts of the United States and from some foreign countries. The spirit of the school today is in large part due to Alberta C. Edell's quiet, unassuming personality. When she retired in 1948, she had had 35 years at St. Margaret's, for 25 of which she had been head mistress.

The present head mistress, appointed in 1950, did graduate work at Columbia and in Paris, where she conducted her own school for American girls, and taught at the University of Me. and at Miss Porter's. Graduates of St. Margaret's School have entered Wellesley, Smith, Connecticut College, Skidmore, Vassar, Wheaton, where they have brought distinction to their school. Extra-curricular activities, including French, Spanish and Latin clubs, music, dramatics, sports, dance, and publications supplement the academic work. See also page 759

To the creation and development of this school Horace Dutton Taft, brother of the President, devoted 46 years. He began as a lawyer, but teaching drew him in 1887 to Yale as a tutor of Latin, then, three years later, to establishing his own school. He was a great head master, a tremendous worker, and inspired his boys to work, stamping his personality upon the school. Under him the only salvation was through hard work. But he won confidence by his geniality and large-heartedness, his comradeship in the classroom and on the playground. In 1927 he placed the school under the control of a board of trustees.

The selection of the present head to succeed him upon his retirement in 1936 was based on Mr. Cruikshank's success at his own school which he had established in nearby Washington after teaching at Hopkins Grammar and The Gunnery. Under him the school has continued in the tradition of the founder.

The emphasis remains on college preparation, with many graduates entering Yale, although others attend Brown, Princeton, Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard, and similar colleges and universities. The curriculum, with honors sections for more proficient boys, is rather classical in its subjects, although stress is placed on sciences. There are numerous student clubs as well as extra-curricular music, debating, current events, student government, and a full program of interscholastic and intramural sports. A new gymnasium was completed in 1956.

The patronage is well distributed, and the regional scholarship program is growing. See also page 673

Five of the Loomis family in 1874 drew up a charter for a school on what had been since 1639 the Loomis homestead, "for the free and gratuitous education of all persons of the age of twelve years and upwards to twenty years in all the departments of learning which are now taught or hereafter may be taught in the various grades of schools in this country . . . so far as the funds of the institute will permit." While members of the Loomis family and residents of Windsor were given preference under the charter, the school rapidly developed a wide geographical distribution of patronage.

The vigor and strength of personality of N. Horton Batchelder, head master from 1912 to 1949, did much to establish the tone and character of the school. Pioneering in the development of self-help and student government programs, emphasizing art and music with the guidance of Evelyn Longman Batchelder, maintaining strong relationships between school and community, giving faculty members a part in administration, and undertaking a building program leading to an architecturally harmonious whole,—Batchelder made Loomis one of the leading college preparatory schools. On his retirement, William Speer succeeded. Mr. Grubbs, on the faculty since 1930 and long director of studies, became head master in 1952.

A distinctive feature of the college preparatory curriculum is a required course for seniors in the humanities, with visiting lecturers and faculty members presenting topics in music, art, religion, and other fields. Many graduates enter Yale, with others attending Middlebury, Princeton, Harvard, Wesleyan, Dartmouth, Trinity.

The boarding students participate in the useful labor of the school, caring for their own quarters, the classrooms, and the school grounds and athletic fields. Other extra-curricular projects include several publications, numerous clubs, dramatics, music, and hobbies, as well as settlement house workers and hospital medical aides groups. See also page 674

Becoming in 1942 a junior college exclusively for women, Cazenovia gives a variety of liberal arts courses as well as terminal programs of vocational training. The school has adopted the core curriculum with contemporary civilization and the humanities approached through 'great' books, paintings, and music, and other required courses include Personal Philosophy, physical education, and either mathematics or music. Transfer graduates have entered Syracuse, Skidmore, St. Lawrence, Presbyterian School of Nursing, and many others. The many activities include publications, music, art, dramatics, and clubs, as well as such annual highlights as Autumn Day, Winter Carnival, and May Day. Drawing its enrollment from all the states and from many foreign countries, this large academy was directed for many years by Gen. Milton F. Davis. His son-in-law, Col. Frank A. Pattillo, was appointed superintendent in 1938. He enlarged the plant and inaugurated an efficient system of scholastic, military, and athletic training.

In 1951 Gen. Dingley became superintendent, and two years later Mr. Chappell succeeded T. F. Reidy as dean. Primarily preparatory with graduates entering many different colleges, the school also offers a terminal general curriculum. A guidance department with an individual counseling plan and a remedial reading course are included in the program. Extra-curricular activities emphasize sports for all cadets, but there are also various subject and hobby clubs. The Junior and Intermediate Schools have separate quarters.

Established as the Cornwall Heights School by the Rev. Louis P. Ledoux, from 1872 this was directed by Oren Cobb, whose successor, Dr. Carlos H. Stone, conducted it until 1912 as the Stone School. The present name dates from 1922, when Alvan R. Duerr was head, and is taken from the mountain where the school is located. Anson Barker was head master from 1932 until 1951. Mr. Leonard, after seventeen years at Putney, where for ten years he directed the academic program and college guidance, succeeded in 1955 Burke Boyce, head master for two years.

The school offers, in addition to the basic college preparatory curriculum, a modified work program and a number of activities. The striking location and neighboring forests are utilized for outdoor activities, and there is a full program of athletics.

Graduates enter Lafayette, Union, St. Lawrence, Syracuse, Amherst, Brown, Harvard, Bowdoin, R. P. I., and many other colleges. See also page 675

An outgrowth of the activities of the Smiley family and formerly a preparatory school, since 1937 Mohonk has enrolled younger boys. Solid academic preparation sends graduates to Mount Hermon, Oakwood, and other secondary schools. Individual hobbies are encouraged; informal activities, such as trail-following, climbing, fishing, cycling, camping, riding, are an integral part of the informal school life. In 1958 the school was transferred from Mohonk Lake to the present site 15 miles distant.

Supported by the State, the Protestant Federation, and Catholic Charities, and admitting boys through public and private welfare agencies, children's courts, parents, and therapists, the school is characterized by the cottage plan, remedial assistance, work experience, industrial arts, trade training, living experiences based on clinical understanding of emotional problems and individual treatment.

Founded and for nearly half a century conducted by Eliza and Sarah Masters, on the Post Road overlooking the river, in 1916 the school became a nonprofit corporation, and in 1920 was made over to the alumnae. Under the direction of Evelina Pierce, a New Englander, who served from 1927 until 1945, a more liberal academic and social spirit was inaugurated. Mrs. Elliott Speer, her successor, proved a sage and successful leader. Upon her retirement in 1950, Miss Cochran, for eight years headmistress at St. Anne's School, Va., was appointed.

Throughout its history "Dobbs" has always enrolled girls from various parts of the country, many through alumnae, to avail of the educative value of diversified contacts. The atmosphere of individual development is stressed in the efficient college preparatory curricula I and II, which prepare respectively for CEB college and for other four year colleges and junior colleges and specialized schools. There are electives in the arts, music, cooking, typing, and other subjects. The academic standards permit a high percentage of graduates to enter leading colleges. Groups in drama, music, and the dance, publications, and outdoor sports are among activities stressed. See also page 762

Hoosac is a monument to Dr. Edward D. Tibbits, rector until 1930, and his father, who devoted their lives and their fortunes to its maintenance. Originally the local choir school of the parish, and becoming a boarding school in 1892, it was reorganized in 1923. Rev. James L. Whitcomb was director for 11 years, when he was succeeded in 1941 by Rev. Meredith B. Wood, under whose direction the school occupied the present 500-acre estate. In 1957, Dr. Cooley became headmaster. A wholesome life with opportunities for work about the grounds and projects is provided, while stress is placed upon the college preparatory work with a four-year program. Rigor and vitality characterize this college preparatory program. Founded in 1905 as the migratory Lake Placid School and since 1925 operated under the Lake Placid Club Educational Foundation, today's school is the creation of its headmaster. Coming in 1954 from Tabor Academy, Mr. Howard has doubled the enrollment, improved the plant, raised the revenues and provided an exacting preparatory course in the secondary grades.

Students are offered opportunities for initiative and responsibility through a broadly based student government program and courses include public speaking, note-taking, shorthand and typing and library procedures. Funds for scholarships for boys of promise are provided by the Foundation and a strong Board of Trustees has aided the growth of the school which now attracts able students from a wide area through a liberalized admissions policy. A full program of athletics is carried and the woodland and mountain areas are utilized with unusual opportunities for winter sports. See page 678-79

This school, attracting a discriminating clientele not only from the Hudson and Mohawk valleys but from throughout the country, was established as the non-sectarian St. John's by the first Bishop of central New York. Twelve years later, military training was added to the program. During the long regime of Gen. William Verbeck, head master from 1888 to 1930, the name reverted to that of the old academy, founded in 1835, in the buildings of which the school had begun.

General Barker assumed the office of superintendent in 1947, and Mr. MacDonald, formerly guidance director and head of the mathematics department, was appointed head master in 1952. The curriculum, with emphasis not only on science and mathematics, but also on liberal arts, prepares for many colleges, including Union, Colgate, Dartmouth, Cornell, Williams, Hobart.

This school was founded by the Rt. Rev. David H. Greer "for boys and girls of Protestant parentage who, for various reasons, may be in need of a home and school." Children are admitted to the cottage community according to their social and financial needs. Older students supplement their academic work by courses in home economics or shop, and through on-the-job training assignments in Greer's unique vocational program they play an important part in the actual operation of this rural community of which the school is the center.

During its first 25 years, under its founder and present head master, Millbrook has grown from the original farm buildings to its present new and adequate plant, including a well stocked library, efficient laboratories, new gym, and spacious campus. Mr. Pulling has formerly taught in such dissimilar schools as Groton and Avon, which resulted in his broad and liberal spirit toward traditional school activities. Interest in the individuality and aptitudes of the boys, and success in meeting their needs and in encouraging cultural interests and worthwhile hobbies are outstanding features. Every boy, under the Community Service plan, shares responsibility for the functioning of the school community and are assigned by the Student Council.

The academic emphasis is on college preparation, and graduates enter Princeton, Yale, Harvard, and other leading colleges. See also page 680

Darrow was started as The Lebanon School by a board of trustees which included the head masters of Deerfield, Hotchkiss, and Taft, and was for six years under the direction of Charles H. Jones. In 1938 on the death of the president, Charles S. Haight, who had given financial and moral support, Mr. Heyniger took over as president, head master, and treasurer. Prepared at Lawrenceville for Princeton, after teaching in China and graduate study at Columbia he went with General Motors, then had two years as assistant to the head at Lawrenceville. Renaming the school for a family prominent among the first Shaker settlers, he restored and renovated grounds and buildings and made extensive changes in the personnel and policy. Graduates are prepared for Princeton, Hobart, Middlebury, Babson, Cornell, Yale, and other colleges. There are the usual athletics, a well organized work program, and various student clubs and organizations.

Formerly the New Rochelle School and Kindergarten, assuming its present name in 1949, this was founded by a group of parents. French is begun in kindergarten and continues through the grades. Thorough instruction in the basic subjects, including science, Latin, mathematics, and history, prepares the pupils for secondary schools. Mrs. Nouss followed in 1956 Mrs. Mildred L. Berea, principal from 1953, and successor to Emily Scott Thornton.

NEW YORK CITY, N.Y. Pop 7,891,957. New York continues to lead, and is a wonder of, the world. It is not strange that this polyglot conglomeration, the largest city and certainly the most striking manifestation of civilization extant, should play host to the United Nations, now ensconced in its handsome headquarters overlooking the East River. Internationalism here has podium, and although in conference idealism and visionary projects are unfolded, heed is yet paid to dictates from the great world capitals. While the city encompasses the greatest financial trade and activities concentration, Washington still holds New York's former prerogatives of control with its power newly aggrandized by the war.

The handiwork of man changes as rapidly as the populace. Stupendous creations dazzle the outlander,—bridges thrown across great stretches of marsh and water, subways that tunnel through miles of rock and under river. Approaching from the sea, the skyline is the marvel of the continental visitor. The air man, before coming to earth on the city landing field, sees a citadel of watch towers among estuaries and marshes over which, to sprawling suburbs, great viaducts reach fingerlike.

Historically the city of the Dutch, of Tammany, the Vanderastors, of La Guardia, today the native New Yorker is a rarity. The greatest Jewish city in the world, less than half the population are Jews, with half a million Russians and about as many Italians. Salaried executives rear their families in Westchester, Long Island, or Jersey. The great mass of New Yorkers sleep far from midday's madding crowd and, through underground tubes in which they struggle for place, are belched out and shot up in express elevators to office or loft. Art and book collections perpetuate the fame and fortunes of Rockefeller, Frick, Morgan and Whitney, offering great educational opportunities.

Museums and collections representing the world's cultures, past and present, are inducements for students who come from afar. Music, Art, Drama and Literary leadership excel here amidst a wealth of institutions where educational, medical, scientific and sociological research attest to the work of foundations, philanthropies, and associations of learning.

The colleges and universities of the city are centered uptown, —Columbia, Barnard on Morningside Heights; the College of the City of New York a little to the north; New York University and its Hall of Fame on University Heights across the Harlem; Fordham, Catholic, near Bronx Park. Most of the great graduate schools, law, medicine, education, except for Columbia's Teachers College, are scattered about the lower city, especially around Washington Square.

The professional and vocational schools lie generally to the south, between Central Park and 42nd Street. The private schools range from the conservative and haughty to the most progressive and radical. Some of the girls' schools provide residence for those from a distance who are attracted by the varied musical, dramatic, and other advantages of the metropolis. A few schools including two or three of the oldest in the city lie west of Central Park. But the more recently established schools that appeal to the socially elect are all to the east. Brearley and Chapin are in the reclaimed smart region bordering on the East River.

As a matter of convenience the schools of Long Island, including Brooklyn, are treated as a group. Staten Island schools will be found listed under New York City.

This school, established by Samuel Brearley to provide more substantial education and more thorough preparation for college than were offered by most girls' schools of the time, has always had on its board men prominent in educational and financial circles of N.Y. James G. Croswell was head master from 1887 until his death in 1915. Henry Dwight Sedgwick and Carl Van Doren, who followed him, were of scholarly attainment and literary distinction. Mrs. Rustin McIntosh, head mistress, from 1930, resigned to become dean of Barnard College in 1947. Miss Mitchell is a Scots-woman with experience in the English departments of Smith, Sarah Lawrence, and Barnard.

Brearley is still in the forefront among preparatory schools in scholastic standards, and succeeds in cultivating intellectual interests among its pupils, who come from solid families of taste and culture. Since 1929 in a ten-story modern building overlooking the East River, its lower floors known as "decks," the school offers a curriculum integrating many of the academic subjects and affording strong work in music and the arts. Graduates enter Radcliffe, Smith, Wellesley, Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, and other leading women's colleges. Among extra-curricular activities are dramatics, carpentry, sports, and community and welfare projects.

This interesting teacher-owned and managed experimental school is inter-racial and inter-denominational. It was founded by Caroline Pratt, who contributed much to the methodology of modern education for young children and whose plans for developing serious intellectual interests from natural instincts have been made widely known through her various publications. The school emphasizes constructive social experience, an integrated curriculum, and an individual reading program. Working with the staff are teachers-in-training from Bank Street College, NYU, and Mills College.

Oldest existing private secondary school in the U.S., Collegiate traces its history back to the early settlement of Manhattan by the Dutch. For 250 years, with only one interruption when during the Revolution the city was occupied by the British, it was maintained as a parish day school. In 1887 Collegiate became a grammar school; in 1891 preparatory; and after 1894 boys only. Incorporated in 1945 as a separate institution, the school is governed by a board, one third of whom represent the Consistory of the Collegiate Dutch Reformed Church.

Since 1953 a new primary school has been constructed, an art studio and music facilities added, and the library expanded.

Mr. Parkhill, who succeeded Cornelius Boocock in 1934, is a former president of the Country Day School Headmasters' Association and former chairman of the National Council of Independent Schools, on which Council he is a member of the Executive Committee. He also serves as trustee of a number of leading private schools and the College Entrance Examination Board. The thorough academic program prepares for leading colleges, including Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Amherst, Williams, Cornell.

Founded as a preparatory school for Columbia College, and under the direction of the university for 100 years, this school rose to high prominence in mid-nineteenth century under Dr. Charles Anthon, America's earliest classical scholar.

Today Columbia Grammar School is an independent institution, with a board of trustees. Mr. Stern was in 1956 appointed head master, succeeding Frederic A. Alden, who had directed the school from 1920. With the closing of Leonard School, Columbia Grammar became coeducational through the 12th grade in 1956. Graduates are prepared for Cornell, Univ of Pa., Dartmouth, Columbia, MIT, Amherst, as well as for other colleges and universities throughout the country. Publications, drama, music, athletics, student government, and various clubs are offered. See also page 810

These schools were founded by Helen Parkhurst, who for two decades worked out and applied the theories of her widely known Dalton Plan. She was succeeded upon her retirement in 1942 by Mrs. Durham, formerly associate principal, who continues the schools on the laboratory plan. Members of the faculty have contributed a number of volumes and articles to educational theory and practice, and there is a department for teacher training and apprenticeship.

The lower school is coeducational through grade eight. Most of the girls in the high school do college preparatory work, although not to the exclusion of such practical training as infant care in the nursery. They enter Smith, Bennington, Radcliffe, Cornell, Vassar, and similar colleges. The extra-curricular program emphasizes publications, student government, arts and crafts, and dramatics.

The school still maintains close ties with Teachers College and other divisions of Columbia University.

During his 30 years as principal, Dr. Tillinghast, former president of the Headmasters Association, brought the school to educational prominence.

In 1950 Dr. Gratwick, after nine years of high accomplishment at Hackley School, took charge. Under his vigorous and inspiring leadership, the school maintains its distinguished academic record while expanding its fostering of an all round development for the individual student. The curriculum offers an honors course, as well as such electives as Oriental history, Russian, and other languages, stagecraft. Graduates enter many leading colleges, including Columbia, Cornell, Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Brown. See also page 682

Progressive from its founding, this numbers among its educational advisors William Kilpatrick, Ernest Melby, and Harold Taylor. Begun as an experiment in the New York public schools but since 1932 independent, the school is primarily interested in contributing to the solution of problems of public education. The large classes and the inter-racial atmosphere of the public school situation have been retained. Children live and work in a cooperative rather than a competitive atmosphere, with the curriculum in the early years based largely on a study of the world and the peoples who make up their environment. Music and rhythms, painting, modelling, dramatics, and handicrafts are emphasized throughout. The three-week June camp is an essential part of the school year for certain elementary classes; and in cooperation with NYU offers a teacher-training program. With the addition of the Elisabeth Irwin High School in 1941 the school now prepares for all colleges and universities. Dr. Smith succeeded Elisabeth Irwin in 1943.

Some girls of unusual talent are enrolled to complete their secondary studies while others are junior and senior college or specialized school graduates. Enrollment is limited; the regular staff and faculty is supplemented for special subjects by teachers from other schools and colleges. Courses of college level make broad use of the cultural and instruction facilities of New York City. Miss Norfleet, pianist of the Norfleet Trio and co-director of the Norfleet Camp for Girls at Burlington, Vt., encourages cosmopolitan interests. The School has alumnae from 25 different countries.

One of the first country day schools to be located near a metropolitan center, Riverdale was established by the late Dr. Frank S. Hackett on grounds adjacent to Van Cortlandt Park, which despite the growth of the city still have a sense of spaciousness and country surroundings. The plant, turned over to a board of trustees in 1925, has benefited from many improvements and modernizations. Through Dr. Hackett's vision and drive, the school early gained the enviable reputation which it still retains. Mr. Jones, successor upon Dr. Hackett's retirement in 1949, had for thirteen years been master under Dr. Boyden at Deerfield Academy.

College preparation has been emphasized from the first, and Riverdale students have made outstanding records on the C.E.B. examinations and entered Cornell, Columbia, Harvard, Wesleyan, Princeton, Amherst, Williams, Dartmouth, Mass. Inst. of Tech., Yale, and many other leading colleges. In addition, the curriculum has shown unusual breadth in music, and more recently in art, and an interest in world affairs and international understanding has long been traditional; more recently, emphasis has been placed on the role of the United Nations. A liberal weekend policy makes it possible for boys who live nearby to keep in touch with their families, and for boys from a distance to enjoy the educational advantages of a world center. There is an unusually full extra-curricular program, including music, dramatics, debating, three school publications, and honors course, a relief society, and a full complement of sports. This well known school bears the impress of the unusual women who have directed its policies. Clara B. Spence, the founder, a woman of strong and gracious personality living uncompromisingly by her ideals, held the implicit confidence of her patrons for 30 years. Even at the beginning of the century, when the social graces were of more importance, she developed in her girls something of social consciousness. On her death in 1923 the school came under the direction of Charlotte S. Baker, long co-principal. A new era began in 1932 when the trustees, many of them alumnae, invited Valentine Chandor to merge with Spence her own school, opened in 1917. Her personality and intellectual interests were stimulating to students and alumnae. Mrs. Harold S. Osborne, appointed head mistress after Miss Chandor's death in 1935, justified the confidence of the trustees.

Miss Colbron, previously associate dean at Swarthmore, was appointed in 1952. Today the school continues as a flourishing preparatory institution and sends graduates to leading colleges, including Vassar, Smith, Barnard, Wellesley. School activities include student government, social service, athletic association, chorus, dramatics, studio club, camera club, and publications.

Founded over two centuries ago by the "Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," for the education of both sexes "in piety and useful learning." Trinity was endowed in 1796 and maintained in connection with Trinity Parish until its incorporation in 1806. Conducted at first in the tower of Old Trinity Church, but moving uptown with the progress of the residential district, it has since 1898 been a boys' school, and since 1947, when the boarding department transferred to Pawling, for day students only.

Matthew Dann, who succeeded the Rev. Lawrence T. Cole, enriched the strict preparatory program and in 1943 installed a country day department. When in 1955 Dr. Dann began to devote all his work to Trinity-Pawling school, Mr. Riddleberger, a graduate of Trinity and associated with it for twenty years as student, teacher, and assistant head master, was appointed. Graduates enter Columbia, Trinity, Williams, Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other leading colleges. There is a strong athletic program, as well as numerous other extra-curricular activities. In 1957 a new gymnasium and 5 additional classrooms were completed.

Established by John Lockwood during the Civil War, and until 1924 affiliated with Adelphi College, this academy is highly organized and fully equipped. Under Eugene C. Alder from 1909 to 1926 the reputation for sound college preparatory work was built. Lloyd W. Johnson was head master from 1926 until 1933, and from 1948 to 1951. During the interim William Slater directed the school until 1942, being succeeded by Harold C. Amos, formerly head master of Baguio School in the Philippines and from 1934 of the American School in Japan. Following Dr. Johnson's resignation in 1951, Robert L. Workman was appointed head. When the latter was elected to direct Lakemont Academy, Mr. Hathaway succeeded him at Adelphi in 1952.

Graduates enter many colleges and universities, including Columbia, Barnard, Mt. Holyoke, Harvard, Cornell, Smith. Among activities are student government, club programs, and athletics.

Named for Bishop Berkeley, this time-honored school was for 30 years from 1917 under the direction of Ina C. Atwood. Mrs. Mason succeeded her after several years as head of Milwaukee-Downer Seminary and then of Kimberley School.

Enrolling children from nearby Long Island communities as well as Brooklyn, Berkeley offers a solid preparatory curriculum with numerous courses which sends graduates to Wellesley, Centenary, Skidmore, Smith, Cornell, Swarthmore, among others. The general curriculum prepares for schools of specialized training. Numerous field trips are integrated with course work. Among activities are drama, music, journalism, art, social service, and athletics. A recent building and renovation program has added much to the plant and grounds.

Throughout its long history this school, successor of the Brooklyn Female Academy, has played an important part in local educational affairs and from the first has offered college grade work. It was the first junior college to be recognized by N.Y. State. The school was named in honor of William S. Packer, whose widow gave money for the building. Dr. Shafer, fifth principal, in 1938 succeeded Dr. John H. Denbigh, director from 1918.

The Institute has for years appealed to well-to-do Brooklyn families, and these still supply the greater part of the enrollment, although students also come from the New Jersey and Westchester suburbs as well as Long Island. The solid preparatory program sends graduates from both the high school and the junior college to Smith, Vassar, Connecticut College, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Skidmore, Barnard, and other leading colleges. There is also a variety of terminal junior college programs.

This church school established under the charter of the Cathedral of the Incarnation but accepting girls of other denominations has always adhered to high academic standards. Under Mrs. Marion Reid Marsh, who in 1935 succeeded Miriam Bytel, the school took on new life, with a separate residence for girls ten to fourteen, and a new gymnasium, the gift of alumnae and friends. Graduates enter Mt. Holyoke, Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, Radcliffe. The life is comparatively simple, the activities, including music, dramatics, subject clubs, publications, and sports, are varied.

Recently the academic work has been broadened, with greater emphasis on languages, especially Latin, additional work in art, and a junior-senior course in psychology and philosophy.

The day school, with its own building for the first four grades, attracts discriminating patrons within a radius of 30 miles. See also page 763

Although of no official denominational connection, this school has a Presbyterian background and was established on the site of Stony Brook Assembly for summer religious conferences. The influence of Dr. Gaebelein, head master from 1922, is traceable to the same sincerity and forcefulness evident in his writings, such as "Christian Education in a Democracy", and "The Pattern of God's Truth", the latter published in 1954.

The purpose of the school is to integrate college preparation with the principles of evangelical Christianity. Three periods a week of English Bible study are credited toward graduation. The faculty is made up of men of good educational training who have vital faith in the Christian religion. Graduates enter Wheaton, MIT, Westminster, Princeton, and many other colleges and universities. Extra-curricular activities stress not only religious groups and associations, but also sports, hobby clubs, and student government.

As the school has developed, plant and campus have been substantially increased. In 1950 Memorial Hall, the impressive colonial classroom and library building, was completed; in 1956-57 it was enlarged by a $110,000 addition. See also page 683

Allendale was established in 1926, with Barclay Farr as head master, and soon absorbed Kalbfus School. Under John R. Webster, head master from 1937 to 1943, and Hollis Scofield, from 1943 to 1948, enrollment was increased, the curriculum broadened, and the plant embellished. Peter A. Schwartz, appointed on the latter's resignation in 1948, resigned in 1953 to become head master of Pembroke-County Day. Mr. Critchlow, for six years head master of East Woods School, succeeded him.

The only country day school for boys in Rochester, Allendale has an academic program featuring the conference method of instruction, individual progress, and honors groups, and sends graduates to Princeton, Colgate, Wesleyan, Dartmouth, and others.

Highly trained guidance experts work closely with all students. Academic and activity programs are based on a careful study of each student's needs. Dr. Anderson, author of "Psychiatry in Education" and "Psychiatry in Industry," was a leader in the early develop-

Mr. Miller, who succeeded him in 1950, has had long experience with boys in the classroom, on the athletic field, and in summer camp, as well as four years in industry and business. Emphasizing the liberal arts tradition, this well known school sends graduates to Harvard, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Hamilton, Williams, the University of Pa., and others. Extra-curricular activities, including debating, publications, dramatics, music, an international group, and hobby clubs, supplement the academic work, and there are sports for every boy.

Since the inauguration of Mr. Miller, the school has developed a five-day boarding plan, and is attracting an increasingly able student body. See also page 691

This smoothly running institution, fully equipped, well organized, and capably administered, now well along in its second century, enrolls girls from families of different economic background all over the country, preparing them for universities and two and four year colleges throughout the United States, among them Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Northwestern, Radcliffe.

Founded at Middlebury, Vt., by Emma Willard, pioneer in the education of women, in 1821 it came on invitation to Troy as the Troy Female Seminary. It was reorganized under its present name in 1892. Among educationally influential alumnae was Mrs. Russell Sage, who gave the architecturally beautiful home which the school has occupied since 1910. Eliza Kellas, principal of the school from 1910 to 1942, and president of Russell Sage College from 1916 to 1928, left her impression on the lives of thousands of girls.

In 1942, upon Miss Kellas' retirement, Miss Wellington, former director of admissions at Wellesley, was appointed, with Miss Lay, also of the Wellesley staff, becoming associate head in 1943 and co-head in 1944.

The new plan of education at Emma Willard closely integrates course materials to give a united view of the history of western civilization in relation to the present, and offers extensive opportunities for reference work in the library.

Extra-curricular activities include school government in which faculty and students share, choral, dramatic, and athletic associations, craft and shop work, actual assistance for underprivileged children locally and through funds and assistance for the needy, nationally and internationally. Started by Elizabeth Gill in nearby Westfield and for a time located in Mendham, this school purchased its present elaborate estate in 1940. Two years later, when Somerset Hills closed, day boys through grade six were admitted. Miss Jefferson succeeded Miss Gill in 1953; she has added courses to the curriculum, helped to develop stronger student government, improved facilities, especially the library, and aided in the organization of an active parent group, and added new buildings to accommodate the lower divisions.

Students are given more personal understanding and oversight than in many schools. Flexible study programs, development of individual interests, and intelligent use of New York City's educational opportunities characterize the school. The preparatory program sends graduates to a number of colleges and universities. There is also a limited general curriculum. See also page 819

This college preparatory school, although founded as a co-educational day group, added boarding facilities in 1850 and has been for boys only since 1915. Blair had its greatest development during the 29 year head mastership of Dr. John C. Sharpe. Succeeding him from 1927 to 1946 was Dr. Charles H. Breed, vigorous, straight-minded head master. Benjamin D. Roman was succeeded in 1951 by Dr. Ira A. Flinner, founder of Huntington School in Boston and for 26 years with the Northwood School and education director of the Lake Placid Club Education Foundation. Upon his death in 1954, Mr. Walker assumed direction. Mr. Howard, formerly of Lawrenceville, and appointed here in 1954, is doing an outstanding job in creating a substantial and sound program.

With a guidance program based on modern education and with emphasis on academic fundamentals, Blair has sent graduates to more than 50 different colleges in the last five years. The younger group has its own activities and a special dormitory, West Hall.

The recently completed Memorial Hall with library, chapel-auditorium, and facilities for extensive student activities, and a substantial bequest from the estate of Hetty Green Wilks added to the endowment fund, have further strengthened the school. A new and well-equipped infirmary opened in 1956. See page 692

Simplicity of life and moral and ethical training have long characterized this school founded by the Rt. Rev. George Washington Doane in connection with the parish church.

In September of 1953, when Mrs. Flounders took over, St. Mary's became a country day school, coeducational through 8th grade, after its long history as a boarding establishment for girls, and the program broadened to include more music, vocational guidance, remedial instruction and extra-curricular activities.

Graduates enter Smith, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, the University of Pa., and others. Art, music and dramatics are stressed among the activities, which also include athletics and publications.

Established by Carle O. Warren as a school of intensive preparation, Mr. Garland acquired the school in 1955, which in 1957 he moved to a more commodious 33-acre estate in New Jersey. In these new quarters, he continues to meet the needs of the boy with academic problems through individualized programs and skilled techniques. Mr. Garland, whose previous experience as head master and teacher in Eastern secondary schools and formerly on the faculty of Bowdoin and Columbia, has doubled the enrollment and strengthened and enlarged the faculty.

The school has been particularly successful with the student who has never learned how to study. An elementary business course is available for boys not preparing for college. Recent graduates have entered Cornell, William and Mary, Washington and Lee, the universities of Ill. and Calif., N.Y.U., and many other colleges. Activities include a student council, sports, and public speaking.

The founders of Peddie were motivated by a deep conviction concerning the necessity of a religious basis for successful education and living. Two of its early benefactors were Thomas B. Peddie, for whom the school was renamed, and William V. Wilson, after whom the original building was named. Roger W. Swetland, head from 1898 until his death in 1934, improved the faculty and made Peddie an efficient college preparatory school with excellent equipment. Dr. Wilbour E. Saunders, with broad experience in church and education, built enrollment and faculty, modernized the plant, and fostered student exchange with European schools.

Head master since 1949, Dr. Morong, long active in church affairs, has been a delegate to the two conventions of the World Council of Churches. A work program, student government and scholarship grants characterize this substantially endowed school. A gymnasium, chapel, and a library have been added to the 280 acre campus. A summer school is for make up, accelerated, and remedial work. A number of clubs foster interests in literary, dramatic, musical, and international activities. See also page 695

This great national preparatory school goes back to 1810 when Rev. Isaac V. Brown, a Presbyterian clergyman, founded the small Academy of Maidenhead as an alternative to "the very imperfect and inefficient" methods of the exclusive grammar schools of the period. The broad curriculum which he established was continued after 1834 by Alexander H. Phillips, a member of the family that founded Andover and Exeter. Then for 45 years from 1837 the school was under the direction of Samuel M. Hamill. In 1879 the school was purchased by the legatees of John C. Green, an early pupil who had amassed a fortune in the China trade. Discarding the small school idea, they appointed as head master in 1882 James Cameron Mackenzie, who introduced into America the English "house system." Every house is a small home unit, and there are inter-house rather than inter-class athletics. The characteristic customs and practices during this period were vividly depicted in the stories of Owen Johnson. Mr. Mackenzie was succeeded by the Rev. Simon John McPherson, head master from 1899 to 1919.

In this century the early Presbyterian leanings of the school, which has always been undenominational, have somewhat faded. Under Mather A. Abbott, head master from 1919 to 1934, the school plant was enlarged, the academic standards raised. When Mr. Heely, author of the able "Why the Private School?", was appointed in 1934, the curriculum was further revised to give new emphasis to history, science, music, and art, and the conference method of teaching was developed, particularly with the aid of Harkness funds. The large scholarship endowment and the self-help program aid about 70 boys of limited means.

Graduates enter leading colleges and universities throughout the country. The academic work is supplemented by several successful publications, an experimental theatre, musical organizations, and numerous hobby and interest clubs. There is also a vigorous but not compulsory program of athletics. See page 698

In 1948 Montclair Academy, which had been founded by J. G. MacVicar, who forty years later sold it to Walter D. Head, was purchased by a board of trustees constituting the Montclair Academy Foundation, with Frederick W. Hackett, formerly assistant head master at St. Mark's, appointed to direct it. A year later the boarding department was eliminated. In 1954, upon Mr. Hackett's resignation, Mr. Hall after experience at Millbrook and Hotchkiss, was appointed.

The solid preparatory curriculum, enriched with a full offering of extra-curricular activities, sends graduates to leading colleges, including Yale, Princeton, Rutgers; and also provides advanced honors work for gifted students.

Brookside School, since 1950 a division of the Foundation, was originally organized by parents who wished a progressive type of education for their children. Douglas Groff Cole, head master until 1947, was succeeded by Theodore R. Connett. Mr. Munro was appointed in 1949. Mr. Hall succeeded in 1954 Frederick W. Hackett, who had directed both Brookside and Montclair since 1950. Mr. Charles A. Blake is now head. The curriculum emphasizes, in addition to fundamentals, music, art, including ceramics, shop and science.

One of the oldest preparatory schools in the country, Newark Academy's original building was burned by the British in 1780. Reorganized 12 years later, the school has been in continuous operation ever since. Samuel A. Farrand, one of America's greatest masters, strengthened the school during his regime for 40 years from 1859. He was succeeded in 1901 by his son, who retired in 1935. Clinton F. Zerweck then took charge and inaugurated a country day program. His successor five years later, H.

Paul Abbott, added a primary department.

To 1956 Donald H. Miller served as head master, succeeding Kenneth O. Wilson, who had directed the school since 1946. During Mr. Miller's administration courses in biology and manual training were added, and a summer school instituted.

His successor, Mr. Butler, was formerly assistant head master, and a member of the faculty since 1943.

Taught by a strong faculty, the Academy prepares for the University of Penn., Princeton, Yale, Cornell, Lafayette, and others.

Admiral Farragut Academy was founded in the nineteen-thirties to provide a naval training comparable to the army programs in many private secondary schools. In its first decade it sent more than 100 of its graduates to Annapolis.

Directed by a head master who is a professionally trained educator, and with discipline in charge of a civilian, Admiral Farragut offers now both college preparatory and general curricula. There is a very extensive testing program, as well as careful college advisement and guidance, and opportunities for necessary remedial work. Graduates enter the University of Pa., Rutgers, Georgia Tech, R.P.I., Duke, and other colleges and universities, as well as the Naval Academy. Music, athletics, publications, various clubs, and student government round out the program.

Proclaiming that "no two students are taught alike, since no two students are alike," this school has worked out a smoothly functioning, individualized approach to many of the difficulties encountered in college preparation.

The founder, Joseph M. Weidberg, something of a genius in his skill in diagnosing difficult college entrance problems by means of searching tests, started his work in N.Y., moving the school to its present sumptuous plant in 1934. He continued to direct the policies, through Dr. Knight, until his retirement in 1947. Dr. Knight, long associated with the school as teacher, psychologist, and assistant head, has since 1947 increased the facilities and continues to obtain success with his students.

Extra-curricular activities and a varied sports program are supervised and coordinated with the overall academic program which allows acceleration. See also page 701

Moravian Seminary, oldest boarding school for girls in America, is today a modern institution of high academic standing. It was founded by the Countess Benigna, daughter of Count Zinzendorf of Saxony. Eleanor Lee, grandniece of Washington, was among its pupils as were Chancellor Livingston's daughter, Cornelia, wife of Robert Fulton, two daughters of Nathaniel Greene and others representing the old Colonial families, Dutch, German, Quaker, French and English. Around old Colonial Hall, erected in 1748, cluster memories of the French and Indian Wars, and during the Revolution it served as a military hospital, sheltering hundreds of wounded Revolutionary heroes. The original buildings of the Seminary are now part of the Moravian College for Women, which since 1911 has offered full college work, with degree and certificate courses. Since 1949 the Seminary has occupied a beautiful 60 acre country estate with modern buildings.

The great majority of the girls continue to come from Pa., though many states are represented and loyal alumnae from all over the country continue to dower the ancient institution with gifts. The thorough preparatory curriculum sends graduates to Cedar Crest, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Wellesley, Wheaton, and others. Self-government, athletics, dramatics, music, art and various interest clubs are included in the activities program. See page 767

Founded to prepare for Bryn Mawr, this school was directed for more than a quarter of a century by Elizabeth F. Johnson, who handled both trustees and alumnae with skill and tact. Her associate, Miss Cross, succeeded her in 1941.

With a large and well trained faculty, the school continues the sound ideals of the founder, but now prepares for other leading women's colleges throughout the East, including Smith, Mt. Holyoke, Vassar, Wellesley, Radcliffe, as well as Bryn Mawr. Student government, dramatics, riding, publications and hobby clubs are among activities.

The school was founded for college preparatory work by three Quaker sisters, the Misses Hannah, Elizabeth, and Katherine Shipley, who in 1911 turned it over to their niece, Alice G. Howland, and her associate, Eleanor O. Brownell, who directed it until her retirement in 1942. In 1944 Miss Speer and Miss Wagner took charge.

The sound academic training, with its many electives, and the informal, friendly atmosphere have long appealed to Main Line parents as well as to families throughout the country. Extensive use is made of the numerous and divergent cultural advantages of Philadelphia, and to a lesser extent those of New York City.

Miss Speer's and Miss Wagner's varied experiences in China make them particularly interested in maintaining an international outlook and a concern for world affairs, and the school enrolls students from a number of foreign countries. Graduates attend many colleges, including Smith, Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe. Student council, arts, crafts, music, dramatics, hobby clubs, publications are among the extra-curricular activities.

Established as a preparatory school on the campus of Wilson College but unaffiliated with it, Penn Hall has had a recognized junior college since 1926. Frank S. Magill, head from 1910, resigned in 1947, and Sarah W. Briggs on the faculty from 1935, and academic dean from 1944, was appointed president, resigning in 1956.

Mr. Frantz, her successor, taught in public and private schools, and for three years previous to his appointment was head master of the Overseas School in Rome, Italy.

The academic work in both preparatory and junior college departments is broad, and girls are successfully prepared for Penn State, Vassar, Duke, Syracuse, Pembroke, Goucher, Wellesley, Cornell Univ and numerous others. Flexibility of programming permits selection of special department studies in addition to required academic subjects, and there are unusually fine opportunities in art and music. Field trips to Washington and to other points are taken each year.

Among activities are student government committees, a service club, various hobby and interest groups correlated with the curriculum, and sports. See also page 855

The Devereux Schools, operated since 1940 by the Devereux Foundation, are a tribute to the teaching ability and executive skill of Miss Devereux, their founder. There are 15 separate schools graded to serve pupils from three years old to young adults. Classification among the schools' allows students of similar abilities and interests to associate. The direction of Miss Devereux has been particularly successful in providing an emotionally balanced, home-like atmosphere in which those with emotional difficulties and the problems of slow learners are given individual corrective attention. Complete clinical facilities are provided with medical, psychiatric, and psychological staff in residence. Summer camps and a west coast branch, established in 1945, are affiliated. One of the most successful and prosperous of the Friends schools, and long a leader in secondary coeducation, this school owes its name to its founder John M. George, whose will provided for the education of the children of Friends and others. Much of its success was early due to the able administration of George A. Walton, principal from 1912 to 1948. Mr. McFeely came to the school in 1931, was appointed director of studies in 1939, and after three years as head master of Friends Central, became principal of George School in 1948.

The spirit of the school is in the Friends tradition and the tuition grants are generally made to Friends families. However, there are no denominational restrictions, and patronages are attracted from many families not members of the Society.

During his first year, each student concentrates on the fundamentals of subject matter. During sophomore, junior, and senior years, many students follow one of the sequence curricula in which all of the work is focused on a central plan of inquiry and in which the various subjects are correlated under the guidance of a single teacher. Other students choose the 'exploratory' program. Many graduates attend Earlham, Swarthmore, and Haverford, with others going to such colleges and universities as the University of Pa., Penn State, Cornell, Amherst, Radcliffe, Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and others throughout the country.

George School also has special study opportunities for very gifted students, and some who have taken this curriculum have qualified for advanced courses in college.

There is an unusually wide and varied activities program, including arts and crafts, hobbies, music, dramatics, home economics, publications, sports, and numerous committees for arranging and facilitating student activities. See also page 822

In 1893, William Mann Irvine took over a small, local institution, and with broad vision and indefatigable energy created this school as it is today. On his death in 1928, he was succeeded by Boyd Edwards, a close personal friend, who carried on the ideals and traditions. Dr. Tippetts, an alumnus who came to this old school in 1941 after 25 years in university work, with Mrs. Tippetts has devoted himself to the interests of the boys, acting as adviser as well as executive, earning the gratitude of boys and parents.

PHILADELPHIA, PA. Pop 2,071,605. Alt to 440 ft. AS R.R. 80 mi. SW of N.Y.C. Philadelphia, third city of our land—once first in population as in its gifts of freedom—is a host of contradictions, scene both of monumental machine corruption and intermittent inspired reform. Quakerism and “the Friendly way” mingle here with the stillborn, still operative “blue laws” to curb this mighty Mistress of the Delaware Basin. For, though a late comer to the Atlantic seaboard, Philadelphia is today fourth among manufacturing cities, renowned for its industrial might, and its port holds top rank with New York.

Boastful of its history and proud of a well preserved past, it was less than a centennarian when it hosted our founding fathers. Yet for the tourist it remains first among great historical sites for its reverent preservation of antiquities. America's first magazine was midwived here in 1741, and the first daily newspaper, in 1784. The city was early a prime seat of many cultural and scientific associations, a number of which still exist. The acidulous Baltimorean, H. L. Mencken, has labeled it an intellectual slum.

The first planned city, Philadelphia early stretched out along the Main Line, one of the most beautiful series of suburbs in the country, where sumptuous homes were built by the wealthy. The pride and mannerisms of the old families have aroused many to aspire to membership but, like the Boston Brahmin, the prototype is generations in building.

Many of the private schools are to be found in these suburbs. Chestnut Hill spreads along the wooded slopes of Wissahickon Creek Valley, 4 mi. N of Germantown. Overbrook, to the NW, lies partly in Philadelphia and partly in Merion. Germantown, largest of the suburban districts, is 7 mi. NW of the City Hall; here are many fine old pre-Revolutionary houses. Oak Lane, E of Chestnut Hill, at the N edge of the city, has attracted various day schools.

Schools in the farther suburbs along the Main Line are treated under their own towns of Wynnewood, Haverford, Bryn Mawr, and Devon. N of the city, among the Montgomery County hills, there are private schools in Meadowbrook and Bryn Athyn and, in the outlying S district, at Chester and Lansdowne.

Now the largest of the Episcopal day schools, this academy was founded under the auspices of the Rev. William White, afterwards first Bishop of Pa., Robert Morris, Francis Hopkinson, and others. In 1787 the institution was granted a charter and 10,000 acres of land by the state legislature. Dr. Greville Haslam, headmaster for 36 years, during which the school made tremendous strides in enrollment, plant, and curriculum, retired in 1957, and was succeeded by Mr. Quinn, a member of the faculty since 1943 and assistant headmaster since 1953.

The student body embraces all denominations, although about two-thirds of the boys are Episcopalian. The strict college preparatory curriculum, with individualized student scheduling, sends graduates to many leading colleges, including the University of Pa., Yale, Amherst, Dartmouth, Trinity, Princeton. There are additional opportunities in art and music. The plant includes excellent facilities for hobby clubs and shops, publications, and a full program of athletics. The older boys assist in a work program.

Coeducational since 1886, it is still under the direct management of Friends, and definite religious instruction is given. Harris G. Haviland in 1941 succeeded his father, who had been head for 40 years. In 1955, Mr. Blauvelt, formerly assistant head at William Penn Charter School, and head master at Milwaukee Country Day, succeeded J. Theodore Peters, who had directed the school since 1951.

Various religious denominations and social backgrounds are represented among its patrons. The program prepares for many colleges and universities, including the University of Pa., Haverford, Swarthmore, Gettysburg, Temple, Kenyon.

This academy, one of the few non-sectarian private secondary schools in the city, was founded by citizens of Germantown and is controlled chiefly by residents of that aristocratic suburb. The main building, perhaps the oldest in the country devoted continuously to secondary education, has been modernized. The new primary school building is separate, and gymnasium and the Osbourn-Roberts Chapel and Laboratory have recently been completed. Samuel E. Osbourn, head from 1915, resigned in 1948. John F. Godman, head master for three years, was succeeded in 1952 by Richard Ward Day, who resigned in 1956 to become head of Hawken School, Ohio.

Mr. Miller, formerly head master of Newark Academy, N.J., was appointed in 1956.

Graduates enter the University of Pa., Villanova, Harvard, Lehigh, Princeton, Lafayette, Temple, and Muhlenberg, among others. There is a full program of extra-curricular activities, including dramatics, music, publications, and numerous clubs.

The importance and influence of this largest of the Friends Schools in and about Philadelphia developed during the regime of Stanley R. Yarnall, connected with the school from 1898, principal from 1906 until his retirement in 1941. The sound progressive methods and modern educational practices fostered were strengthened by Burton P. Fowler, for 18 years head master of Tower Hill School, Wilmington, which he made a powerful influence throughout the country, past president of the Progressive Education Association, and trustee of Sarah Lawrence College. Upon his retirement in 1954, he was succeeded by Mr. Scattergood, the assistant principal.

The curriculum, with its emphasis on community and world responsibility, and with required courses in ethics and family relations, sends graduates to leading colleges, including Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Harvard, Haverford, Amherst, Wheaton. There are many extra-curricular activities, such as local and European work camps, a school community council, international seminars, and affiliation with schools abroad. There are also strong programs in dramatics and music integrated with the academic work.

Stephen Girard, a Frenchman, ardent believer in the American doctrine of freedom, stipulated in endowing this school for fatherless boys that no ordained clergyman of any denomination should be allowed to enter its doors. Dr. Merle M. Odgers, who succeeded Cheesman A. Herrick in 1936, liberalized the curriculum, although the program still combines academic achievement and the learning of a trade. In 1954 Dr. Odgers resigned to become president of Bucknell University. Graduates now enter many colleges, Penn. State, Drexel, and LaSalle. The buildings and equipment of the mechanical vocational school are unusually complete, as are the other facilities for trade classes. Boys between the ages of 6 and 10 are admitted, with preference given to those born in Pa.

In August 1957, upon the death of Dr. E. Newbold Cooper, president for 2 years, Mr. Friedmann took on the duties of the president pending the appointment of a successor.

As early as 1701 William Penn gave a charter to a school that had been in operation a dozen years. It is still conducted under his third charter, 1711, under a self perpetuating board of fifteen, all Friends. Richard Mott Jones, head master for 42 years, brought the school national reputation. He was succeeded in 1918 by Richard M. Gummere, under whose administration the school developed in numbers and influence and moved in 1925 from downtown to its present site. When Dr. Gummere resigned to become chairman of the Board of Admissions at Harvard in 1935, Richard Knowles was head master until 1941.

John Flagg Gummere, the present head master, member of a distinguished family of Quaker educators, and on the faculty since 1923 and acting head prior to his appointment in 1942, has been prominent in local and national educational organizations.

The cosmopolitan student body emphasizes self-government and community participation. The school has been a leader in the development and use of modern techniques in the teaching of foreign languages. The curriculum, with its flexible scheduling, permits not only sound preparation for college, but also classes for admission to college with advanced standing and opportunities for major units in music, art, and shop. Notably, not only Latin, but also Greek is offered. There are remedial reading and guidance programs, and much use is made of audio-visual aids. Standards of college preparation are high, and graduates enter the University of Pa., Lehigh, Princeton, Haverford, Wesleyan, Amherst, among others. Publications, dramatics, various societies and clubs, and athletics are among activities.

The school has for a number of years given an in-service training course in joint sponsorship with the Philadelphia Public Schools. The teachers attending it represent public schools, private schools, colleges.

PITTSBURGH, PA. Pop 676,806. Alt 743 ft. A new city has been created from the slums and congestion of smoke clouded Pittsburgh, notorious of old. Herculean measures have demolished one quarter of the business section on the tongue of land between the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers. The smog no longer screens the sun and new parks, cultural centers, planned housing, and great business towers of glass and steel shimmering with aluminum symbolize the giant industries that cluster here. Famed is the Institute where Homer St. Gaudens created a mecca for the art world, whose main building covers an area larger than does the Capitol at Washington. Now in its second century, this school rich in tradition has evolved an unusual program to prepare efficiently for college and to hold and develop the interest of the gifted boy to whom college requirements are but incidental. In "The Master of The Hill," Dr. W. Russell Bowie has told how John Meigs, son of the founder, Matthew Meigs, came to the school in 1876, at the age of 24, and in the following 35 years brought the school from an obscure venture with two teachers and 20 boys to an institution of 40 masters and 375 boys. John Meigs, with a genius for organization, abounding vitality and a passionate zest for life, had extraordinary power over his fellow men and gave himself not to their bending or breaking, but to their making.

A new era of the school began in 1920 when the alumni took control. After the six year regime of Boyd Edwards, James I. Wendell, on the faculty since his graduation from college in 1913, was appointed head master in 1928. While retaining the school's essentially conservative aims, he greatly expanded the physical plant and the educational program which has pioneered in preventive medicine, in fuller utilization of the library, and in audio-visual education. At the time of the Centennial celebration, which attracted nation-wide attention, Dr. Wendell announced his retirement after 24 years of active leadership. Taking over the school after this long and fruitful period of growth and development, Mr. Hall, a New Englander with earlier teaching experience at Phillips Academy, was called from the assistant head mastership of St. Mark's. He has instituted entrance examinations, established a prefect system and student council, and introduced new courses in the humanities, including Greek, a two-year 'humanities sequence', English history, and fine arts work.

The academic curriculum includes broad emphasis on the humanities while meeting requirements for a wide variety of universities. Graduates favor Princeton and Yale, while others go on to Cornell, the University of Pa., Dartmouth, and Duke. Extra-curricular activities include athletics, music, journalism, dramatics, aviation, radio. The excellent facilities for these and other programs have been made possible through large gifts of loyal alumni.

Mr. Pidgeon, a New Englander and for nine years at Deerfield Academy where he served as administrative assistant to Frank Boyden, was appointed in 1957. Dr. A. W. Wilson was among the founders and long director. Dr. L. M. Clark introduced many innovations from 1941 to 1957 while remodeling and revitalizing the curriculum. The Kiski Plan, started in 1943 as a one-subject program was modified in 1956 to an arrangement whereby each student concentrates on two subjects for a semester, permitting him to complete four subjects in an academic year. The plan has won approval from the students, the faculty, and the parents, and has attracted boys from half the states and from a number of foreign countries.

Also featured are two trips per year, with classes in German, French, or Spanish, to foreign cities. Graduates enter many different colleges throughout the country, including Lehigh, Brown, Carnegie, Amherst, Stanford, Harvard, Princeton, Yale, Dartmouth, M.I.T. There is a full program of activities, with special emphasis on languages. See also page 706

This ancient Quaker school, for the children of Friends and still giving preference to them, with both boarding and day enrollment, has had a notable succession of head masters who have developed it to its present status. With wide horizons, it draws its students today from the entire country and abroad and admits limited numbers who are not members of the Society of Friends but who are in sympathy with its purposes and ideals. A loyal body of alumni have aided in the growth and expansion of this endowed school. James Walker, principal from 1925, was succeeded by Mr. Test, an alumnus and former faculty member, who previously taught at Williston and the William Penn Charter School.

Strong college preparatory work is supplemented by programs offering adaptability to varying interests and pursuits, including agriculture and home economics, while activities clubs, publications, music and sports are popular. With practical insight and sound methodology, students obtain sound academic training and attend both Quaker and other leading colleges and universities. See also page 824

Today, as formerly, patronized by the more conservative of Philadelphia families, this school was founded by Miss Agnes Irwin, who in 1894 was appointed first dean of Radcliffe College. Her sister, Sophy Dallas Irwin, conducted the school unit 1915, when she was succeeded by Josephine A. Natt, head mistress until 1928. When Bertha M. Laws retired in 1934, Mrs. Bartol was co-head with Edith Murphy until the resignation of the latter in 1948.

Now occupying two separate buildings on Lancaster Pike in Wynnewood, the school offers a college preparatory program emphasizing individual adjustment and special remedial periods. Graduates enter a diversity of colleges, including not only the University of Pa., Smith, and Wheaton, but also Vassar, Radcliffe, and others. There is also a program which prepares for junior colleges and art schools. Student government, art, music, dramatics, publications, and clubs are among extra-curricular activities.

Generously endowed by Alexis Felix du Pont, this Episcopal school offers boys a rigorous and simple program. Rev. Walden Pell, a St. Mark's graduate, head master from the founding, developed sound scholarship and a loyal following during his administration. Tuition is determined by the parents' resources and every boy shares in the upkeep and chores. William H. Cameron, acting head master, succeeded Mr. Pell in 1957. Mr. Moss was appointed head master in 1958.

The curriculum, entirely college preparatory, includes courses in zoology, sacred studies, and much music, as well as developmental reading. Graduates are prepared for Princeton, Yale, University of Va., Trinity, Washington and Lee, Brown, and other colleges. There is a wide range of activities, including many hobby and interest clubs, and athletics. See also page 708

Located since 1937 on a beautiful 21-acre country day campus just outside the city limits, this is one of the oldest independent schools in the country, and appeals to conservative families of Wilmington and surrounding communities. Mr. Jones, formerly associate principal at Sidwell, and appointed here in 1935, has done much to develop plant and academic and extra-curricular programs. The curriculum is almost entirely college preparatory, and the school was one of the first to introduce the 'Kenyon Plan' for study for advanced standing in college. A feature of the school is the development of individual responsibility through an unusually extensive program of pupil participation in the directing of student activities.

Although enrollment is inter-denominational, the religious ideals of the Society of Friends are stressed at all levels.

Tower Hill became one of the notable country day schools of the country under Burton P. Fowler in his 20 years as head master. He used the excellent equipment and funds furnished by the du Pont family to far-reaching beneficial effect, through co-operation with other schools, public and private, not only in Wilmington but throughout the state and further afield. Mr. Stabler, who succeeded James S. Guernsey in 1950, spent his early years in Wilmington, has served in a number of educational institutions and churches in that neighborhood, and had been head master of Cranbrook since 1944. The curriculum, with a wide variety of electives, prepares for many colleges, including Wesleyan, Princeton, Mt. Holyoke, Yale, Vassar, Cornell. Among extra-curricular activities are art, dramatics, music and publications.

BALTIMORE, MD. Pop 949,708. Alt to 445 ft. 35 mi. NE of Washington, D.C., Rt. U.S. 1. Chief city in the state and sixth largest in the U.S., Baltimore retains much of its local color, customs and cuisine, though industrial plants have crowded in. To its most famous citizen and America's most articulate boobophile, H. L. Mencken, it had the "frowsy, unkempt, out-at-elbow, forlorn air of a third-rate lodging house." It was here he spent most of his "Happy," "Heathen," and "Newspaper Days." On the Patapsco River, just below the city, the British fleet was repulsed in Revolutionary days. Tourists flock to the Walters Gallery, where Francis Scott Key's "The Star Spangled Banner" is preserved in the original. Otto Mergenthaler perfected the linotype here toward the end of the last century, and today the city is a center for printing and publishing.

At Johns Hopkins was instituted the first graduate school for research in higher education, and here the first country day school was established. Peabody Institute and a few private schools are still in the city. Goucher College for women in 1942 moved to its new suburban campus. In the suburb of Roland Park are Calvert

School, Johns Hopkins University, Gilman and Roland Park Country Schools, Bryn Mawr School and the schools of Notre Dame of Maryland. St. Paul's is in Brooklandville; Loyola High School in Towson. In Mt. Washington are Mount St. Agnes for Girls and Mount Washington Country School. Mount de Sales Academy is 6 mi. W in Catonsville.

A notable development in American education, this was, under its early name "Country School for Boys of Baltimore City," the first country day school in the nation. Resulting from a plan originating with Mrs. Francis K. Carey, and with five-day boarding added early, the school moved to its present site in 1910, and the name changed a year later in honor of Daniel Coit Gilman, first president of Johns Hopkins. Mr. Callard succeeded E. Boyd Morrow, head master from 1926 to 1943. With a solid preparatory curriculum supplemented by many electives and with career guidance and community study, Gilman sends graduates to Princeton, Johns Hopkins, Yale, the University of Va., Dartmouth, Harvard, and others. In addition to the limited work program, there are many opportunities in publications, writing, dramatics, and various hobby clubs.

One of the first progressive institutions in the U.S. to be put on a substantial basis, Park was the laboratory school in which Eugene Randolph Smith worked out his methods that won national prominence.

Hans Froelicher, Jr., son of one of the founders and member of a Quaker family prominent in education for two generations, carried on the school's traditions from 1932. Mr. Thomason, former head of the Middle School of Horace Mann in New York City, was appointed in 1956.

The curriculum, described as "modern" and broadly based on the principles of progressive teaching, offers sound liberal study which appeals to professional and professorial families of the city and builds academic skills and coordinates projects to relate broad social interests to the child. Though tests and quizzes are used, there are no final examinations.

Graduates enter Hood, Goucher, Wellesley, Dartmouth, Harvard, Yale, Swarthmore, Johns Hopkins, and many other colleges, as well as the University of Md.

This modern country day school developed from the oldest school in Roland Park, a small group conducted from 1894 by the Misses Katharine and Adelaide Howard and from 1899 by the Misses Corinne Jackson and Bertha Chapman. The open air feature, since discontinued, was begun by Nanna Duke Dushane, head from 1912 to 1922. Miss Healy succeeded Elizabeth M. Castle, who retired in 1950 after 28 years as head mistress. The buildings are now on the site occupied since 1915.

Academic standards are high, and a wide range of courses is offered, especially in music, with the Peabody Conservatory maintaining a branch at the school. Graduates enter numerous colleges, including Goucher, Wellesley, Hollins, Randolph-Macon. Dramatics, arts and crafts, music, publications, and sports are among activities.

Since 1914 the school has had substantial gifts from the Presbyterian Church. Dr. J. Paul Slaybaugh, head master from 1924, resigned in June, 1949, and was succeeded by Richard W. Holstein as interim head master. Mr. Blaker was appointed in 1952. The school follows the one-subject plan of study, and there is an elementary remedial program on an individual basis. Many graduates of the preparatory curriculum attend the University of Del., with others going to the Universities of Md. and Va., Dickinson, Franklin and Marshall, Lafayette. Athletics, activity clubs, dramatics, and religious groups are emphasized.

In 1954 the school became coeducational.

Archbishop John Carroll founded this oldest Catholic boarding school in the country as a part of Georgetown University. It has been independent since 1919 when it moved to its present plant across the Maryland line. Offering both the traditional Jesuit classical training and preparation for technical schools, it sends graduates primarily to Catholic colleges. Debating, dramatics, publications, and athletics are among activities.

Father Maher was Executive Assistant to the President of Loyola College, Baltimore, Md. before his appointment in 1957 to succeed the Rev. William A. Ryan, S.J.

Established by Mary M. Livingston, who acted as head mistress until 1929, Garrison Forest has always been characterized by an informal atmosphere and by close association between faculty and pupils and between boarding and day students. Since Miss Marshall and Miss Offutt took over more than 25 years ago, high standards have been held and the patronage stabilized, the plant and equipment modernized, a new dormitory and chapel opened in 1958.

The curriculum, with emphasis on academic fundamentals, prepares for Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar, Bryn Mawr, Sweet Briar, and other leading colleges. Student government, service league, French and Spanish clubs, music, art, and sports, especially riding, are favorite activities. Girls are enrolled for not less than three years.

The school is selective, socially and academically, and has an atmosphere of warmth and dignity. See also page 770

On a remote little farm to which she had moved with her invalid husband and eight children, Mrs. John Sears McCulloch began a small school which has grown to the present establishment without losing the intimate family atmosphere. Her descendants have maintained the tradition, with the present head master her grandson and the son of Rev. Duncan McCulloch, who had continued the school until his death in 1932. Operated as a non-sectarian school under a board of trustees of parents and alumnae, Oldfields places its first emphasis on Christian character.

Oldfields gives instruction and training to a relatively small group of girls. With a ratio of eight pupils to each teacher permitting much individual attention, warm personal relationships are fostered between students and faculty. There is a sound guidance program, with special emphasis on college entrance. In 1956 the school announced a program of individual instruction for students of high aptitude, preparing for advanced college placement. The preparatory program, enriched with work in art, music, home-making, sends girls to many different colleges, among them Vassar, Smith, Cornell, Rollins, Colby and Sweet Briar. Extra-curricular activities include sports, dramatics, publications, clubs, and riding, with the school having its own horses and stables.

Recent improvements to the plant include a new dormitory, a new faculty room, and other additions.

Programs are offered in college preparation and commercial and dairy husbandry fields. Graduates enter Cornell, Va. Oldest existing Episcopal Church school for girls, this academy has been the diocesan school for Maryland since 1873, and recipient of many benefactions throughout its long history. Under Janet Ward, who succeeded Laura Fowler in 1943, the sound conservative educational standards were continued, enrollment increased, and the plant modernized and expanded. Following Miss Ward's resignation in 1948, Miss Elizabeth Harvey was appointed acting head mistress. In 1951 Victor R. Cain was appointed to direct the school.

Miss Coleman, dean for six years at St. Anne's school in Virginia, succeeded him in 1956.

In 1954 two preparatory programs were inaugurated, the first for colleges requiring specific courses and CEEB examinations for entrance, the second for colleges with more liberal entrance requirements and for junior colleges. Graduates attend Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Goucher, Middlebury, Radcliffe, Randolph-Macon, Wilson, Wells, and others. Art, music, dramatics, clubs, publications, riding and sports contribute to the constructive, congenial atmosphere. See also page 772

Kerfoot, earlier assistant to Dr. William Augustus Muhlenberg, who had introduced the English Episcopal school system at Flushing, L.I. Here, too, another pupil of Muhlenberg's, Dr. Henry Augustus Coit, taught until he was called to organize St. Paul's at Concord, N.H. Closed during the Civil War, it reopened in 1869 under Henry Onderdonk, who was head master until 1896. During the regime of his son, Adrian H. St. Timothy's has long maintained a distinguished reputation as a desirable boarding school and retains a strong following. In continuous operation since 1882, it was managed until 1912 by the Misses Carter, followed by Miss Louisa McEndree and Miss Jane Rives Heath, who continued the characteristic traditions that have made it sought after by families from the eastern seaboard.

Miss Watkins, formerly assistant to the principal at St. Catherine's in Richmond, succeeded when Miss Fowler resigned in 1936. In 1951 the school moved from Catonsville to its present location, and a number of new buildings were erected.

Tradition is still strong, but the curriculum is broad and includes such electives as comparative religions, current problems, modern poetry, development of the novel, and other senior subjects. Recent developments have included increasing interest in and understanding of national and international affairs, growth of an audio-visual program, class trips to Washington and New York City, and creative art seminars.

The capable faculty prepares girls for Vassar, Bryn Mawr Radcliffe, and other leading women's colleges. Among activities are choral and choir organizations, drama clubs, publications, and a varied program of sports and numerous interest clubs. See also page 771

WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D.C. Pop 802,178. Capital of the free world, an unprecedented conglomeration of power and wealth, Washington is today a metropolis of contradictions.

Dominated by the emissaries of the states, whose collective manifestation is the United States Government, it is the focal point of defense, reform and regulation for the greatest economic, political and military power, taking and dispersing more than one quarter of our national income. Some fruit of the abundant tax harvest remains here to enrich the inhabitants. New to its role, it feeds its mistress, world peace, from the greatest machine of war yet seen, to insure continuity of our way of life.

Bureaucratic conflicts reign, under the control of impregnable brass hats. Here lobbies, domestic and foreign, hassle for spoils. Business and labor vie with countless special interest groups for economic and legislative favor. In a fog of confusion and fear, legislators through committees investigate and indiscriminately incriminate through vilification and association, in the scramble for that pampered and fooled prize of democracies—the voter. North and South meet in Washington, but racial segregation yields slowly to reform.

The city is beautifully designed and handsomely built. Lying along the banks of the broad Potomac, amidst lovely countryside, it has one of the most abhorred climates of our great cities. Outstanding among the more beautiful buildings are the Pan American Union, stimulating and refreshing in its architectural detail and arrangement; the Academy of Arts and Sciences by Bertram Goodhue, a remarkable example of purest Greek architectural design; and the Folger Shakespeare Library, architecturally chaste. Pope's pantheon in memory of Jefferson stands where the tidal basin and the cherry trees are. Pope's other creation houses Mellon's European paintings.

The attractions of Washington have made it an educational center. The Catholic Church, with characteristic foresight, has taken advantage of this for its higher institutions of learning—the Catholic University, Trinity College, and Georgetown University. George Washington University falls short of the hope and plan of the Father of his Country. The more substantial schools have deserted the older residential section for the hills N and W of the city. The Madeira School is some 12 mi. from the center of Washington, in Greenway, Virginia. Other schools have also crossed the line and have such addresses as Garrett Park, Silver Spring and Bethesda, separately listed under Maryland. Others, across the Potomac, are in Virginia.

Conducted by the Sisters of Providence, this school has since 1922 increasingly emphasized its separately organized junior college. Girls of all denominations are enrolled, the only religious requirement being attendance at Sunday service. The school has particularly well equipped music and art departments and gives prominence to languages, classical and modern, as well as to secretarial studies and homemaking. An extensive building program has provided an expansion of facilities on all levels and in all departments.

Miss Madeira established her school in Washington after experience as a teacher in Friends School and as first head mistress of Potomac. A woman of idealistic temperament, she held strong convictions on what she considered democracy and had few snobbish tendencies. In the Virginia site occupied since 1931, the country day facilities for the established city clientele supplement the boarding department.

The scholastic standards of the school have always been high, and most of the graduates go on to college, especially Vassar and Smith, but also Bryn Mawr, Sweet Briar, Wellesley, and others. The attitude toward art and current events and the advantages of Washington is liberal, and much is made of music, dramatics, hobby clubs, publications, and sports, particularly riding. Founded by Elizabeth J. Somers, who with Adelia Gates Hensley directed it until 1924, Mount Vernon has always been characterized by high standards, a conservative tone, and a gracious atmosphere. The late Jean Dean Cole, for many years assistant head, and head from 1924, was succeeded on her retirement in 1938 by Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, associated with the school since 1936. In 1945 a new 26 acre campus was acquired.

From the first, before the time of the junior college, the advanced courses were accredited by leading colleges and universities. Today the curriculum covers four years of high school and two of junior college. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd have brought new life and vigor, and a breadth of culture and outlook which have won the enthusiastic support of patrons and the well organized alumnae. Graduates of both the high school department and the junior college enter leading colleges and universities throughout the country. Among extra-curricular activities are dramatics, music, publications, social service, and student council. See page 773

National Cathedral School was established by the first Episcopal Bishop of Washington in a building provided by Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, and was directed by Mabel B. Turner from 1929 until her retirement in 1950. Miss Lee, with extensive experience in schools in the East and in England, and head of Pasadena Polytechnic from 1946, succeeded Miss Turner.

Most of the girls take the preparatory program, with its numerous electives, and enter Sweet Briar, Duke, Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, Smith, and other colleges. There are also well organized general academic and fine arts departments. The girls lead a wholesome life, with carefully planned work and play programs, and with opportunities in dramatics, music, sports, student council, and social service organization. There is also a program of shared activities with the boys of St. Albans. The country setting is unusual for a city school. See page 772

Founded as the National Cathedral School for Boys by the bequest of Mrs. Harriet Lane-Johnston, and having the use of the 58 acre Close of Washington Cathedral, this school was directed for 20 years of devoted service by Canon Lucas, a staff member of the Cathedral and known to his boys as "The Chief."

Canon Martin, a graduate of the University of Pa., and for 14 years instructor, chaplain, and assistant head master at Episcopal Academy, was for seven years rector of St. Paul's Church, Burlington, Vt., before succeeding Canon Lucas on his retirement in 1949. Well equipped for both academic and extra-curricular programs, with unusual opportunities for music at the Cathedral, honors courses and acceleration are provided in the strong offerings of mathematics and languages. Reflecting world importance of Washington, the school represents many lands and graduates enter well known colleges.

St. Albans combines many of the advantages of coeducation while retaining the advantages of separate education, for its sister school, the National Cathedral School for Girls, is also located in the Cathedral Close. Academic work is carried on separately, but the two schools come together for extra-curricular activities, including glee club, dramatics, religious club, and normal social activities. In addition, St. Albans has a balanced sports program, and a variety of other activities, especially music.

The Rev. Mr. Yardley, appointed in 1949 after 6 years as head master of Tuxedo Park School, has maintained traditions and strengthened the curriculum. Chatham prepares most of its girls for Smith and Vassar, although graduates also enter Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, Bradford, Bennett, and others. Characteristic of the school are the gracious living, the simplicity of atmosphere, and the considerable although guarded religious training. During more than forty years, Miss Noland has built about her own personality a school with a reputation for exclusiveness and for something of the atmosphere of the Old South. A Virginian, a hard rider, she demanded a good seat of her girls, long maintaining cherished ideals of combining sport with academic prowess. Herself without the usual college training, Miss Charlotte as she is known, leaves scholastic work to the academic head, but inculcates a sense of social responsibility. In 1942 with the war fervor, military drill was introduced, and proved so popular it has been made a permanent feature. Other student activities naturally emphasize athletics, but there are also various school clubs, publications, dramatics, and several social service groups. An extensive building program has recently been completed. Established in 1772 as Female Academy for daughters of the community at a time when the education of girls was generally looked upon as a foolish luxury, and maintaining a boarding department since 1802, Salem has played an important role in the development of education for young women.

Since 1931 the school has been under the capable direction of Miss Weaver. A separate institution, but sharing some facilities with Salem College, the academy attracts not only daughters of the more forward-looking families of the South but also patrons from many other states and from foreign countries. The girls are given sound preparation not only for leading Southern colleges including Hollins, Duke, Salem, Randolph-Macon, but also colleges in the East and throughout the rest of the country. The academy has been a leader in the growth of student participation in school government, and there are many interest clubs as well as a full sports program.

Recently a new annex, with enlarged library, science laboratory, art studio, and other facilities, was completed. See page 775

Founded in 1909 by Mary Vardrine McBee, a graduate of Smith, the school gained prominence through the breadth of educational ideals which she brought to bear and maintained at Ashley Hall for 40 years. Upon her retirement, the school was continued under the Ashley Hall Foundation. Miss Pardue, previously associated with St. Timothy's School and for four years on the Ashley Hall faculty, undertook the direction in 1954.

The majority of students are drawn from Charleston families and the boarding enrollment from many states, as well as a number of Americans from abroad. The Preparatory Course sends students to many colleges both north and south, including Smith, Sweet Briar, Mr. Holyoke and Wellesley. Electives are offered in Bible, art, music, sewing, and typing, while extra-curricular activities include dramatics, music, publications, student council, and interest clubs. See also page 776

Following Miss Hockaday's retirement in 1946, Mr. Hobart F. Mossman was appointed President and served for ten years. Mr. Smith, who succeeded, was for fifteen years principal of Fieldston School in New York City, and for eighteen years principal of Francis W. Parker School in Chicago.

The school has two departments, the Lower School, and the College Preparatory, the latter sending graduates to colleges and universities throughout the country. In addition to the regular academic curriculum, art, music, speech, and physical education form an integral part of the program.

Activities include student government, dramatics, typing, as well as numerous sports programs. The boarding enrollment represents many states as well as several foreign countries.

Iglehart who had been head of Lancaster Country Day School. To accommodate the primary grades and the growing boarding department, the plant, on the 35 acre Texas Country Day campus, has been expanded. Eastern standards have been maintained, and graduates have entered not only Southern Methodist, and the universities of Texas and the South, but also Amherst, Cornell, Dartmouth, Johns Hopkins, among others. Choir, band, and orchestra are major activities, and there are hobby clubs and a full physical education program for all grades.

Dr. Templin has vitalized the work and gives close supervision and thoughtful guidance to her girls. Unusually strong is the work in foreign languages. Graduates enter many colleges, including the University of Texas, Christian Junior, Smith, the University of Ariz., as well as some Eastern women's colleges.

The school continues to develop its exploratory classes in the lower school to help establish special interests and talents in art, dramatics, home economics, music, and other fields. Recently a new dining hall was completed, and many additions made to the museum. Activities include clubs, athletics, especially swimming and riding, and publications. See page 779

The oldest school for girls in Texas, Saint Mary's Hall was founded in 1879 by Bishop R. W. B. Elliott, first missionary Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of West Texas. Under the able direction of Ruth Coit, 1924 to 1938, the school was enlarged and moved to its present site. Katharine Lee, appointed head mistress in 1940, emphasized college preparation and added two primary grades. Gretchen Tonks, succeeding Miss Lee in 1946, further strengthened the standards of the school and broadened the program of activities. Upon her resignation in 1952, Beatrice McDermott, former principal of Hockaday School, became head mistress.

The program, emphasizing traditional academic courses, prepares girls not only for colleges of this region but Sweet Briar, Vassar, Smith, Connecticut, Middlebury, and other leading colleges and universities. Extra curricular activities stress student government, publications, language clubs, student service groups, athletics, music, dramatics, and art. See also page 778

CINCINNATI, OHIO. Pop 503,998. Alt 490 ft. B&O; C&O; L&N; NYC; N&W; P; S R.R. A great inland port in the days of river transportation, Cincinnati extends 14 mi. along terraces above the Ohio River in the SW corner of the state. It was founded soon after the Revolution by the Society of Cincinnati, an organization of Colonial army officers. To the German settlers of 1848 it owed the development of cultural interests far in advance of most American cities. Music and art still play an important part in the life of many of its citizens and a proportionately large number of schools promote these arts. On the hills in suburban areas are the residences of the Tafts and Longworths. The city's rise from its corrupt antecedents was heralded by an early city manager, who, in 1924, brought sound fiscal policies and respect to the administration. From this post Clarence A. Dykstra went on to the presidency of the University of Wis. N of the city in Burnet Woods Park is situated the large municipal university. N, on College Hill, is Ohio Military Institute. 15 mi. NE on Indian Hill is the Cincinnati Country Day School.

Deriving from a little group called Clifton Open Air School which Mrs. Lotspeich conducted in her back yard for her own and neighboring children, with the name changed when it moved to the present country site in 1930, this progressive day school prepares adequately for the secondary schools of the community. Mr.
Wuerfel, on the faculty for 11 years, succeeded to the principalship on Mrs. Lotspeich's retirement in 1947. Appealing to progressive parents, the school offers a flexible program with considerable attention to creative activities. Eight acres of playground space and a barn, renovated and equipped for use in dramatics and music, were recently added.

During the administration of Mrs. Arthur Essex Lyman, principal from 1904, the Mittleberger School was absorbed and the reputation built for work of excellent standard. In 1928 the school moved to its present location in suburban Shaker Heights.

Miss Lake, who takes a prominent part in both national and local

The only one of its type in Toledo, this country day school grew out of a local girls academy long conducted by the Misses Smead. Under Miss Leslie Leland, local support was given to reorganization in 1929, with new buildings on a new site occupied in 1934. Willis Stork, appointed in 1938, attracted able men and women to the faculty.

In 1955, after teaching at St. Paul's, Concord, N.H., and Loomis School, Mr. Henderson was appointed following the resignation of Mr. Stork.

With thoroughness this school prepares for many leading colleges including Northwestern, Michigan, Bryn Mawr, Oberlin, Smith, Trinity. With separate units for the upper and lower school, an extensive building program provides facilities for many extra-curricular projects. Student and class government, athletics, publications, and various hobby clubs are among activities.

This large military school was founded by Henry Harrison Culver, who provided the site and the first buildings and appointed Col. Alexander F. Fleet as first head. In 1910 the latter was succeeded by Brig.-Gen. Leigh R. Gignilliat, commandant from 1896. Col. William E. Gregory was appointed superintendent in 1939. Seven years earlier control of the school passed from the Culver family to the Culver Educational Foundation.

In 1956, upon the death of Col. Gregory, Maj. Gen. Spivey, Commandant of the Air War College, Air University, Maxwell Air Force Base, was appointed. Under his direction, new stress is put upon college preparatory work; strong convictions for the need of developing academic skills at any early age are emphasized. Graduates in recent years have attended more than 200 colleges, among which are Northwestern, the University of Mich., Harvard, Princeton, Stanford, Duke, Yale, MIT, Purdue, Cornell, Georgia Tech, Indiana Univ.

Students are organized in units of 70, each with its own staff of counsellors who supervise all the activities. Cavalry, artillery, and infantry senior units of the R.O.T.C. have long been maintained. For over quarter of a century the War Department has given the military work of the school highest rating, and in 1941 it was made an honor naval training school. There are also numerous religious, athletic, hobby and student government groups.

During the summer months a summer camp for younger boys and Naval and Horsemanship schools are offered. See page 723

John Badlam Howe provided in his will for the foundation of a school to promote "Sound Learning and the Christian Education of American Youth," and today this remains the first objective of the school. Col. Bouton, former head of the history department, was appointed superintendent in 1934. To him is due the greater emphasis on academic standards through analysis and guidance of each boy. The college preparatory curriculum sends many graduates to Michigan State, the University of Mich., Purdue, Indiana University, Knox, Wayne, and many others. The general curriculum offers a number of courses preparing for business. The wide variety of extra-curricular activities includes many athletics, music, publications, debating and dramatics, and hobby clubs.

An expansion program begun in 1950 has included construction of a number of new buildings and other facilities. See page 725

Tudor Hall was founded by Fredonia Allen at a time when there was in the Middle West little preparation for admission into eastern women's colleges, and during its first quarter century built a reputation for the best preparatory work in the region.

Miss Stewart, who after a brief interim succeeded Miss Allen in 1931, has maintained the high standards. The academic curriculum is supplemented by work in art, music, and dramatics. Graduates attend not only Smith, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, but also mid-western colleges and universities. There are opportunities in art, music, drama, and modern dance, as well as in varied co-curricular clubs, publications, and a full program of sports. See also page 780

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICH. Pop 1468. Alt 850 ft. 20 mi. NW of Detroit, Rt. U.S.10. 5 mi. S of Pontiac, George G. Booth, newspaper publisher and patron of the arts and crafts, established his residence early in the century. In 1927 the village of Bloomfield Hills was incorporated. The five educational institutions and church which were established here by Mr. and Mrs. Booth on the 300 acre tract which was their estate, bear the name "Cranbrook," Mr. Booth's ancestral village in England. Reserving only their residence, they gave land, buildings, equipment and endowment funds to the development of Christ Church Cranbrook, Brookside School Cranbrook, Cranbrook School, Kingswood School Cranbrook, Cranbrook Academy of Art, and Cranbrook Institute of Science. The Cranbrook Foundation, created in 1926, was the recipient of virtually all of Mr. Booth's fortune, as well as substantial gifts from Mrs. Booth, totaling approximately $17,500,000. Masterpieces of sculpture and the decorative arts adorn all the institutions, which, with the exception of the church and Brookside, were designed by Eliel Saarinen, distinguished architect and first president of Cranbrook Academy of Art, for whose work here he received the gold medal of the New York Architectural League.

The sound college preparatory curricula at Cranbrook are supplemented by unusual opportunities for the study of fine and applied arts, music, and the sciences. Dr. William Oliver Stevens, artist, writer, senior professor of English at Annapolis, the first head master, was followed in 1935 by Rudolph D. Lindquist who resigned in 1943. He was succeeded by W. Brooke Stabler, rector of Avon Old Farms, Conn., from 1941 to 1944. On his resignation in 1950, Mr. Hoey, who was on the faculty since 1928 and assistant head since 1944, was appointed head master.

Since its opening, Cranbrook has enrolled students from throughout the U.S. and from foreign countries. Graduates are prepared not only for the University of Michigan and Michigan State, but also for many other colleges, including Harvard, Cornell, Amherst, Yale. The academic, cultural, and social life of the school is enriched by associations with artists, writers, scientists, educators, and religious leaders of affiliated Cranbrook institutions. There is a limited work program, as well as athletics for all, dramatics, music, many interest clubs, and publications. Distinctive features are required courses in religion, and a house advisory system. See also page 726

Cadillac, who founded the settlement here early in 1701, La Salle, who made it a stopping place on his way to the Gulf to plant Christian missions in the Mississippi Valley, and Chief Pontiac, are commemorated in popular cars manufactured today in this fifth city of our land. Strategically situated midway in the waterways of the Great Lakes, the city early became of commercial importance, and before the advent of the motor car it had settled down with an air of respectability about its notable civic center. Ford, General Motors, two great wars, have thrust the city's industrial tentacles out into the surrounding country. Henry Ford established the huge, self-supporting Trade School in Dearborn, and his great store of American antiquities are displayed in Greenfield Village and in the Edison Institute Museum which spreads over eight acres. In the city the interests of the people at large are indicated by the huge enrollment of the Cass Technical High School. Some of the older private schools are still in the city. In the beautiful country to the E and N lie great estates and modern developments served by the Grosse Pointe University School in Grosse Pointe, Cranbrook School, City and Country School in Bloomfield Hills, and the Detroit Country Day School in Birmingham.

Detroit University School, founded in 1899, combined with Detroit School for Boys in 1901, and was reorganized under the direction of D. H. Fletcher, head master from 1916 to 1939. C. O. Page succeeded him.

Grosse Pointe Country Day, once a small coeducational school for young children, was developed after 1936 under Lambert F. Whetstone, with a high school curriculum for girls added in 1937. In 1942, Mr. Whetstone became head upon the merger of the two schools.

Following the resignation of Mr. Whetstone in 1948, Mr. Chandler, a Yale graduate of 1942, who served in the Naval Reserve and was later assistant dean at Yale, became head.

The school offers many competitive scholarships, provides a broad curriculum in the major fields of knowledge and courses in public speaking, music, the arts, and shop, to stimulate individual interests. Curricular and extra-curricular activities are conducted on a "parallel education" basis. Graduates of the schools enter leading colleges and universities.

Graduates of the preparatory curriculum scatter to many colleges and universities, including Northwestern, the University of Ill., Washington University, Stanford. Extra-curricular activities emphasize sports and the military life, but there are also opportunities in journalism, dramatics, music, art, and hobbies.

CHICAGO, ILL. Pop 3, 620,962. Alt 593 ft. At the crossroads of the nation, where the great Missouri-Mississippi Basin touches the Great Lakes and the busy commerce of the continent meets east and west, is Chicago. "The Windy City," our second largest, is the merchandise and produce mart and manufacturer of the wealth of the plains. From the Mehitibi range to the N and the coal fields to the S come the raw materials to feed the glowing blast furnaces, by night visible from afar along the lake front, which belch forth unprecedented quantities of the backbone of industry.

Here, where the winds from the prairies sweep over the lake, political, social and economic crosscurrents convene. Notable impetus was given the city by two world fairs. But Chicago's luridly colorful past is still perpetuated in the red brick parochial schools of the late mighty prelate, Cardinal Mundelein, by Louis H. Sullivan's enlightened American renaissance structures, by Samuel Insull, Marshall Field, Colonel McCormick, and others. However, the virile spirit that developed a noble lake front has more recently brought about a renaissance of civic spirit.

The great University of Chicago, established in 1903, was put in front rank by President Harper. It attained greater fame under President Hutchins who, while advocating a stern classic medievalism for the neophyte, throughout his dynamic regime practiced a belligerent modernity in university and public life, maintaining a sane independence rare among college heads. Under his leadership, the democratic roots of American strength found vitality and a new spokesman for untrammelled investigation and unfettered inquiry, to free the educative process.

Most of the well patronized schools for specialized training in music and the arts are within walking distance of the Loop. Some of the preparatory schools are on the South Side, the University's College, Laboratory and Orthogenic Schools, Harvard, and Faulkner. SW in Beverly Hills is the Loring School. In the fashionable North Side above the Chicago River, Francis W. Parker and the Latin Schools, Boys and Girls, are within the city limits. Other schools are separately treated under the suburbs of Downer's Grove, Evanston, Lake Forest, Park Ridge and Winnetka.

Carrying on the tradition of the early American academy, this is one of the leading preparatory schools of the Midwest. William Mather Lewis, later president of Lafayette, was succeeded in 1913 by John Wayne Richards under whom it became one of the foremost schools preparing for eastern colleges. After 28 years of service, he was succeeded by E. Francis Bowditch, whose recognition of the eminent work of his predecessor, as in his writings on education, displayed broad understanding. The academy was moved in 1948 to a new and spacious plant, revealing the confidence of the trustees and alumni in the future of the school.

Mr. Corbin, formerly head of the English department at Salisbury School, was appointed following the retirement of Mr. Bowditch in 1951 to become dean at M.I.T. Long resisting the military tendency of many secondary schools in the Midwest, Lake Forest provides an exacting college preparatory program, with an emphasis on language arts and on developmental reading work, and offers diversified extra-curricular activities, including several publications, public speaking, music, dramatics, various clubs, and a full program of sports. Modelled on the principles of Col. Francis W. Parker, whose school in Chicago was established some 18 years earlier, this parent-owned school developed independently under Perry Dunlap Smith's direction and has attained a national reputation. The school is now divided into three sections with the Middle School occupying a new building erected in 1956, the design for which was instigated by the faculty. A limited number of high school boys are boarded on the campus in a home with a faculty family.

Modified coeducational program permits boys and girls to be educated together except during their early adolescent years, when their classes are held separately, and then brought back together increasingly in the later years of the high school. Flexibility within the curriculum and close cooperation of parents allow a number of unusual activities. Acceleration is offered in many courses, permitting graduates to enter college with advanced standing, among which are Smith, Bryn Mawr, Yale, Princeton, Vassar, Connecticut. Mr. French succeeded Mr. Smith in 1954.

Today drawing its enrollment not only from the local region and from Chicago, but also to some extent from throughout the country, Wayland was founded by the Baptist Education Society of Wis., and directed for 34 years by Edwin P. Brown.

After Weimer K. Hicks, for 11 years at Peddie, took over from Stanley C. Ross in 1943, enrollment was doubled, extensive funds raised to improve grounds and buildings, and a stable, competent faculty brought together. When Mr. Hicks was appointed president of Kalamazoo College, Mr. Patterson, on the staff for five years and director of public relations, took over.

In 1955, to coincide with the centennial year, Wayland completed an extensive and impressive rebuilding program.

Emphasizing a testing program and sound guidance work, and maintaining good academic standards, the school offers a full preparatory program and sends graduates to institutions of higher learning throughout the country as well as to the University of Wis., and other midwestern colleges and universities. There is also a limited general program. The many activities include a school senate, publications, music, photography, radio, skiing, public speaking, dramatics, and a full program of athletics. See also page 837

Long a leader in local education, this vigorous coeducational day school was founded by Peter Engelmann as the German-English Academy, and was for many years under the direction of Max Griebisch. The present name was taken during the first world war. Frank Spigener, appointed director in 1927, retired in 1954, being succeeded by his assistant, Mr. Strow. Many of the graduates enter the University of Wis. and Northwestern, with some scattering to Princeton, Marquette, the University of Colo., Cornell, and others, about equally to Eastern and to mid-western colleges and universities.

Miss Robbins, with experience in the East, Southwest, and Midwest, succeeded in 1954 Phyllis Newman, head from 1947. Carefully selected faculty carry out a well planned program in an informal atmosphere, and the high academic standards prepare not only for colleges of the region but also for Mt. Oldest church school west of the Alleghenies and oldest non-proprietary boys school in the region, Shattuck is also the first independent secondary school to which a regular army officer was detailed by the government, by which it is classed as "essentially military."

Shattuck was the conception of Bishop Whipple, who, familiar with such schools as Winchester and Rugby in England, took over a little day school opened in 1858 by the Rev. James L. Breck and named it for Dr. George Cheyne Shattuck of Boston. Rector from 1867 to 1915 was the Rev. James Dobbin, and from 1916 to 1940 the Rt. Rev. F. A. McElwain, Bishop of Minnesota. Dr. C. W. Newhall, head master for 20 years, was succeeded in 1936 by James S. Guernsey. Following his resignation in 1940, Dr. Donald Henning was made rector and head master. The Rev. Sidney W. Goldsmith, Jr., was installed as rector and head master in 1950.

More than 3000 "Old Shads," not only from families of the Northwest, but also from all sections of the country and from Canada and other foreign countries, have been prepared for colleges and universities throughout the United States and Canada. Among the varied extra-curricular program are music, publications, student council, and numerous sports. See also page 728

Blake in the downtown section, this school was incorporated in 1911 with the backing of local citizens, and under the supervision of the late Charles Bertram Newton became one of the pioneer country day schools. During the two decades of Eugene C. Alder's headship, new buildings were erected, athletics reorganized, the curriculum enriched and strengthened, the school debt wiped out, and endowment and scholarship funds increased. In 1951 a new junior school was built, and a new science wing added to the senior building.

In 1952, when R. Allan Clapp, head master from 1947, resigned, Mr. Cleveland took over his duties. Graduates enter leading colleges and universities throughout the country.

The state capital, St. Paul has long been pre-eminent as a live-stock and meat packing, industrial, grain, trading and transportation center for this vast region. In the black marble and gold leaf lobby of the modern court house stands the 37 foot Indian chief-tain carved by the Swedish sculptor, Carl Milles, out of 55 tons of translucent Mexican onyx. A skyscraper bank building, a municipal auditorium, a hospital and a boulevard named in honor of Frank B. Kellogg are other civic improvements. The academy has two sites—the Country Day School, W of Snelling, and the Junior School in a modern building at 718 Portland Avenue. The military school occupies 43 acres in the Midway section.

Saint Paul Academy grew out of a small day school conducted by C. N. B. Wheeler and F. W. Fiske. When the academy was reorganized in 1914, John DeQ. Briggs, able and scholarly son of Dean Briggs of Harvard, was appointed head master and business manager. On his retirement in 1950, Mr. Read, who had been on the faculty for six years, was appointed head master. Formerly he had served at Pomfret and the John Burroughs School.

A new gymnasium, classrooms, laboratories, an enlarged library, and other facilities were recently completed.

Essentially college preparatory, the academy for over 30 years has sent every graduate on to some reputable college, three-quarters of them entering eastern institutions such as Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Dartmouth, M.I.T., and Williams, and with others entering western colleges, particularly the University of Minn. and Carleton. Unusual among day schools, the academy requires that the boys wear uniforms and devote one hour daily to military drill. There is a full program of athletics.

ST. LOUIS, MO. Pop 856,796. Alt 455 ft. Eighth in population, St. Louis is the most centrally located of our great cities, at the meeting of waterways and transportation routes. Growing pains and a crude culture, softened by a music loving German element, have manifest themselves in political scandals and spasmodic reforms. It is of growing prominence in the national political scheme, though it retains from early days its importance as a raw fur market. The private schools are largely located in the suburbs. The city has numerous Catholic schools and colleges, among them St. Louis University, which includes some women's colleges dating from 1818. About Forest Park, site of the Exposition of 1904, has developed an educational center. To the W in the Wy-down section is Washington University, founded in 1853. The Principia, in the NW district, has built its college section up the river in Elsah, Ill. North of Natural Bridge Road is the 50 acre campus of the St. Louis Country Day School. In the suburb of Clayton are John Burroughs School, Chaminade College Academy, Taylor School, Community School, and Mary Institute.

Of the many schools for Christian Scientists that have been started in various parts of the country, The Principia is the most successful and the only educational institution for the sons and daughters of Christian Scientists that offers work from nursery school through four years of college. Graduates of the high school department enter not only Principia College but also Washington University, Northwestern, M.I.T., the University of Pa., Princeton, and many others. Extra-curricular activities on all academic levels are extensive; some of the programs are dramatics, radio, language clubs, student government, and athletics. On its 50th anniversary in 1947 Mrs. Mary Kimball Morgan, the founder, was made president emerita of the Board, and her two sons, Frederic E. and William E., president and vice-president respectively. There is no direct connection with or financial support from the Christian Science Church, but Christian Science practices, ideals and standards prevail among faculty and students. In consonance with these standards, team work between trustees, school executives and patrons is played up, and personalities are submerged. However, it is apparent even to some Christian Scientists that the school owes its great success to the organizing genius and vision of Mrs. Morgan, president from 1920 to 1947.

Since 1935 the college group has occupied new buildings on a four mile tract of land on the Mississippi near the village of Elsah, Ill. A country site for the Upper and Lower Schools in St. Louis County has been purchased and a building program is under way.

In 1954 Frederic E. Morgan became chairman of the board of trustees, and his brother president of The Principia and a member of the board. David K. Andrews is head master of the St. Louis Campus. See also page 834

Established by five young veterans in the post-war period, this school has justified the aspirations of its early years. Admission requirements are stringent, and the standards of work, the democratic procedures for both faculty and students, and the ensuing careers are exceptional. Mr. McCoy, a westerner, has taught at Milton and Exeter as well as in Okla. and Minn. The enthusiasm of the faculty and their sound ideas on the education of college-bound boys have borne fruit. All of the boys enter colleges, among them Harvard, Wesleyan in Connecticut, Brown, Yale. Many of the graduates are admitted to college or university with advanced standing in several subjects, and many have also won collegiate scholarships at outstanding institutions.

The boys play an important, meaningful part in the democratic operation of the school. Among activities are an effective student council, reading clubs, music, and publications.

First Church school in the region, this was established by Episcopal Missionary Bishop Joseph C. Talbot, and named for Bishop Brownell of Conn., whose daughter contributed to its founding. In 1923 it moved to a 12 acre campus in a western section of Omaha. Dorothy C. Beck, who succeeded Marguerite H. Wickenden in 1942, enriched both the academic and extra-curricular program. Dr. Henry, formerly professor of English at Omaha and Northwestern Universities, was appointed in 1950. The campus has been expanded and a chapel and a new classroom building added. In the secondary and boarding departments, work is now exclusively college preparatory and accelerated courses introduced.

The preparatory program sends graduates to University of Nebraska, Bradford, Stanford, Pine Manor, Wellesley, Smith. Remaining interdenominational in enrollment, and having to an unusual extent the support of the community, Brownell Hall became a Diocesan school in 1950.

In 1952, the Talbot School for Boys was established as a separate division.

This school has been eminently successful from its establishment. Mr. Francis Mitchell Froelicher, of a family of noted educators, founded this school in an attempt to develop social consciousness in boys, giving them some acquaintance with American politics and related subjects, and of history as the story of human development and achievement, with science and languages related to it. Large gifts have resulted in frequent additions to equipment and plant. In 1951, Mr. Poor, after 11 years of association with Mr. Boyden of Deerfield Academy, six as his assistant, succeeded Mr. Froelicher. Mr. Perry succeeded in 1958.

Academic standards continue high at Fountain Valley, and graduates are successfully prepared for the Univ of Colo., Harvard, M.I.T., Stanford, Williams, Dartmouth, and many others. Student

On his death in 1932, the school was taken over by Russell R. Randell and his mother, founder and head of Randell School. Col. A. Y. Hardy took over in 1942.

Charles Froelicher, a third generation member of a Quaker family prominent in independent education, succeeded Col. Arthur C. Wallace in 1955. He has modified the military aspect channeling it into an ROTC-type voluntary program, and is building a sound liberal college preparatory curriculum. Recently the school moved to the outskirts of the city, where it occupies a 74 acre campus with new and improved facilities, and in 1955 the academy was given its present name. See also page 730

Inspired by the precept and example of eastern co-educational schools and by a desire to integrate intellectual, manual, musical and artistic endeavors, Mr. and Mrs. Holden drew up plans for Colorado Rocky Mountain School. With many years of experience at Putney, and a bright confidence in the eager vitality of youth, they established a school of limited enrollment, availing of the healthful and beautiful environment on a mountain site. Farm and construction projects occupy a portion of each student's time, and an annual summer work camp is held. See also page 840

This unique school has been developed by Mr. Warren, formerly in the State Department, with the advice of leading educators and sociologists here and abroad. The school's board of trustees includes Dr. Clyde Kluckhohn, well known Harvard anthropologist, Dr. Robert Ulich of the Harvard Graduate School of Education, former U.S. Indian Commissioner John Collier, and other educational leaders.

Intensive college preparation and citizenship training, from an individual as well as a world viewpoint, are combined in the academic and co-curricular programs. Frequent trips to Indian reservations, the Grand Canyon and other scenic wonders, Arizona communities, and Mexico are a special feature of the citizenship training program, with its sympathetic study of cultures which differ from ours. Graduates are admitted, often with scholarships, to a variety of leading colleges throughout the country.

Extra-curricular activities supplementing and integrated with the academic work include student government, music, crafts, publications, and various sports. Recent additions to the plant include ceramics, lithography, and metal-work studios and a new science laboratory building with facilities for advanced students pursuing special projects. Established by the Misses Eda and Fanny Buddecke and later incorporated by a board of patrons, this school was under the direction of Fanny C. Steele from 1931 until her retirement in 1953. Miss Smith, with previous educational experience in Indiana and Texas, was formerly associated with Hockaday. Most graduates enter Pacific Coast colleges and universities, including the University of Wash., Stanford, Mills, Whitman, but some go East, especially to Smith and Wellesley.

This school was founded by the Rt. Rev. John A. Paddock, first Bishop of Olympia, with the aim that "not only the intellect, but the character, manners and morals of the pupil are subjects of earnest care and solicitude." Funds were provided by friends in the East, including Charles B. Wright, who gave the initial endowment. Miss Jenkins, successor to a line of able executives, has enriched and modernized the curriculum, renovated the plant, doubled the enrollment, and launched a building and development program resulting in 1957 in a new wing with assembly hall-multi-purpose room with stage, faculty lounge and kitchen, covered playground, additional class rooms and studios, and a library to be opened for the 75th anniversary of this old school.

The emphasis continues on preparation for college, with a large number of graduates entering western colleges and universities, although a good number attend eastern institutions. Among the extra-curricular activities are various clubs, athletics, and a Christian Service League.

This oldest boarding school for girls in the state was established by Bishop Lemuel H. Wells and has continued close affiliation with the church, with the Bishop of Spokane as rector. The late Nettie M. Galbraith was principal for over 30 years.

Miss Zorb, vice-principal from 1925, was appointed head in 1943. Modernizing and broadening the curriculum, she continues the emphasis on college preparation, and graduates enter Whitman, Reed, and many other colleges. A new classroom building and gymnasium were added in 1951. Faculty members of Whitman teach some classes in French, music, science, and other subjects. Among extra-curricular activities are athletics, dramatics, music, art, and publications.

The school is now coeducational in all grades, and Mr. Moore, headmaster at the Gabel School, now directs the secondary program.

Early characterized by the use of progressive methods, and today remaining forward looking in its attitude, this well organized school was founded by Ruth Catlin. She and her long-time assistant, Jessie Thain Powers, retired in 1942. Mrs. Strong, formerly dean of undergraduates at Mills College, succeeded Anne Parker Wood in 1944. Tracing its origin to a pioneer institution founded by the Episcopal Church in 1861, and eight years later formally established under the Misses Rodney, early head mistresses, the school was directed for 40 years by the Episcopal Sisters of St. John the Baptist until 1944.

Mrs. Fariss was appointed in 1953, succeeding Miss Jane Allen Saxton, who had become head mistress in 1949 following the administration of Rev. Arthur Val Spinosa. Mrs. Fariss assisted in the establishment of St. Helen's Hall junior college and served as its dean for twelve years before becoming director of St. Helen's Hall in 1944. Students come from a wide area of the West and Midwest, as well as from foreign countries, and are prepared for Willamette, Oregon State, Stanford, Mills, Bennington, Wellesley, and other colleges through a carefully correlated curriculum which places special emphasis on English, speech, and history.

As a consequence of the general financial reorganization and development of the Hall, a new and modern pre-school building was completed in 1955.

Among activities, outdoor sports play an important role in the program, and there are opportunities in art, music, and the dance as well as hobby and social clubs.

Here in this well established preparatory school are carried on traditions of the Webb family, known in the South as educators for more than 80 years through their school in Bell Buckle, Tenn.

The founder, Thompson Webb, became acquainted during his years as a rancher in Calif. from 1911 to 1918 with Sherman Day Thacher, who pointed out to him the need for more boys' schools of good standards in the region, and suggested that he establish his own school. Open-minded, alert to the needs of his boys, he has been eminently successful, attracting able students from all parts of the country. He has played a responsible part in attempts to stabilize academic and professional standards among private schools of the region, notably through the California Association of Independent Schools, and the National Council of Independent Schools.

Many graduates enter Pomona and Stanford, and other Pacific Coast colleges, with some going East to Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and others. The varied extra-curricular program includes many hobby and interest clubs, publications, fossil hunting, and sports.

This leading Church school for girls in California was established by the first Bishop of Los Angeles through benefactions of land and money from the Misses Ellen and Virginia Scripps. Caroline Cummins, associated with Miss Coit at Cambridge School for Girls for seven years, was head mistress from 1921. Under her direction the equipment was improved, good academic standards maintained, and the number of graduates sent to colleges increased, with many attending Pomona, Stanford, Southern Calif., Mills, as well as Eastern colleges such as Smith, Vassar, among others. Miss Larmour, former principal of Hockaday, and with wide experience in teaching, counseling, and administration, on both school and college level, was appointed in 1953. Under her direction the academic program, which places all graduates in college, has been furthered. Among many student activities are participation in the American Field Service Program, an honor society, student council, music and hobby clubs, and religious organizations. See also page 785

LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Pop 1,970,358. Alt 338 ft. AT&SF; SP; UP R.R. One of the world's most astonishing recent growths, fourth city in the country and largest in area, Los Angeles was only a sunbaked, dusty town of some 20,000 in 1887. The original Mexican settlement, midway between the mountains and the ocean, centered about Olvera Street. Here still stands the Church of Our Lady Queen of Angels, dating from 1818. The discovery of oil, the development of harbor facilities, the cinema and the airplane have made it a major seaport and great center of industry and commerce. The city reaches from the San Fernando Valley over the Hollywood hills and the Santa Monica Mountains to the sea. South, in the vicinity of Exposition Park with its stadium seating 90,000, is the University of Southern California.

Preparatory schools are found in all the residential regions, but few remain in the tree-lined old residential parts to the southwest. Page and Marlborough Schools, once in open country, are now surrounded by city blocks. In Hollywood is The Progressive School's 3 acre campus and Black-Foxe School occupies buildings adjacent to the Wilshire Country Club; in North Hollywood is the modern plant of Harvard School. To the west, a group of schools has developed midway between Los Angeles and Santa Monica Bay, — Westlake, and Brentwood and Bel Air Town and Country Schools; the frowning, brick buildings of the University of California at Los Angeles; and the imposing Catholic institutions, Marymount for girls, and Mt. St. Mary's College for women. Berkeley Hall School and Urban School are in Westwood.

Other schools in the Los Angeles area are separately listed under the following town names: Altadena, Claremont, Encino, Glendora, Long Beach, Pasadena, Rolling Hills.

After investigating schools at home and abroad, and as a protest against what she considers to be the excesses of "progressive" education, Mrs. Buckley, the author of "A Guide to a Child's World," opened her first class with eight pupils. Today there are three Buckley schools: The Doheny School, 968 N. Doheny Dr., Los Angeles 46; The Hayvenhurst School, 6907 Hayvenhurst Ave., Van Nuys; The Woodman School, 4477 Woodman Ave., Van Nuys. The last, unlike the other two, has grades III to IX, and all three schools emphasize French, music, art, and speech training. The motto "Self-expression through self-discipline," is embodied in a curriculum which stresses knowledge of fundamentals, begun early, as a basis for "creative" activity.

The Schools now conduct a six-week training course in the summer for present and prospective teachers, and has had published several teachers' manuals.

Bishop Gooden, head master for 34 years and emeritus since 1949, was succeeded by Father Chalmers, formerly head of Kent School in Conn. An Episcopal school, it also appeals to patrons of other denominations. The majority of college preparatory graduates attend California institutions of higher learning.

A development plan has resulted in completion of a modernized gymnasium, a new library, and a new classroom building.

Marlborough traces back to a little school, St. Margaret's, founded in Pasadena by Mary S. Caswell, who in the following year moved the group to the Marlborough Hotel in Los Angeles, and in 1916 to the present site. Ada S. Blake served as head mistress from 1923 to 1942. Mrs. Eugene Overton, Mrs. Caswell's daughter, took over the direction at that time, appointing Mrs. Mitchell principal in 1947.

The school maintains high academic standards, with the majority of graduates entering U.S.C., Stanford, U.C.L.A., and other far western colleges and universities, but with some entering leading junior and senior colleges in the East. In the overall program, each student is "graded" on his personal as well as academic achievement. Student council, publications, sports, and philanthropic projects are among activities.

Influential in the region, this successful college preparatory school is the creation of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Squibb, its founders, and at its head for 20 years. Mr. and Mrs. Rich, with the school from the founding, took over its management after the retirement in 1952 of Mr. and Mrs. Squibb, who remain directors of the corporation.

The Kent Plan of variable tuition, dependent on the finances of the parent, has long been operative, and students participate in the operation of the school plant.

In addition to the integrated communal projects, intra-mural athletics, and team sports with neighboring schools, camping and horseback trips are popular. Graduates enter colleges throughout the country including Stanford, University of Calif., U.C.L.A., Pomona. Princeton, and Cal. Tech.

This school was founded in 1889 by Sherman Thacher, who had moved from New Haven to Ojai with a younger brother in need of a dry, healthful climate, and who set out an orange orchard, and took a few boys to tutor. The school soon became well known for its interesting outdoor life and for its successful academic preparation for eastern colleges, both of which remain guiding characteristics of the school today. A vivid picture of the early days of the school are given in "Sherman Thacher and his School," by LeRoy McKim Makepeace. Mr. Thacher died in 1931 and five years later his second son assumed full responsibility. On the latter's retirement in 1949, Mr. Chase, who had been on the faculty since 1938, the war years excepted, was appointed. The completion of a recent building program has resulted in a new dormitory, an addition to the library, a modern infirmary, and other facilities.

A stimulating description of the school in its various stages of development is given in the five semi-centennial publications, one for each decade. Thacher students, most of whom own and care for their own horses, have for their rides and trips a network of trails, many built by the boys themselves. They also take care of their own quarters, share turns waiting on table, and participate in the construction and maintenance projects through fortnightly afternoon "work days." Among other activities are sports, music, dramatics, fine arts, and publications. Polytechnic School, the largest independent school in California, offers a broad program which is sensitive to the demands of able students. Adjacent to The California Institute of Technology, and formerly part of the old Throop Polytechnic Institute, from which both institutions derive, it gained an enviable reputation during three decades when directed by Grace Henley. Katharine Lee, principal from 1946, was succeeded in 1950 by Appleton Mason, and in 1955 Mr. Stork, for 18 years headmaster of Maumee Valley Country Day School, was appointed. Under the direction of its founders, Mr. and Mrs. William Templeton Johnson, this school attained early prominence through its identification with the educational philosophies of its namesake. Since 1941, under the board of parent trustees, the curriculum is now thorough-going and conservative in approach. Students are drawn from a wide area. The rich program offers opportunities in foreign languages, art, music, dramatics, and shop, and in 1957 an accelerated mathematics and science program was started for grades 7 and 8. Particular attention is paid to reading progress.

One of our leading cultural centers, San Francisco today remains the quintessence of Calif. and the golden west. Built on the sand dunes at the tip of the peninsula bounded by the Pacific, the Golden Gate and the Bay, its street cars must be hauled up the hill by cable. The Presidio, famous since Mexican days as military headquarters, faces the Golden Gate. On the Pacific front, Golden Gate Park is unique among parks. Here is found the greatest center for Chinese in this hemisphere and the "Latin Quarter" is also noted for its color. The greater San Francisco area is today knit more closely by the greatest bridges built by man, over which many residents speed to erstwhile secluded areas across the bay.

Oldest non-sectarian school for girls in California and known successively for its directors, Mrs. Burrage and Miss Baker, under the direction of Dr. Samuel H. Willey, associated with the establishment of Mills and the University of California, it was known as the Van Ness Seminary. Miss Hamlin, one of the women early to hold college degrees advanced her belief in higher education for women through undertaking sound college preparation here. Her successor in 1927 was Mrs. Edward Babson Stanwood, who moved the school to its present attractive site. Miss Mereen, who succeeded her in 1946 and who had taught at the Marlborough and Anna Head Schools, continues to inculcate respect for academic achievement. Graduates attend eastern and western colleges. See also page 786

Curtis Wosley Cate, founder, directed this school for four decades. First called the Santa Barbara School, from the time of its merger with the Catalina Island School in 1943, it was known as the Cate and Vosburg School until Mr. Keith Vosburg's retirement in 1946. In 1951, a year after the founder was succeeded by Calvin Miller, it became known as the Cate School. Mr. Parkman, of the well known Boston family of educators and formerly Assistant Dean at Harvard and teacher at Brooks School was appointed in 1954. He has strengthened the faculty and stabilized enrollment while continuing the rigorous work which allows acceleration.

Standards of work are high, and students are prepared for Yale, Harvard, the University of Calif., Stanford, M.I.T., and other leading colleges, both in the East and in the West.

There are many opportunities in sports, school publications, and hobbies; nearby beaches are easily accessible for swimming, surfing, and sailing. Each boy is required to participate in a weekly work program, in addition to daily maintenance of his own room and of the classrooms.

Established as Oahu College by New England Congregational missionary families for their own children, Punahou was the first American college preparatory school west of the Rocky Mountains. For over a century the school served descendants of the early missionaries and later arrivals from "the States." A two million dollar building program on the 76-acre campus has added greatly to the school's facilities, including a new 28-unit elementary school, a science building, a gymnasium, and a student union memorial center.

Today the student body is a cross section of the races and religious faiths in Hawaii and is drawn from every economic stratum. Graduates enter the University of Hawaii, Stanford, the universities of Calif., Ore., and Wash., Harvard, and many other colleges and universities. See also page 846

Under the direction of Mr. Taylor, for 18 years a master and administrator at the Choate School, a sound college preparatory program has been instigated from grade 7. With unusual opportunities in languages, science and mathematics, the school has attracted wide support throughout the islands. A work program for all students is offered and such activities as sports, trips, hikes, riding, and clubs. See also page 735

● FOREIGN SCHOOLS

Increasing travel and the good educational programs of many schools abroad present interesting opportunities for primary and secondary education for young Americans in many foreign countries. Some schools arrange accompanied travel to and from their boarding sessions, and vacation time can be occupied by planned travel for the students. The high standards of many of these schools increasingly attract international interest, and the added opportunities for language study and widened horizons offered by schools abroad prompts us to renew this recurrent feature of this Handbook. In subsequent editions, additional data will be incorporated and suggestions and comments concerning the furtherance of these listings will be appreciated.

SCHOOLS ABROAD OF INTEREST TO AMERICANS

A selected list of English schools are listed here offering programs of interest to American students, while on the Continent, a variety of schools with both bilingual and native language sessions are given. Popular are the Swiss schools where a great variety of programs attract students from many countries.

Representative schools in other countries, Mediterranean, Asiatic, Pacific are listed in that order. Central and South American schools follow in brief accounts. For other listings including Canadian schools, last included in the 35th edition (1954), and for more complete Latin American schools, reference is made to the 34th edition (1953) of this Handbook. Schools for American Dependents Abroad, for the most part attached to the Armed Forces and missions follows.

When choosing programs for a student in these schools, one should write for particulars regarding the linguistic, scholastic, and requirements for admission and transfer. Additional information may be obtained from local educational sources or the U. S. Consular and Diplomatic Services.

American preparatory schools, as the colleges and universities, are not disinclined to credit commendable scholastic performances at foreign schools.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS ILLUSTRATED

presents more than 250 leading independent schools throughout the country comprising a distinguished group of national appeal.

These are the schools' own statements profusely illustrated with their photographs of the facilities and activities which characterize each school.

This section of the authoritative standard annual HANDBOOK OF PRIVATE SCHOOLS is also separately issued to aid those seeking the school that best fulfills the educational requirements of each child.

ILLUSTRATED ANNOUNCEMENTS

Boys, Girls, Coeducational, Post-graduate (Junior Colleges and Specialized Training) and Foreign Schools, are separately grouped, and geographically arranged to facilitate ready comparison of like schools in each region.

Each of these schools is also presented in the Descriptive Text of the Handbook with comparative statistical data and description where cross reference is found for these Announcements.

The Index of Announcements provides page reference to each school.

Parents and school advisers will find helpful these illustrated pages in making preliminary survey of school opportunities available in the various regions.

For complete data on private school facilities throughout the country, and to locate any of the thousands of schools described, refer to the index of the 1250 page HANDBOOK.

For further school information, write Porter Sargent, 11 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass.

BERWICK ACADEMY, SOUTH BERWICK, MAINE

ALBERT L. KERR, B.A., Ed.M.,
Headmaster

The oldest secondary school in Maine, founded 1791, Berwick Academy seeks to develop responsible citizenship in all its students. Undergoing its greatest period of development, the Academy inculcates in its students the virtues of moral integrity and hard work. Both in its boy's boarding and coeducational day departments, Berwick gives a solid college-preparatory foundation in languages, history, math and sciences.

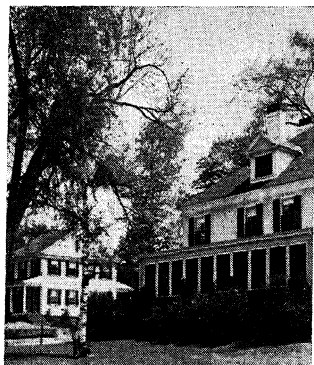

The location, 12 miles from the Main-New Hampshire seacoast, 70 miles from Boston, and 60 miles from the White Mts., is ideal for a variety of sports. There is a wide range of extra-curricular activities, including a splendidly equipped machine and wood-working shop.

EMERSON SCHOOL FOR BOYS

RALPH W. TURNER, S.B., Ed.M.,
Head Master

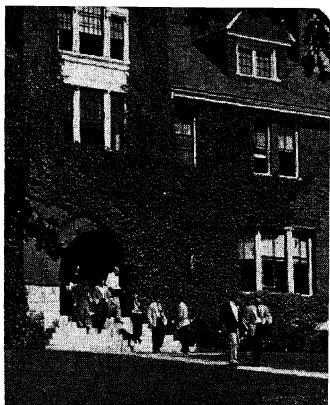

The Emerson School for Boys, located in the historic school town of Exeter, N. H., 50 miles by rail from Boston, offers a course of study from the 4th through the 10th grades for boys 8-15 years of age.

The curriculum is based on the requirements of the Secondary Education Board. Remedial Reading and Tutoring are available under the guidance of specialists. Boys are closely supervised in respect to their studies, health, character training, and sports. The classes average about nine students each. A complete testing service is available.

Coached athletics are available for all boys. There is a wide range of opportunities for hobbies and extra-curricular activities.

Hebron Academy, one of the early Maine schools, established 1804, is located high in the beautiful Oxford hill country 50 miles northwest of Portland. The surrounding country provides for skiing, hiking and fishing. Athletics and extracurricular activities are handled by regular faculty members; a close friendly atmosphere exists between faculty and boys.

HEBRON ACADEMY

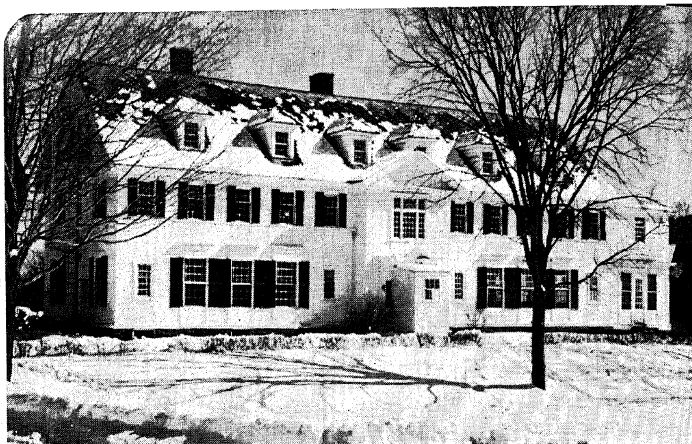

HEBRON, MAINE

CLAUDE L. ALLEN, JR., A.B., M.A., Head Master

Hebron offers a four-year College Preparatory Course under the guidance of a large and able faculty.

The boys are housed in modern dormitories. The Infirmary contains ten beds, a dispensary, and living accommodations for two nurses. Most classes are held in Sturtevant Hall. The Sargent Memorial Gymnasium contains a large basketball floor, with built-in stage for dramatics and projection booth for cinemascope pictures. The Gymnasium also has a beautiful 75-foot swimming pool. A distinctive feature of the school plant is the new Stanley Indoor Arena built in 1952. This building with its 88x192 foot surface insures ideal skating in the winter and provides 4 indoor tennis courts for late fall and early spring.

PROCTOR ACADEMY

ANDOVER, NEW HAMPSHIRE

LYLE H. FARRELL, B.A., Head Master

This secondary boarding school, limited to 120 boys, was founded in 1848 to meet largely local needs. Today it draws from all parts of the United States and occasionally from foreign countries.

College preparation is emphasized, and all the boys go on to some form of higher education. For boys who will ultimately finish in the college preparatory course, but who need remedial work first, and for others who anticipate a more practical career, the Liberal Course offers a complete and different program of academic work, and a coordinated program in the school shops. In the boat shop, 30 or more skiffs, sailboats, and motorboats are built each year by individual boys. The metal shop includes training in welding, machine turning, and automobile mechanics. Several old cars are completely rebuilt each year.

The flexible program makes possible a broad course for the gifted boy; those who need remedial help in reading or mathematics can have it without being segregated.

The school has long featured skiing and sailing, as well as football, hockey, baseball and tennis. For boys who are not fond of competitive sports, forestry, fishing, hunting, and the improvement squad are available.

ST. PAUL'S SCHOOL

CONCORD, NEW HAMPSHIRE

REV. MATTHEW M. WARREN, B.D., D.D., Rector

St. Paul's, from small beginnings a century ago, has grown until it now has upwards of 440 boys and an area of about 2000 acres of woods and open country. Our aim remains what it has always been, the informal and friendly supervision of every boy in all his activities until he has grown wise enough to attend to them himself.

St. Paul's is a Church school, a Christian school, which makes the worship and service of God the center of its life. The curricula provide preparation for college or business; intramural athletics afford team experience for all boys according to their diverse interests, abilities and stage of maturity; and the several cultural activities contribute to the all round training of the boys, thus fitting them for citizenship in the modern world.

Every boy who enters St. Paul's School in a sense receives scholarship aid, for the tuition does not cover the expense of his residence and education. In addition to this aid some 100 boys receive scholarships which pay part of their tuition fee.

The School is anxious to maintain a broad geographical distribution among its boys, as well as close relationships with the families of its alumni. A few boys are admitted above the Fourth Form.

THE PHILLIPS EXETER ACADEMY

EXETER, N. H., Founded 1781

WILLIAM G. SALTONSTALL,
A.B., A.M., L.H.D., LL.D., LITT.D., Principal

In its 177th year, Exeter is situated in an old New England town in the Seacoast Region of New Hampshire. Enrolling boys from 43 states and 18 foreign countries, with diverse social and family backgrounds, Exeter moves nearer its ideal as a national school.

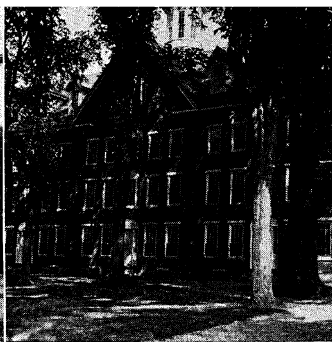

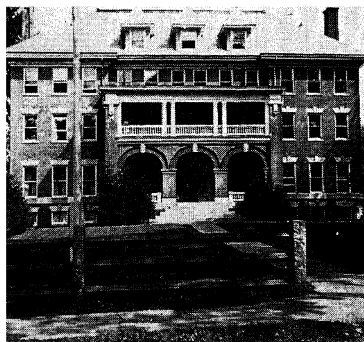

The 4-year college preparatory curriculum offers wide flexibility in courses presented at different levels of individual ability. A skilled faculty with varied educational backgrounds provides constant stimulation toward the building of a firm academic foundation and the fullest use of a freely inquiring mind.

CARDIGAN MOUNTAIN SCHOOL, CANAAN, N. H.

ROLAND W. BURBANK, A.B., M.S., Head Master

City bred tensions disappear in the quiet, spacious countryside enabling a boy to tackle his studies undisturbed and even to discover that school can be fun! Recreational activities take advantage of the woods, fields, mountains and lakes that dominate the environment. Camping, hiking, skiing, swimming, skating, canoeing, campcraft and fishing are added to the usual sports. The cultural activities of the nearby Dartmouth campus are available. The needs of each individual are carefully studied by a large faculty. Special language training is provided when necessary.

NEW HAMPTON SCHOOL

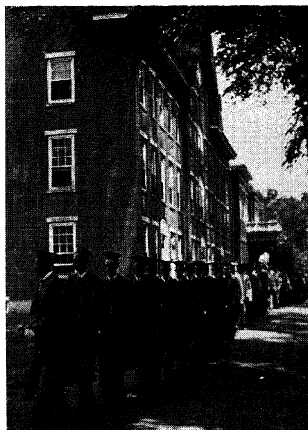

NEW HAMPTON, NEW HAMPSHIRE

FREDERICK SMITH, A.M., Head Master
T. HOLMES MOORE, A.B., Executive Head Master

The graduates of this old New England school, founded in 1821, each year enter some twenty different colleges. Nearly every eastern college of importance has New Hampton boys among its students. The School is proud of the success of its graduates in college and in life occupations. Twenty per cent of the students are sons or brothers of alumni.

New Hampton students find at the school experienced masters, a country environment conducive to study, a broad sports program that provides for each boy according to his ability, and a genuine interest in the welfare and success of each student.

The School is easily accessible by car from all points in New England—100 miles of good highway from Boston. Four trains a day from Boston and New York.

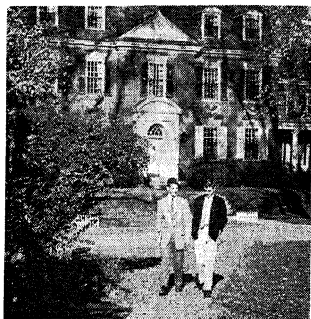

HOLDERNESS SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N. H.

DONALD C. HAGERMAN, B.A.,
Head Master

As Holderness begins its 79th year the School continues to attach the greatest importance to developing intelligent and responsible citizens through cooperative living and through sound intellectual and physical training. The college preparatory course gives a thorough foundation in English, foreign languages, history, mathematics, and the sciences. Maximum enrollment of 125, with a faculty of 17, provides that close association between teacher and student made possible by classes averaging 10 to 12 boys.

The location, in the heart of the White Mountains, is particularly ideal for skiing and outing club activities. A wide choice of team sports varies with the seasons. The boys also gain a strong feeling of responsibility through school government and the daily jobs provided by the supervised work program.

VERMONT ACADEMY, SAXTONS RIVER, VERMONT

LAURENCE G. LEAVITT, B.S., A.M.,
Head Master

The school property consists of 75 acres—immediate campus is 36. The atmosphere is that of an informal fellowship working with common interests for a common end. Each boy is encouraged to develop to the full extent of his capacity. Because natural endowments differ, this calls for understanding and individual handling; the program is adjusted to meet the needs of the student. Special classes in remedial reading are held. Graduates enter liberal arts and technical colleges, business and vocational schools.

The Academy tries to provide an opportunity for a boy to enjoy whatever sport or wholesome interest he may have.

With one hundred and twelve years of experience and growth, Tilton School has come to hold high rank among college preparatory schools. Nurtured in the independent atmosphere of New England, the School gives steady allegiance to democratic principles and processes. It believes in challenging boys to independent thought, to excellence of conduct and performance — in preparation for good work in college, and for lives of useful service.

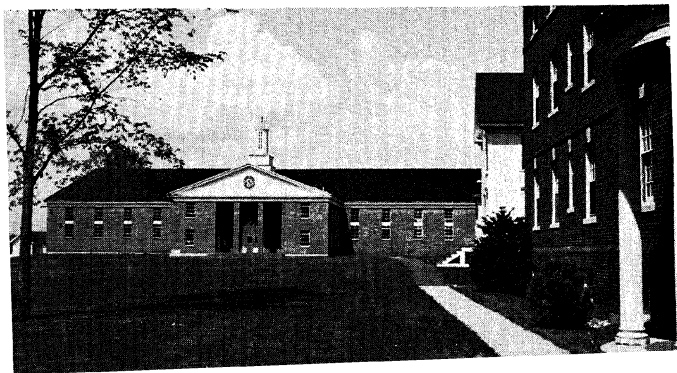

TILTON SCHOOL

TILTON, NEW HAMPSHIRE

HERBERT B. MOORE, A.B., A.M., Ed.M., Headmaster

The chief purpose of Tilton School is to prepare boys for admission to college and for competent work in college. Academically the School has a group of basic courses which are studied intensively. Tilton boys are helped to plan the wise use of their time; they learn to live on equal terms with their fellows; the whole program of the School seeks the development of desirable social behavior and citizenship.

The campus comprises 63 acres, with the school buildings grouped together on 38 acres of high ground overlooking the town of Tilton and the Winnepesaukee Valley. The Tilton Memorial Athletic Field, the gift of the late Major Charles E. Tilton, has facilities for football, soccer, baseball, tennis, track and field events. Central New Hampshire affords excellent opportunities for winter sports. Extra-curricular activities are planned to help boys enjoy themselves as well as develop individual talents.

Announcements—628

Located in picturesque north central Vermont, Sterling School occupies 7 buildings on the southern edge of Craftsbury Common. It is near the famous skiing village of Stowe, and about 180 miles northeast of Boston; rail and plane connections are available to nearby Montpelier. The town common affords athletic fields; the village gymnasium and library accommodate students of Sterling School.

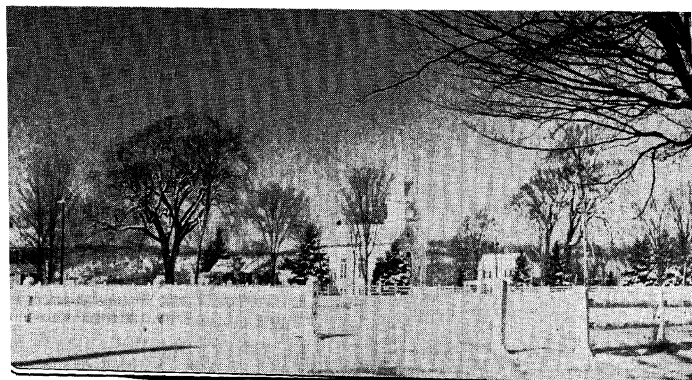

STERLING SCHOOL

CRAFTSBURY COMMON, VERMONT

NORMAN E. RIOUX, A.B., Headmaster

As a college preparatory boarding school for boys, Sterling follows a conservative approach in the educational process, and prepares its students to meet not only the admissions requirements of colleges and universities, but life in this world of rapidly changing technological progress. Classes are small; there are conferences and counseling sessions; individual help is given when needed.

The 4-year humanities course is required of all toward the development of respect for and understanding of culture, literature, music and art. Civic responsibility is encouraged through student government; athletics stress the value of physical training and the importance of competitive sports; hobbies provide less formal recreation.

BELMONT HILL — a day and boarding school for boys — answers the demand for solid college preparation in its locale.

Boarding facilities are provided for a limited number of boys from more distant areas. Future plans call for the expansion of these facilities.

BELMONT HILL SCHOOL

BELMONT, MASSACHUSETTS

CHARLES F. HAMILTON, A.B., Headmaster

The strongest feature of Belmont Hill School is its faculty — a dedicated group of relatively young men. The curriculum is conservative but sufficiently large in scope. Due attention is given the able students by sectioning in small classes (8-12) and by providing advanced courses in languages, mathematics, and history. Foreign languages are taught by the direct method (oral-aural); the laboratory sciences now have new labs for each of them and much time is scheduled for this work. A new Arts and Crafts building has made it possible to offer more in this area. Through Music appreciation classes, choral and orchestral groups, the public speaking and debating program, the many opportunities for the valuable experience in student publications and the dramatic productions each year, boys are encouraged to develop their capacities and interests in many extra curricular activities. A strong student government is a vital part of the School.

In athletics, it is possible for every boy to participate at some level of all sports. A new artificial rink insures the continuance of our strong hockey tradition. All coaching is done by full-time faculty members.

The School is non-sectarian. The daily chapel service is non-denominational.

MEMORIAL TOWER

Phillips Academy, founded in 1778, is the oldest incorporated academy in the U.S. Founded to teach boys "the great end and real business of living," it is democratic in tradition and spirit. The students come from 43 states and 19 foreign countries. 27% of the boys receive scholarship aid. Andover graduates annually enter 40 colleges and universities.

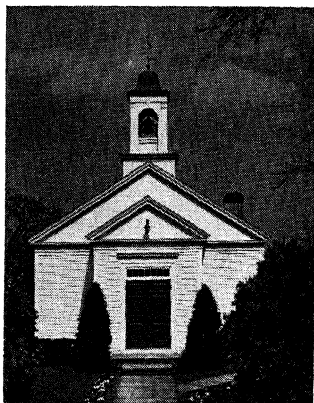

The course of study is the four years prior to college. Classroom sections are small with one teacher for every nine boys. The balanced curriculum and complete physical plant enable boys to develop individual talents while fulfilling a prescribed core of essential subjects.

BROOKS SCHOOL

NORTH ANDOVER, MASS.

FRANK D. ASHBURN, B.A., M.A.,
L.H.D., Head Master

Brooks School, named for Phillips Brooks and founded in 1927, has 183 boarders and 11 day boys in five forms. Brooks prepares for any college or university, but is primarily interested in preparing boys for life in their world. It has an active program in athletics, dramatics, music, publications, and community activities. Frank D. Ashburn has been head master from the founding. Although he is not ordained, the Chapel is considered the heart of the school life. Brooks remains a "family" school, small enough for individual attention, large enough to enable a boy to stand on his own feet. Curriculum is stiff; aims of scholarship and conduct are high.

THOMPSON ACADEMY

THOMPSON'S ISLAND,
BOSTON, MASS.

HOUGHTON D. PEARL, B.S., M.S.,
Headmaster

Founded in 1814, Thompson Academy follows the American concept of the right of the individual to be educated to the full extent of his ability in a friendly favorable environment.

Offering the equivalent of Grades VII-XII, the Academy's role is to provide care, instruction and guidance for promising boys whose home situations are not conducive to their proper development in accordance with their social and financial needs.

College Preparatory and General Courses are available.

Distinctive features are community service, student government, marine activities, farming and basic sports.

THE HUNTINGTON SCHOOL FOR BOYS

320 HUNTINGTON AVE., BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

WILLIAM G. WILKINSON, A.B., Ed.M., Head Master

WILLIAM N. RANDELL, A.B., M.A., Ass't. Head Master

The Huntington School was founded in 1909. It is an independent urban day school staffed by an experienced faculty of men teachers. It prepares thoroughly for entrance to, and success in, all colleges.

A boy may register for the ninth, tenth, eleventh or twelfth grade, or he may take one year of post-graduate work between high school and college.

Classes are not large and every boy receives individual attention. Facilities are available for a complete aptitude and testing program.

A varied program of activities and athletics offers track, basketball, and swimming.

The Summer Session (est. 1912) is coeducational. It offers intensive preparation in subjects from the ninth to the twelfth grade. The Summer School is conducted by the regular staff members assisted by instructors from neighboring schools.

EAGLEBROOK SCHOOL

DEERFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

C. THURSTON CHASE, A.B., M.A., Headmaster

Located on wooded Mt. Pocumtuck and overlooking the historic village of Old Deerfield, Eaglebrook—a junior boys' boarding school—offers its students an unusual combination of beautiful surroundings, a full and varied life, and academic instruction designed to meet the requirements of leading secondary schools. Enrollment is 148 boarding pupils drawn from all parts of the United States, and abroad.

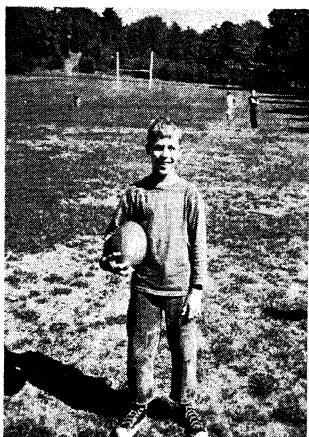

For thirty-two years under the direction of C. Thurston Chase, the school has devoted its energies to laying the essential groundwork for the future learning and living of boys 9 to 16 years of age (grades IV through IX). Eaglebrook has over eleven hundred alumni and is proud of their outstanding record in leading preparatory schools and colleges here and abroad.

In a homelike atmosphere, an able faculty assists the Headmaster in the sympathetic guidance of each boy's potentialities, seeking to help each discover his possibilities and challenging him to his best achievement. In small classes boys find plenty of companionship and stimulus, and teachers have the time to give students individual attention.

EAGLEBROOK provides unusual opportunities in student government, music, arts and crafts, printing and journalism, amateur radio and photography, dramatics, public speaking, dancing, and in an athletic program that includes all the major sports, as well as tennis, riflery, swimming, and a nature-woods program. Special emphasis is placed on the winter sports, skiing and skating. Eighteen buildings include dormitories, class buildings, a crafts building, press shop, and a large indoor sports building. The school physician and resident nurses operate the modern Allen-Chase Infirmary and ensure careful health supervision.

The Eaglebrook boy has a busy and constructive life. He learns to appreciate the satisfactions of work well done in the classroom and the fun of activities in the out-of-doors. Individual interests are encouraged and new skills learned. Emphasis is on a positive approach to life and on the ability to live and work effectively with others. Clear thinking is stressed in building a strong background of general information and in developing skill in reading, writing, mathematics, languages, and some form of creative work. Thus Eaglebrook seeks to develop at an early age the basic abilities that will bring confidence, enjoyment, and success in life.

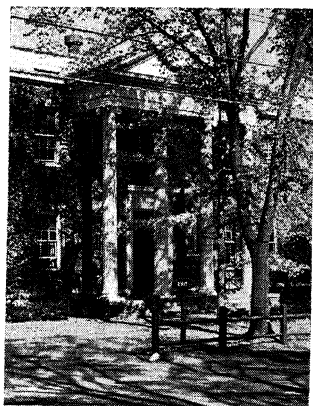

THE FENN SCHOOL, CONCORD, MASS.

ROGER C. FENN, A.B.,
Headmaster

In the open country one mile from the center of this historic town, Fenn aims to give an all-round education to the younger boy, with the major subjects accompanied by music, manual arts, athletics and dramatics. There is hard work relieved by strenuous play.

Advanced work at all levels is offered to those with more ability.

An understanding of other nations is fostered in the teaching of French in all grades by the direct method.

ARTHUR B. PERRY, A.B., A.M.,
L.H.D., Head Master

The Boys' School, admitting both day and boarding scholars, offers a course of studies in grades 7-12, though applications are not encouraged after grade 9.

A normal program of studies includes four or five major courses. Minor courses in Music, Art and Public Speaking are general requirements; additional minors are optional in the upper classes.

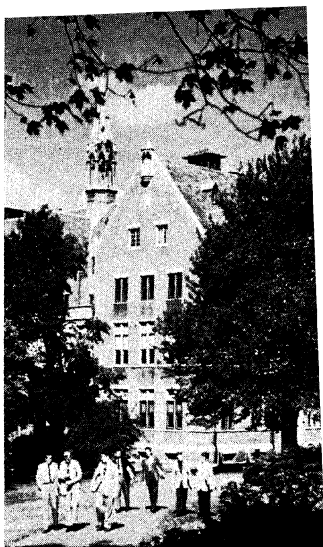

The equipment of Boys' School includes 2 schoolhouses, Chapel and Library, 4 dormitories, dining halls, central kitchen, heating plant, gymnasium, baseball cage, artificial ice rink, infirmary, and 12 houses for faculty members.

Generations of Milton Academy teachers and students have developed certain principles which serve as the basis of routine for all.

ST. JOHN'S is located in Danvers, Massachusetts, (21 miles north of Boston) and is conveniently situated between Route 128 and U.S. 1.

The School's 5 major buildings are strategically placed on the beautiful campus which covers more than 50 of the 220 acres.

The athletic area includes a football stadium, a new gymnasium, regulation track, hockey rink, baseball diamonds, tennis courts and ample intramural playing fields.

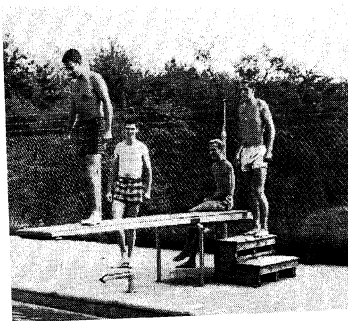

ST. JOHN'S PREPARATORY SCHOOL

DANVERS, MASSACHUSETTS

Founded in 1907 as a Catholic Preparatory School for boys, St. John's is conducted by the Brothers of St. Francis Xavier. They bring to their instruction the best traditions and practices of an order which for over 100 years has devoted itself exclusively to the education of boys.

St. John's aims to impart to its students the best possible moral, physical, and intellectual training. The School subscribes to the belief that unity in education is not merely intellectual achievement, but rather the harmonious development of all the powers of soul, of mind, and of body.

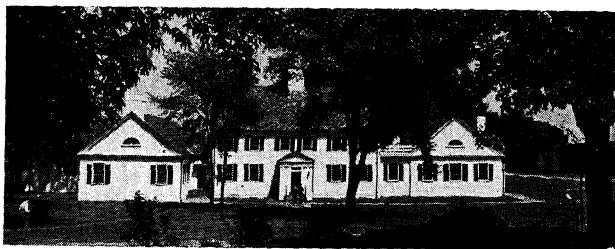

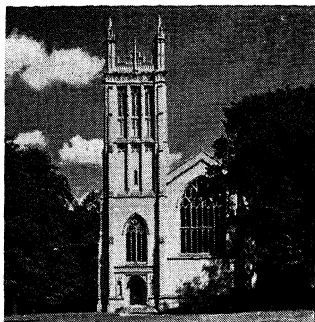

GROTON SCHOOL

GROTON, MASS.

REV. JOHN CROCKER, A.B., B.D.,
Head Master

Groton, founded in 1884 by the Rev. Endicott Peabody, has traditionally presented education not as mere knowledge, but as knowledge and understanding as means toward Christian ends. It strives to develop and extend a boy's talents and interests to where he is ready and eager to carry on his education under his own initiative in college and beyond. It is small enough to nourish the intimate spirit of family living, and large enough to provide the many responsibilities of living in a community.

Boys are sought from a wide diversity of backgrounds. Approximately one-fourth of the students are receiving scholarships. Most boys enter at the seventh and eighth grade levels though a minority are accepted into the ninth grade for four years. The School welcomes visits from parents and boys.

GOVERNOR DUMMER ACADEMY

SOUTH BYFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

EDWARD W. EAMES, A.B., M.A., L.H.D., Head Master

The oldest boarding school for boys in the United States, Governor Dummer is in the North Shore country, thirty miles north of Boston. There it retains much of the charm and tradition of New England.

A high ratio of masters to students makes for a friendly homelike life and personal attention to each boy. Stressing hard work and high scholarship, the school has a national patronage. Most of the boys enter the leading colleges and universities of the East.

FRANK L. BOYDEN, Pd.D., LL.D., Head Master

Deerfield, founded in 1797, is one of the leading Schools for boys. Several of its buildings date from Pre-Revolutionary days. Its ideals are true to the old traditions of scholarship and moral training, but the Academy of today is thoroughly modernized and completely in touch with the life of the times.

The four-year Course of Study corresponds to that of the senior high school and prepares students for any College or University. The School Certificate is accepted by all Colleges admitting without examination.

Dormitories are splendidly equipped, as are the Science and School Buildings, Gymnasium with Swimming Pool, and Memorial Building for non-athletic activities.

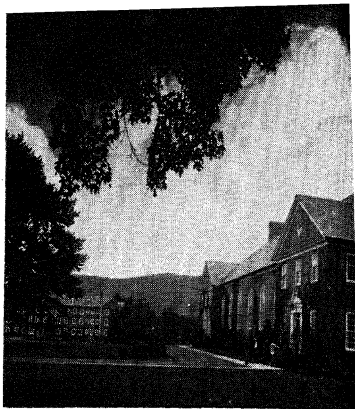

Fields, hills, and streams are part of the School Campus and each student participates in some form of daily athletic exercise and sport — Football, Soccer, Basketball, Hockey, Baseball, Tennis, and Lacrosse.

Glee Club, Debating, and Dramatics are popular extracurricular activities. Each year members of the Senior Class present a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta as part of the regular Commencement exercises.

A Deerfield boy is offered thorough College Preparation and a wholesome social life with his fellows.

Williston is located on the College Highway, 15 miles north of Springfield. Noteworthy among its equipment is the Recreation Center, with rooms devoted to students activities, the gymnasium, and an excellent swimming pool.

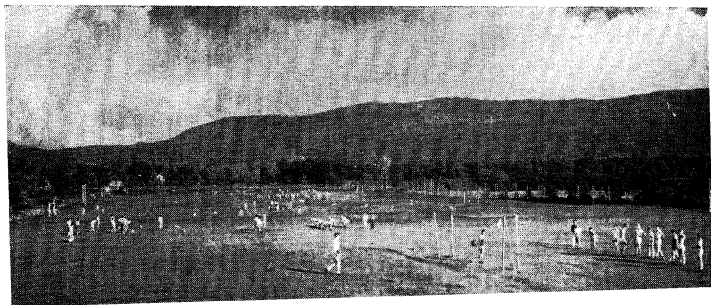

WILLISTON ACADEMY

EASTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS

PHILLIPS STEVENS, B.A., M.A., Head Master

Williston was founded in 1841. During its hundred years it has sent thousands of students to college, well prepared to cope successfully with the problems of college life. Today it stands as one of the few well-endowed New England schools maintaining the high college preparatory standards, directing its academic work to thorough preparation for college in an atmosphere designed to develop responsibility and cooperation.

The School encourages hard work and fair play. Of utmost importance are the experience and ability of masters devoted to the best interests of the boys under them. Scholarship aid is awarded on the basis of need, character, and high standing.

CORNWALL ACADEMY

GREAT BARRINGTON, MASSACHUSETTS

JOHN GEDDES MORAN, B.S., M.A., Head Master

This boarding school for 50 boys, ages 11 through 18, stresses that every student, whether of brilliant or average ability, can be successfully prepared for college. Providing for each pupil an individually planned program that permits him to advance at his own pace, Cornwall Academy has prepared students for leading colleges and universities throughout the country.

A cosmopolitan, inter-racial enrollment is achieved through the policy that admission is determined solely by individual qualifications, without regard to race, religious denomination, or national origin.

Mr. and Mrs. Moran lead a faculty who are skilled in working through the educational and personal problems of the students, and who have been notably successful in guiding their pupils toward desired goals. The curriculum permits wide choice to meet intellectual interests while meeting the entrance requirements of the chosen college.

The Berkshire campus, formerly the Wetherbee estate, offers many opportunities for healthful, outdoor activities, which are supplemented by an interesting program of clubs and social activities.

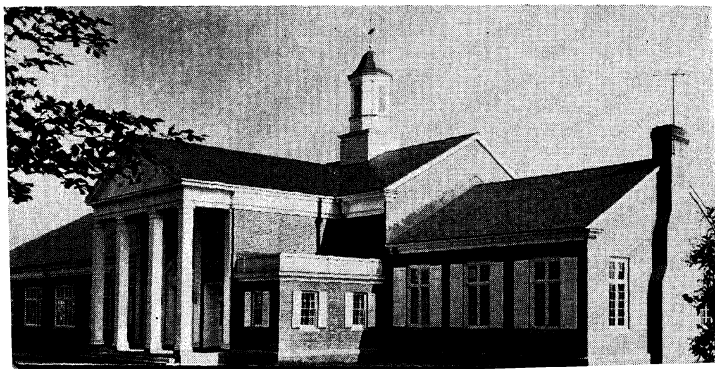

THE LAWRENCE ACADEMY

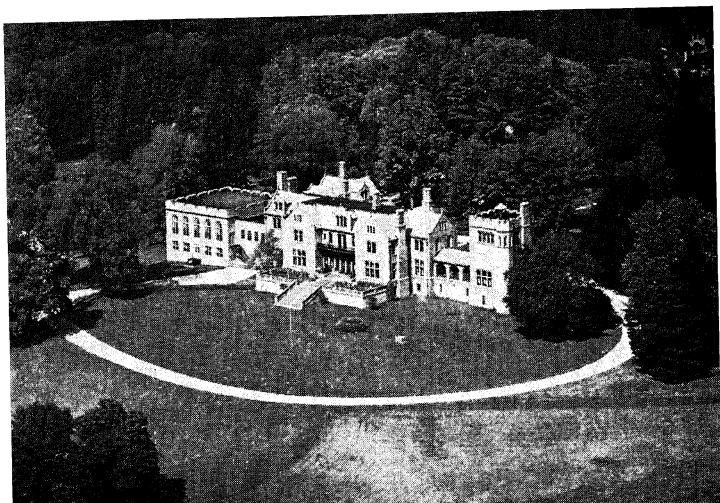

GROTON, MASSACHUSETTS

FRED CLIFTON GRAY, A.M., Principal

Founded in 1793 in an attractive New England town 36 miles from Boston, this School, with an excellent and enthusiastic teaching staff, successfully prepares boys 12-19 for college. Each boy's courses are determined by his individual need. The Certificate is accepted by colleges so admitting. There are School Scholarships available for colleges.

Athletics, although compulsory, are not overemphasized nor commercialized and great care is exercised for the physical well being of the student body. The Fred C. Gray Building, below, houses the dining hall, the MacNeil lounge, and the gymnasium. The schoolhouse, above, contains administrative offices, recitation rooms, science laboratories, and a study hall with library attached.

CRANWELL PREPARATORY SCHOOL

LENOX, MASSACHUSETTS

REV. D. AUGUSTINE KEANE, S.J., A.B., A.M., Ph.D., Rector

The School's campus of more than 400 acres is situated in one of the most picturesque spots in the Berkshires. At Cranwell, boys are prepared for college in the traditional Jesuit curriculum. Classes are small and study is supervised.

A skating pond, hills for skiing, large tracts of woods with bridle paths, a golf course, tennis courts, football, baseball and soccer fields afford opportunity for year round outdoor exercise. Indoor activity is provided by a gymnasium with spacious accommodations for basketball and recreational activities. There is a modern classroom-science building, and a new residence dormitory.

Cranwell offers students many extracurricular activities which help to prepare them for a wider spiritual and social life. There are several religious organizations, debating and dramatic societies, the school newspaper and yearbook, and clubs such as Chess, Glee, and Hobby.

Cranwell conducts a summer camp for boys.

TABOR ACADEMY

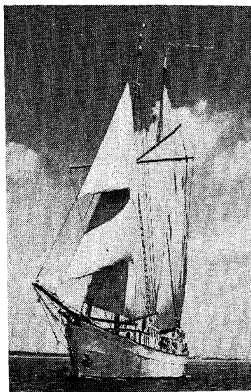

MARION, MASSACHUSETTS

JAMES W. WICKENDEN, A.B., M.A., Ed.D., Headmaster

Tabor Academy was founded on the fortunes of a whaling family in the 19th century. Like a few of the older New England academies, it served the educational needs of the local community until the appearance of tax-supported high schools. Since then, it has grown and expanded its natural resources until it occupies a unique situation nationally and internationally.

Its main objective is thorough academic training in preparation for the nation's leading colleges and universities, and the creation of an environment of culture and good taste where boys can develop and mature naturally. This objective was enhanced when the rank of Honor Naval School was given it by the Secretary of Navy in 1941. This officially brought the school closer to the national academies, but it did not interfere with curriculum and usual routine. Tabor is in no sense military.

Tabor continues to be characterized by a friendly atmosphere with a well-rounded program of athletics and cultural activities. The large recreation building has a gymnasium, theater, boatshop and store; there are playing fields and tennis courts in addition to sea-going equipment. Any boy may experience the thrill of deep water sailing and practice in piloting and navigation.

HILLSIDE SCHOOL

JOHN K. WHITTEMORE, B.A., Ed.M., Headmaster

The ideals of the founder Miss Charlotte Drinkwater, to establish a school of character building based on the correlation of training for life plus a sound education, have been maintained at Hillside. A boarding school for boys, Hillside offers academic instruction (grades III-VIII), religion, music, arts and crafts, manual training; intramural athletics and team competition; maintains camera and bicycle clubs; and provides instruction on musical instruments for all students 10 years of age and over.

The campus and school farm of over 300 acres, are located among the hills of eastern Massachusetts. During July and August, Hillside operates a summer camp, and a work program through which the boys assist in the necessary work and learn that work is essential in order to develop a sense of responsibility.

School life centers around the buildings "on the hill". Drinkwater Hall provides a reception room, dining hall and a dormitory. A new classroom building, 3 other dormitories, gymnasium, crafts and music building, plus the modern infirmary complete the group.

MONSON ACADEMY, MONSON, MASSACHUSETTS

GEORGE E. ROGERS, A.B.,
Head Master

For over 150 years Monson Academy has provided thorough preparation for college and for life, its program being adapted to the special needs of each boy. The boarding enrollment is limited to about 150 boys, almost all of whom enter institutions of higher learning.

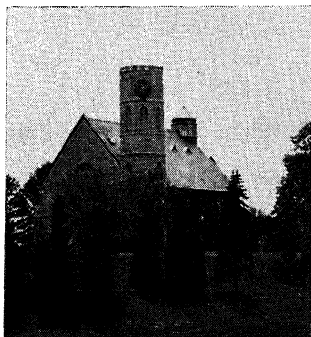

Monson features unusually small classes, personal attention, and homelike atmosphere in a typical, small New England town, 75 miles west of Boston.

The broad program of extra-curricular activities is supervised entirely by faculty members, all of whom are in residence at the School, and whose personal interest it is to prepare each boy for success in college or in business.

MOUNT HERMON SCHOOL, MOUNT HERMON, MASS.

HOWARD L. RUBENDALL, A.B.,
B.D., D.D., L.H.D., Head Master

Mount Hermon is a college preparatory school in every sense. Distinctive features are a strong academic curriculum and universal participation in a work program. That qualified boys be educated in Christian surroundings, regardless of creed, race, or financial means, has been the continuing objective of the school since D. L. Moody founded it in 1881. Among extracurricular activities are choral and instrumental music, drama, publications, and competition in football, soccer, cross-country, swimming, basketball, wrestling, hockey, skiing, baseball, lacrosse, track, tennis, and golf.

FAY SCHOOL

SOUTHBOROUGH, MASSACHUSETTS

HARRISON L. REINKE, A.B., A.M., Head Master

Fay School, the oldest elementary boarding school in the United States, has recently modernized its physical plant and added a new, fully-equipped gymnasium building with a classroom wing. This "new look" emphasizes the School's desire to continue to assume leadership in the field of elementary education.

Endowed with traditions founded in the mid-nineteenth century, Fay's experienced faculty is dedicated to the development of the whole boy to assume the mantle of responsibility which will be his as a leader of tomorrow. Both in the classroom and in sports the School's aim is to develop individual initiative, and the boys contribute to the community life and hold many responsible jobs in all aspects of school routines. Development of spiritual values is an integral part of life at Fay.

The School motto —
 "Poteris Modo Velis" — sets the tone of School life —

*You can,
 if
 You will.*

BERKSHIRE SCHOOL

SHEFFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

JOHN F. GODMAN, PH.B., LL.D., Head Master

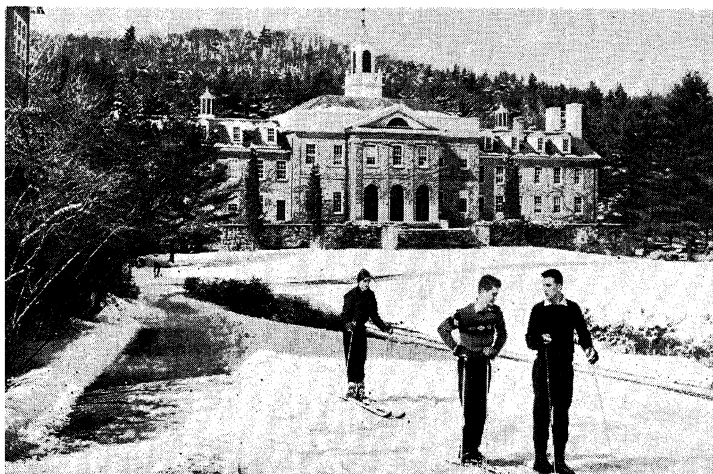

Sheffield, Mass., in the extreme southwest corner of the State, in the Berkshire Hills, is the locale of Berkshire School (4 miles west of the town on Rte. #41).

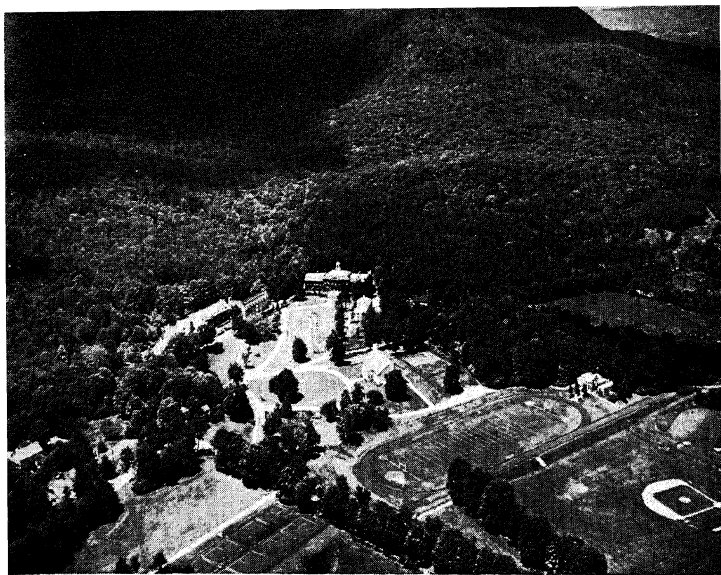

The school buildings are on the eastern slope of Mt. Everett, overlooking the valley of the Housatonic River, and include: Berkshire Hall, with classrooms, science laboratories, art and music rooms, a reference library, study hall, and auditorium; Memorial, Allen, Buck, and Senior dormitories; 22 bed infirmary, Geier Gymnasium; Bourne Field House; and houses for 9 masters.

The beautiful-500-acre grounds provide also 3 football fields, a 1/4 mile track, 3 baseball fields, 6 tennis courts, 2 soccer fields, lake for skating, and a swimming pool. Specially flooded rinks are set up for hockey. A ski tow, jump, and trails on the mountain slope are included in Berkshire's fine facilities for this favorite sport.

Organized teams in all the leading sports play neighboring schools. Junior varsity and light weight teams are maintained for the younger boys. The Berkshire Outing Club sponsors and supervises many of the less formal sports.

There are three student publications; Press, French, Spanish, Camera and Glee clubs; Choir, Band, Dramatic Society, and a work shop. Dances, parties, teas, movies, etc., round out a well-balanced social program.

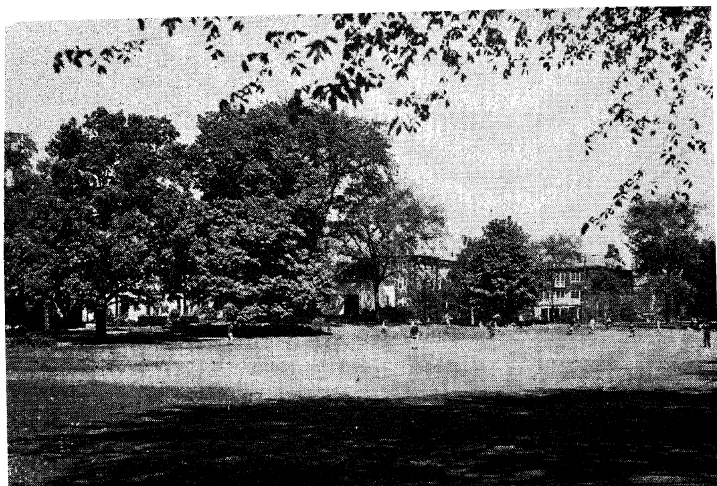

BERKSHIRE SCHOOL, since its founding in 1907, has held as its primary purpose the preparing of boys for college. Although emphasizing the intellectual phase of a student's pre-college training, Berkshire believes the objectives of a school are much broader and that graduates must be prepared for life and living. In providing for attention to individual differences of students, it relies on small classes taught by qualified teachers, frequent conferences, a testing and remedial program.

The course of study covers a period of four years—the IXth through XIIth grades—and is primarily designed to fit boys for any college or scientific school. The School is accredited by and prepares boys for all leading colleges and universities in this country. Supervised study hours and special conference periods are of first importance. Scholarships are awarded annually to boys of high scholastic promise.

Admission is based on the student's overall promise as evidenced by his principal's recommendation, his previous school record, and his scores on standardized tests of scholastic aptitude and reading—including the Secondary School Admission Tests.

THE FESSENDEN SCHOOL

WEST NEWTON, MASSACHUSETTS

HART FESSENDEN, A.B., M.A., Head Master

While providing ample grounds for outdoor play with fields, rinks, and golf course, Fessenden has the advantage of being only thirty minutes from the cultural and educational facilities of Boston. This favorable location enables the boys to make many excursions to museums, concerts, universities, newspapers, industrial plants and scenes of historic events.

Fessenden has been called an incubator of athletes, and is proud of the name. In athletics, as well as studies, the boys have the encouragement of working with others of their own experience. Numerous teams beginning with the very young; tennis and golf tournaments; skiing and coasting on the hill; hockey; basketball, tumbling, boxing, wrestling, calisthenics, and squash make up a sports program in which the manner of playing is considered as important as skill.

Extra-curricular activities, which include glee club, the press, science, and electric train clubs, and the manual training room, offer the boys the opportunity to achieve and grow in self-confidence. There is prestige attached to these activities, success is not measured only by muscles or marks.

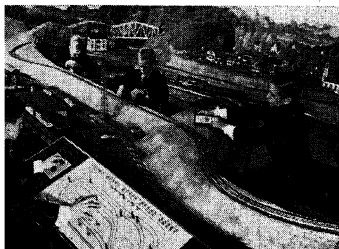

FESSENDEN has for fifty years been preparing boys for the great secondary schools of the country, giving them the training which will enable them to enter these schools with confidence and go forward with success. Its aim is to develop the boy to his highest potential, inculcating in him habits of good work, square play, and responsible citizenship; and in all phases of his education this goal is pursued through group activity.

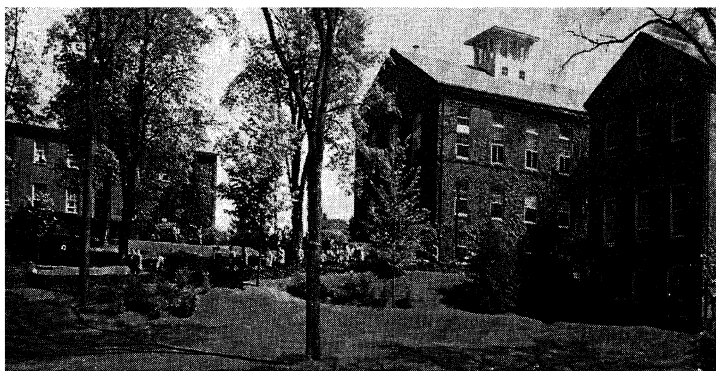

The School is large enough to allow for the grouping of the students according to age, talents, and taste, and thus to give every boy the stimulus and happiness of fair competition and companionship. A large faculty makes possible small classes and daily help periods through which masters can come to understand each student and his particular problems.

Bible, music, art, manual training, and current events are part of the regular curriculum. One member of the faculty, with long training in this important field, devotes all her time to remedial work in reading and spelling. The health routine of the School is under the direction of an eminent Boston pediatrician.

Fessenden boys have been introduced to communal living on a small scale at a very adjustable age and are spared the pains of a larger adjustment at a more difficult one. First lessons in getting on with others have been learned, in taking care of themselves in a group, and responsibility to the group. They are equipped to meet the challenges ahead, later at school and college.

WILBRAHAM ACADEMY

WILBRAHAM, MASSACHUSETTS

W. GRAY MATTERN, JR., B.A., Yale, Head Master

Wilbraham Academy, enrolling boys in grades 8 through 12, is one of the oldest of the New England preparatory schools, and as such its long traditions and firmly rooted reputation breed an air of quiet stability and a respect for established values. But it is as well a new school in its pioneering approach to its educational objectives. Its curriculum takes full advantage of modern research and discovery, while yet placing high emphasis on the importance of a thorough grounding in the tool skills. Wilbraham offers advanced placement sections in all departments to qualified students, as well as providing daily conference periods for the individual work that ensures the thoroughness of each boy's understanding.

One of the most important aspects of Wilbraham life is the emphasis placed on developing a sense of personal responsibility towards the community and an independence of judgment and action. To this end there is a broad program of extra-curricular activities; a Community Council, made up of boys and masters, that determines much of the internal policy relating to student life; and projects in which the boys participate in developing campus facilities, and raise money for scholarships.

Wilbraham's campus comprises over three hundred acres, on which are located fifteen buildings, one of which is the new gymnasium and field house, eleven playing fields, tennis courts, stocked ponds, and woodland areas on the side of Wilbraham Mountain. Springfield, with its urban advantages, is eight miles to the west.

WORCESTER ACADEMY

WORCESTER, MASSACHUSETTS

WILLIAM S. PIPER, JR., B.A., M.A., Head Master

This nationally known college preparatory school, now in its one hundred twenty-third year, is limited to 275 boys annually. The educational program is planned for thorough college preparation. In addition, Worcester trains boys to recognize the best in life and to fit themselves for the responsibilities of citizenship.

Achievement in classes, in general citizenship, and extracurricular activities are closely observed. The boy is given maximum help in the selection of a college or career by outstanding men in the guidance profession, and his subsequent progress is followed with warm interest. The faculty, composed of men of the highest quality, take friendly interest in the problems and progress of each boy.

There are available all the equipment and teaching aids, audio and visual, of proved value. Remedial reading is a definite part of the education program for those who need it. Public speaking and debating are emphasized. Science laboratories are spacious and well-equipped.

The Academy is located on a hilltop on the outskirts of Worcester, thus providing access to the right cultural life of the city. Its facilities, exceptionally well equipped to meet all educational needs, include dormitories, laboratories, recreational rooms, gymnasium and swimming pool, the Warner Memorial Theatre, and Gaskill Field — a 10-acre athletic field with track, tennis courts and playing fields.

PORTSMOUTH PRIORY SCHOOL, PORTSMOUTH, R. I.

VERY REV. DOM AELRED GRAHAM, O.S.B., S.T.L., Prior of Community

REV. DOM AELRED WALL, O.S.B., A.B., Head Master

CECIL J. ACHESON, M.A., Associate Head Master

Portsmouth Priory School, founded in 1926 by the late Dom J. Hugh Diman, O.S.B., is attached to Portsmouth Priory, an independent monastery of the English Benedictine Congregation.

The School trains Catholic boys thoroughly in their religion and provides a general education equal to that of the best non-Catholic schools. The courses lay the foundations of a genuinely liberal education, as the best preparation for entrance to and success in college. A broad program in music is included.

Under the "House Plan", younger boys have separate accommodations; the Upper School has four Houses. Boys take care of their own rooms, wait on table, and do work in buildings and on the grounds. The School Farm produces some of the provisions. Summer School.

On the Island of Rhode Island, 22 miles south of Providence, the School and farm occupy 400 acres, offering every facility for Football, Soccer, Baseball, Basketball, Skating, Tennis, Squash, Sailing.

ST. GEORGE'S SCHOOL, NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND

REV. WILLIAM A. BUELL, M.A., Head Master

St. George's is small enough to study effectively the needs of each student, large enough to provide the competition necessary for the development of self-confidence and maturity.

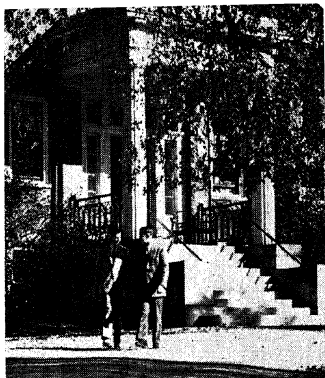

Classes are small; the ratio of highly qualified teachers to boys is high. Emphasis is placed on teaching boys techniques of study and on varying their approach as the different types of material demand. To the individual of high accomplishment, maturity and interest in any field, special opportunity is offered to progress as fast as his abilities allow. Each boy has an adviser whose special duty it is to keep in contact with his problems and to help him solve them.

All boys participate in a graded athletic program. Good sportsmanship as well as hard play is emphasized. The self-help program, in which all boys take part, develops a spirit of cooperation and responsibility.

The Summer Session provides an atmosphere of serious study in ideal surroundings. Special courses in language training and remedial reading are given. A fine beach is nearby.

The School is on a hill overlooking the ocean, three miles from Newport and thirty miles from Providence. Reductions in tuition are made when character, attainment and need warrant.

Moses Brown is a boarding and country day school, dedicated to Quaker ideas of education and life. Founded "For the Honor of Truth," the School seeks to develop rigorous, creative thinking, high purpose, and a deep sense of reverence.

MOSES BROWN SCHOOL

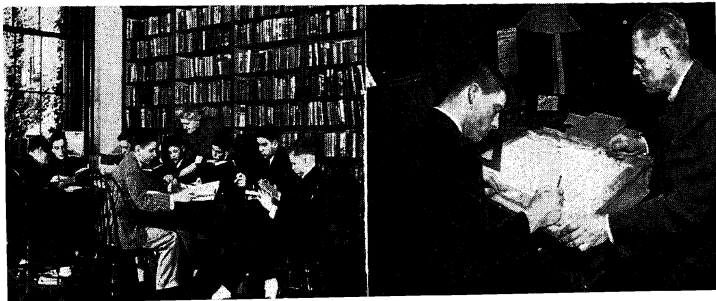

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

ROBERT N. CUNNINGHAM, A.B., B.LITT., M.A., Acting Headmaster

Established in 1784, Moses Brown has been maintained in Providence since 1819 by the New England Yearly Meeting of Friends. In its teaching and daily life, the School emphasizes the importance of creating and maintaining friendly human relations among groups and among individuals.

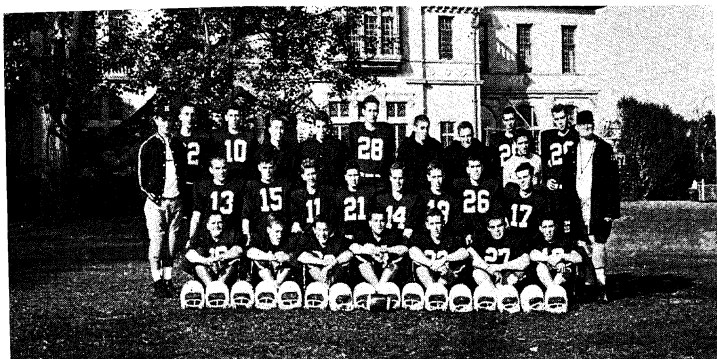

It is a primary aim in all teaching at Moses Brown to give boys the sense that they are dealing with reality, that they are not just "taking subjects," but coming to understand life. Teachers seek to stir in their students the spirit of discovery and a lasting curiosity.

Boys work in small classes and get much individual help in learning how to study. The School's program is centered on preparation for college. The individual boy's schedule is flexible so that he may be working at different levels in different subjects according to his ability and the adequacy of his preparation.

HATCHI PREPARATORY SCHOOL

VARSITY SPORTS: Football, Soccer, Basketball, Hockey, Swimming, Indoor Track, Baseball, Golf, Tennis, Outdoor Track.

HATCH PREPARATORY SCHOOL

NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND

LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Head Master

The school was founded in 1926 by the present head master and has long been recognized by educators as a leader in the small-school field. The majority of applicants are sponsored by heads of larger schools who recognize that close instruction is needed for those boys who wish to save time while holding fast to sound standards and for those who are ambitious to transform mediocre scholastic results into attainment of college entrance quality.

Small classes and strict enrollment limits enable the individual student, the able student and the student with problems to solve, to overcome the inertia of mass education—each student sets his own pace and his progress is geared to his personal abilities and ambition. This flexible approach leads to more rapid development of innate capacities and to greater ultimate attainment.

In the interest of candidates who need special opportunities for a time, it is important to dispel the somewhat widespread but fallacious supposition that because a school is small it is, ipso facto, a "special" school. Hatch Prep is not a special school, is not a "cram" school or a "finishing" school or a vocational school. It is a regularly organized and accredited college preparatory school admitting boarding students only and with a daily program that is quite as nicely balanced as the program in our best larger schools. However, special scholastic facilities are available which the larger school does not presume to offer. Classes are limited to four students and private courses are scheduled as needed. The goal—the regularized upper-class schedule expected by college admissions officers.

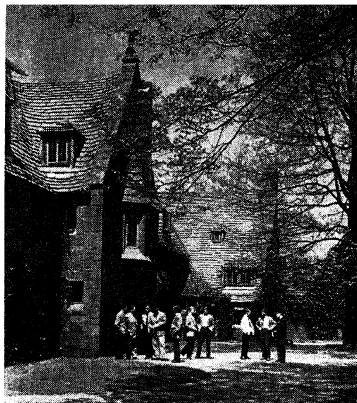

HATCH PREP MIDDLE SCHOOL, Newport, R. I.
 LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Headmaster

HATCH PREP JUNIOR SCHOOL, Newport, R. I.
 LLOYD HARVEY HATCH, Headmaster

This boys' preparatory school through carefully chosen faculty counselors seeks to understand and fulfill the individual needs of its pupils.

AVON OLD FARMS

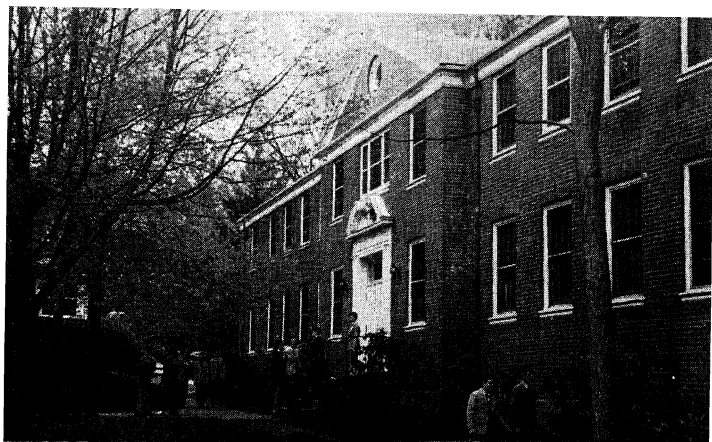

AVON, CONNECTICUT

DONALD W. PIERPONT, Provost

The academic program is designed to meet the requirements of the nation's leading colleges and universities. Along with its regular academic program Avon offers outstanding remedial reading instruction. A boy may elect music or art as a major study. Community service and student government are distinctive features.

The buildings, outstanding both architecturally and in point of equipment, are situated on a 1200 acre estate which includes forest, meadow, and athletic fields. Its favorable location provides unusual opportunity for forestry, fishing and hunting recreations which can be enjoyed through life. There are complete programs in interscholastic sports, including football, soccer, track, tennis, swimming and intramural basketball.

THE CHESHIRE ACADEMY

CHESHIRE, CONNECTICUT

ARTHUR N. SHERIFF, M.A., Head Master

Primarily preparing for college, and sending its graduates to many leading institutions, the Cheshire aim is to develop body, mind, and character by helping each boy to use his abilities, discover his resources, and reach the maximum discipline within his capacity. Enrollment is held to an average of over 300 boarding students, with varying numbers of day students. This ideal group admits a thorough individual training for each boy through close attention of the head master and members of the faculty, and allows the organization and development of scholastic interests and group activities essential to a healthful and stimulating school life.

The Cheshire Academy consists of two departments: the Junior, for boys from 10 to 15 years of age; and the Senior, for boys of 16 and over. Students of the intermediate ages, 15 and 16, may be assigned to either of the two departments in accordance with their scholastic needs or the maturity of their social development.

Each boy's schedule is planned especially for him, and with the personal guidance and encouragement of the masters, he is enabled to progress at his own rate of speed.

CHESHIRE ACADEMY is located in beautiful rolling hill country, one of the most healthful spots in Connecticut. The climate is fresh and invigorating.

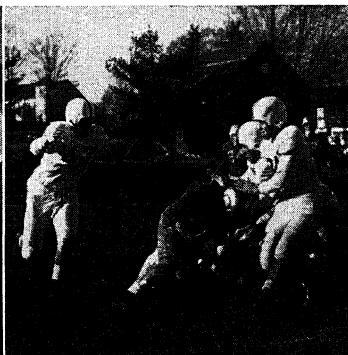

The school grounds occupy nearly 100 acres, giving ample space for campus, athletic fields, tennis courts, and woodlands.

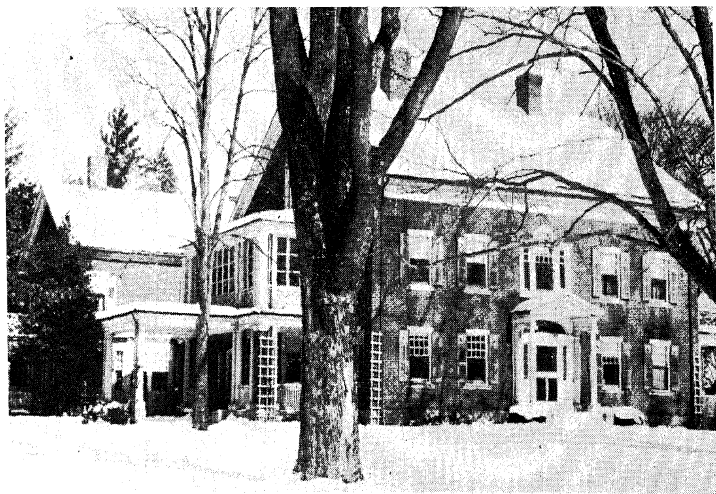

The campus life is friendly, simple, and relaxed. The daily schedule includes time for outdoor sports, special interest activities, and chats with the masters or fellow students. Sports, intramural and regularly scheduled team games, include: football, soccer, basketball, baseball, hockey, wrestling, golf, tennis, fencing, and track. The surrounding country affords opportunity for hiking, cross-country running, and horseback riding.

A summer session with very small groups and individual programs makes possible rapid, thorough progress in accelerated college preparatory courses or make-up work.

The Academy is non-sectarian in character and makes no religious discrimination. Presence at a Sunday morning meeting under the auspices of a school chaplain is required.

MARVELWOOD PREPARATORY SCHOOL

CORNWALL, CONNECTICUT

IAN M. HANNA, B.A.,
ROBERT A. BODKIN, B.A., M.A., } Co-Directors

Newly organized, Marvelwood Preparatory School is located in Connecticut's thoroughly delightful country-side, at Cornwall, 45 miles from Hartford, only 100 miles from New York City. Here, on a private estate, Marvelwood has adequate facilities for 35 boys (boarding) and offers a sound college preparatory program in line with the traditions of the finest established schools, covering grades VIII through XII.

Varsity teams compete with nearby schools in traditional sports and special emphasis is placed upon the outdoor program which is designed in such a way that each student may have a lifelong interest in some one of the activities made possible by the unique location of Marvelwood. The program covers a broad field, including skiing on Mohawk Mountain at the school's back door, hiking on the Appalachian Trail which runs through the campus, cycling on the byroads, fishing in private streams, study of farm operation, and woodsmanship. While undenominational, the School is Christian in philosophy and practice.

The school property, of seventy-five acres, is located in suburban Hartford. It combines a desirable country atmosphere with easy access to the metropolitan area of Hartford.

THE WATKINSON SCHOOL

LAWRENCE J. NEWHALL, B.A., M.Sc.Ed., Headmaster

Established in 1859, Watkinson is a non-profit boarding and day school for boys. Originally founded to provide a free education to a limited few, it has since expanded its curriculum and plant, until today the School is able to offer sound college preparation to approximately 100 students.

Devoted to the spiritual, intellectual and social education of its boys, the School provides thorough academic instruction; seeks to establish habits of sound industry, and to develop the perception, judgment and expression of each boy.

In keeping with the wishes of its founder — David Watkinson of Hartford — the School is non-sectarian. Religious instruction is a basic part of the curriculum. Attendance at chapel services (which are those of the Episcopal Church) is required of all boarding students. Catholic and Jewish boys may attend classes of their own faiths by making arrangements with the Headmaster.

Supervised intramural athletics and hobby activities are integral parts of the school program.

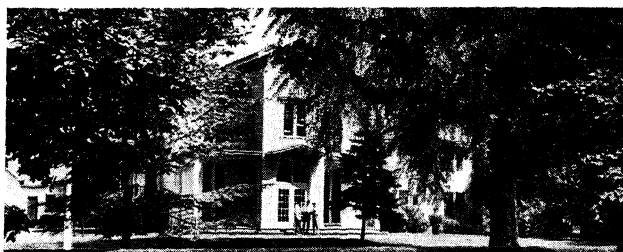

FAIRFIELD COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL, FAIRFIELD, CONN.

WILLIAM BREWSTER ELY, III, A.B., Headmaster

An elementary country day school for boys, Fairfield occupies an attractive campus on eleven landscaped acres atop Greenfield Hill.

Classes are kept small, making it possible to continue the emphasis on close supervision to develop the individual capabilities of each student. Enrollment now stands at around 150 boys in classes from kindergarten through Grade 9.

Founded in 1935 by the late Laurence W. Gregory — a devoted and distinguished educator — Fairfield Country Day School is now in its 21st year. A beautiful Auditorium-Gymnasium and a new library have been completed, and plans are underway for additional classrooms and a new dining room.

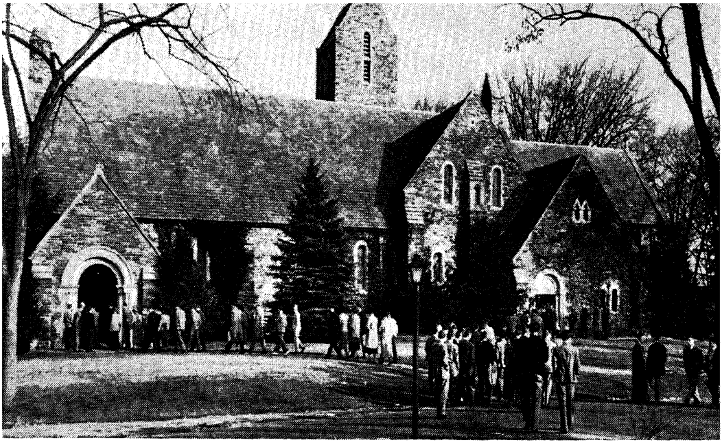

THE MILFORD SCHOOL, MILFORD, CONNECTICUT

WILLIAM D. PEARSON, A.B., M.A., Head Master

Milford's program, executed by a distinguished faculty, provides thorough preparation for college with reasonable time-saving features. Attention to individual requirements in very small classes is featured. A balanced education engages interest, enlarges ability, and prepares for effective living.

The well equipped buildings occupy an attractive estate in an old town. A modern gymnasium, tennis courts, 20 acres of athletic fields, and location near Long Island Sound provide for all sports. Junior School admits boys who have completed seventh grade work.

KENT SCHOOL

KENT, CONNECTICUT

THE REV. JOHN O. PATTERSON, D.D., Head Master

THE KENT WAY—Kent School was founded in 1906 by the Rev. Frederick H. Sill, a member of the Order of the Holy Cross. From its founding it has been a school in which simplicity of life, self-reliance and directness of purpose have been encouraged.

DIRECTNESS OF PURPOSE—Kent is a church school. We believe that the primary purpose of Christian education is to teach men the nature of their environment so that they can relate it to themselves intelligently, courageously and effectively, and thus bring to their lives significance, harmony, and stature.

SELF-RELIANCE—Kent's is a community life. We believe that education comes not only through instruction but also through membership in a society. Under the Kent idea boys are given a large measure of self government. The School Council is in a real sense the guardian of the morale and traditions of the School.

SIMPLICITY OF LIFE—This is fundamental to the Kent idea and is reflected in all of the school program. Almost all of the regular daily work of the community is shared by the boys. The program of extra curricular activities is extensive and includes such sports as football, soccer, hockey, basketball, skiing, wrestling, crew, baseball and tennis; plus a variety of clubs—Glee Club, Chapel Choir, French, Spanish, Chess, Photography, Science, Press, Radio, Art—as well as the groups organized for public speaking and dramatics, and the boards of the school paper, magazine and yearbook.

INDIAN MOUNTAIN SCHOOL

LAKEVILLE, CONNECTICUT

WILLIAM M. DOOLITTLE, A.B., Head Master

Indian Mountain School was founded in 1922 as a boarding school for young boys. It has now expanded to include in its enrollment boy and girl day scholars from the neighboring villages.

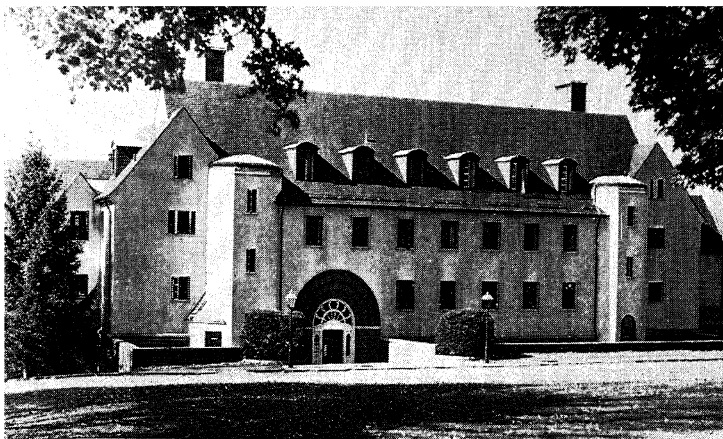

Our aim is not only to prepare for the secondary school requirements but, what is more important, to give our students the foundation to maintain good positions in the secondary schools to which they go. We ask all students to express themselves, but we also impress on them the value of doing a good day's work every day on the tasks they meet.

A full program of athletics is provided, with squads made up of boys the same size and age. Teams, coached by the masters, compete with other schools in football, soccer, ice hockey, skiing, baseball and tennis. Full advantage is taken of our country location for picnics, hikes, nature work, swimming, fishing and informal play in the woods.

The activities program includes glee club, operetta, school magazine, stamp club, crafts, carpentry, mechanical drawing, photography, and dramatics.

CANTERBURY SCHOOL

WALTER F. SHEEHAN, A.B., A.M., L.H.D., Headmaster

MOST REV. HENRY O'BRIEN, D.D., ARCHBISHOP OF HARTFORD, Patron

Canterbury School, founded in 1915, is a college preparatory boarding school for Catholic boys, with a Trustee board of prominent Catholic laymen: Henry O. Havemeyer, Francis Carmody, Fortune Peter Ryan, Gerard Smith, John S. Burke, and Mrs. May Hume. It maintains high standards of discipline and scholarship, and gives a sound training in the doctrines and practices of the Catholic religion.

The Head Master and all the teachers are laymen. The chapel and religious services are under the direction of a diocesan priest appointed by the Bishop. The boys, from 13 to 18 years old, are representative of the best in American youth. Enrollment is limited to 160 boys.

The school grounds, 135 acres at an elevation of 500 feet, are beautifully and healthfully situated, and provide space for football, baseball, hockey, track, tennis, and golf. There are three dormitories, a Gothic chapel, a gymnasium complete with swimming pool, a new infirmary, and classroom and laboratory building.

SALISBURY, CONNECTICUT

THE REV. GEORGE D. LANGDON, B.A., Head Master

Since 1901 this college preparatory school has endeavored to combine the highest academic standards with sound spiritual and physical training. The School is affiliated with the Protestant Episcopal Church, although enrollment is not restricted to Episcopalians.

A carefully selected faculty of 18 enables Salisbury to implement its fundamental purpose, that of helping the student to realize his potentialities in all phases of his development—intellectual, social and personal. To the achievement of this end all School activities are organized: small classes; daily conference periods available for individual instruction; a varied athletic program including crew, football, soccer, basketball, hockey, baseball, tennis and skiing; an enriched extra-curricular program with particular emphasis on art, music, dramatics and journalism; an active student government; and opportunity for service through the Chapel or the St. Austin Society.

In Pomfret, a town rich in New England tradition, The Rectory School stretches out over 200 acres of fields and woodlands, with farm, gardens and orchards. The campus includes athletic fields, pond, outdoor fireplaces, and eight buildings which provide for classrooms, library, chapel, dormitories, dining hall, infirmary, gymnasium, and residence for teachers and Head Master.

THE RECTORY SCHOOL

POMFRET, CONNECTICUT

JOHN BRITTAIN BIGELOW, A.B., Head Master

Founded in 1920 by Rev. and Mrs. F. H. Bigelow, The Rectory is an elementary boarding school for boys, and covers Grades IV through IX. While presenting all fundamental subjects, the curriculum remains flexible to allow its being "tailored" to fit the needs of the individual student. The School's remedial program is under the supervision of Mr. Page Sharp of Hartford.

The regular course is augmented with work in arts and crafts, closely correlated with particular subjects. Extracurricular activities are offered through sports in season — football and soccer in the fall; hockey, basketball and skiing in winter; baseball and tennis with some riding, riflery and golf in spring — plus dramatics, school newspaper, work projects and social events.

Affiliated with the Episcopal Church, the Rectory School holds a brief service in the school chapel every day; boys may attend services of churches in town on Sunday.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL

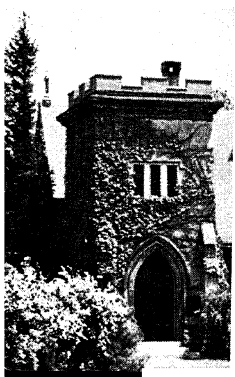

SIMSBURY, CONNECTICUT

FRANCIS KEYES, S.B., Head Master

In its second half-century of preparing boys for success in college and later life, Westminster achieves unity of morale and breadth of experience by keeping its size at a point which enables every boy to know every other boy and every master.

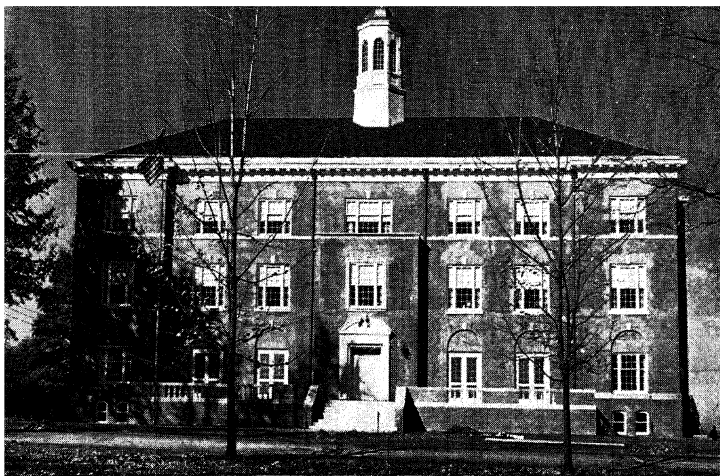

To 170 resident boys, Westminster offers a five-year college preparatory program. One master for every nine students makes individual attention possible at all times, especially in the classroom where the ability of each boy to work and think for himself is considered of equal importance with the subject matter.

Boys are trained to find satisfaction in hard work and in a simple friendly, Christian way of life, and are given increasing responsibility and freedom as they show themselves ready for them. Good taste is stimulated in art and music, and boys are encouraged to develop their talents.

The well rounded plant includes separate dormitory buildings, chapel, gymnasium, swimming pool, squash courts. Important features are the quiet country location, easy access to Hartford, and every facility for outdoor sports.

SUFFIELD ACADEMY

SUFFIELD, CONNECTICUT

APPLETON SEAVERNS, M.A., Head Master

Founded in 1833, and one of the country's oldest boarding schools for boys, Suffield Academy offers a 4-year college preparatory program. The School is attractively situated "on the green" of the small residential and farming village of Suffield. The campus of more than 100 acres contains twelve school buildings, eight athletic fields, tennis courts and a hockey rink.

Through a well-integrated academic program, Suffield stresses self-discipline, industry, and good health and study habits. A cooperative and friendly atmosphere prevails.

The Academy has an enrollment of about 180 boys in order to maintain small classes, making possible much personal attention. Individual expression is developed by special courses including art, music, and public speaking. The entire curriculum is supplemented with audio-visual aids. There is a full program of athletics and extra-class activities.

Qualities impossible to measure—spirit, enthusiasm, and high moral tone—are most significant in the life at Suffield. These intangibles cannot be conveyed by the printed word,—only by observation and by meeting the people associated with Suffield can some insight into what is being accomplished here, be gained.

MARIANAPOLIS PREPARATORY SCHOOL

THOMPSON, CONNECTICUT

REV. JOHN C. PETRAUSKAS, M.I.C., Headmaster

Founded and maintained by the Marian Fathers, Marianapolis Preparatory School holds as its purpose: to guide, direct and form its students in accordance with the principles of Catholic education. A preparatory school, it stresses classical and scientific curricula, encourages laudable ambitions and instills habits of logical thought, correct methods of study, self-discipline, and refinement.

The School is situated on a beautiful country estate in Thompson, which is near Putnam, Connecticut.

Marianapolis offers High School 1 through 4, to boys ranging in age from 13 to 18 years. Although primarily boarding, some day students are accepted at the School.

THE CHOATE SCHOOL

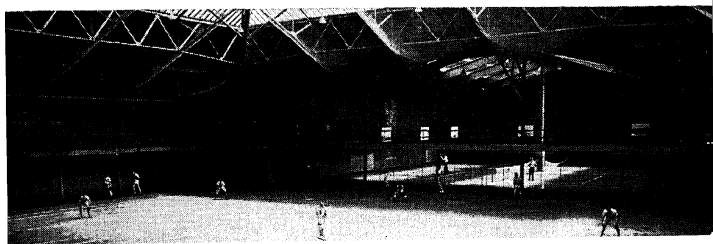

WALLINGFORD, CONNECTICUT

THE REV. SEYMOUR ST. JOHN, B.A., M.A., L.H.D., Head Master

Choate, one of the foremost New England schools for boys, draws students from all parts of the country and from many foreign lands, providing a thoroughly representative community. The School is large enough to support an unusually wide range of activities, yet so organized that the faculty is able to know each boy well. Choate offers a challenging opportunity for association with men and boys of purpose without loss of valuable personal influences.

From the first, Choate has sought to help each boy develop his abilities through a unique, flexible curriculum which shapes a student's schedule to his individual needs. The courses are divided into medium, fast, and Honors sections, so each student may progress at a speed commensurate with his aptitude and understanding.

While high scholarship comes first, the School seeks, through the student government, to train every boy in the processes and responsibilities of democratic life; through the Honor Code, to help him recognize the importance of personal integrity; through the Work Program, to show the thought and labor behind well-ordered living; and through daily Chapel services, to implant high motives and ideals.

THE GUNNERY

WASHINGTON, LITCHFIELD COUNTY, CONNECTICUT

OGDEN MILLER, Head Master

The Gunnery, established in 1850, derives its name from its founder, Frederick William Gunn. Six Headmasters in its 108 years of educating boys of high school age have brought educational leadership and stability to the School's administration.

The School is by intent a medium size boarding school of 160. Its purpose is to provide sound all-around educational training — not only as a preparation for college but as an experience which stands in its own right.

The faculty of twenty-two permits small classes averaging eleven boys. The careful selection of boys for enrollment provides for their sound development in all scholastic, social, spiritual, and physical pursuits. The School, although undenominational, stresses the importance of Christian principles and traditions through daily and Sunday devotional services at which attendance is required.

A comprehensive program of athletics and non-athletic activities is offered. All boys are given an opportunity to explore and develop interests and abilities in art, music, woodworking, speaking and debating along with physical sports.

The Gunnery sends its graduates annually to America's leading colleges and universities. The tuition and Residence Fee is $2300. The Secondary School Admissions Test is required of all candidates.

TAFT SCHOOL

WATERTOWN, CONNECTICUT

PAUL CRUIKSHANK, A.B., D.Sc.E., Head Master

The Taft School, established in 1890, is the realization of the late Horace Dutton Taft's purpose: to found a school in which boys would receive the physical, mental, moral and spiritual training necessary to produce responsible leaders and disciplined, constructive citizens. Underlying the whole program at Taft is a tradition of service to the nation; the lives of Mr. Taft, his brother, President William Howard Taft and their family serve as inspiring examples.

Along with spiritual growth and development of character, intellectual growth and high scholastic standards are considered of primary importance. A demanding curriculum in both the humanities and the sciences prepares the student for the better colleges and technical schools and develops his ability to learn and to form independent judgments.

The Honor System and Job System are the especial responsibility of the student-government organization. Competition in the intra-mural athletics and dramatics is organized on a club basis so that all boys can compete with others of like ability and make a personal contribution in these areas.

LOOMIS SCHOOL

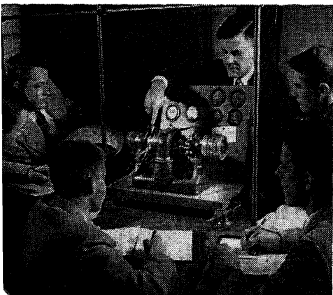

WINDSOR, CONNECTICUT

FRANCIS O. GRUBBS, A.B., Headmaster

83 years ago, five members of the Loomis family, bereft of heirs, dedicated their fortune to found a school. Today, at Windsor, Conn., the 290 acres that have become campus, playing fields, and dairy farm, comprise Loomis School.

The common interests of students and teachers create a spirit of unity. Maintaining small classes, the School instills in its students such fundamentals as thinking with accuracy and originality, concentrating on work at hand, and developing a capacity for dealing justly with one's associates.

Each boy's choice of studies is made with consideration for his abilities, his educational needs, and the entrance requirements of his probable college, with provision for special interests.

Regular teams are maintained in the basic sports. Many extra-curricular activities, — including the school newspaper, yearbook, magazine, Glee Club, orchestra, and theatre — stimulate the students' non-academic interests and provide practical experience.

RUMSEY HALL SCHOOL, WASHINGTON, CONN.

JOHN F. SCHERESCHEWSKY, A.B., Director

For more than 50 years Rumsey Hall has successfully prepared boys, 6-14, for leading secondary schools. The ratio of faculty to students, approximately one master to each six or seven boys, provides the maximum of individual consideration and interest which results in a preparation more adequate than is usually provided.

The requirements for graduation equal or exceed those for entrance to any of the better known preparatory schools. The School's basic policy has been to insure, first, the health and happiness of its boys, and second, to teach them as well as they can be taught.

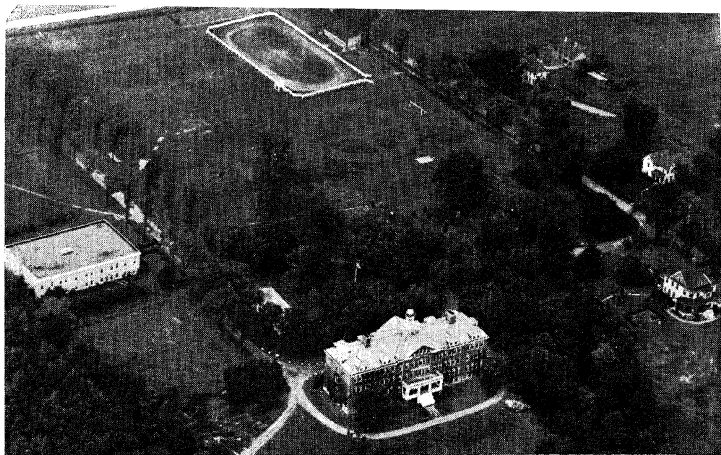

Situated in the heart of the Berkshires, Washington provides many opportunities for skiing, coasting, fishing, picnics, bicycling, etc. In addition, there are riflery and the regular interscholastic team sports in which Rumsey Hall has always enjoyed a high reputation for competitive and sportsmanlike spirit. The School has an exceptional health record.

THE STORM KING SCHOOL CORNWALL-ON-HUDSON, NEW YORK

WARREN P. LEONARD, B.S., Headmaster

Small classes and an informal friendly atmosphere characterize this 90-year-old school. Located in the Highlands of the Hudson at an altitude of 900 feet, it offers college preparatory courses for boys in grades VIII through XII. Development of individual and community responsibility is stressed through dormitory government plan, school council of faculty members and students, participation in daily household jobs, and a counselor-counselee system. A belief that boys can live up to their individual potentialities in an environment of faith, trust and high expectations is implicit in this school.

LAKEMONT ACADEMY

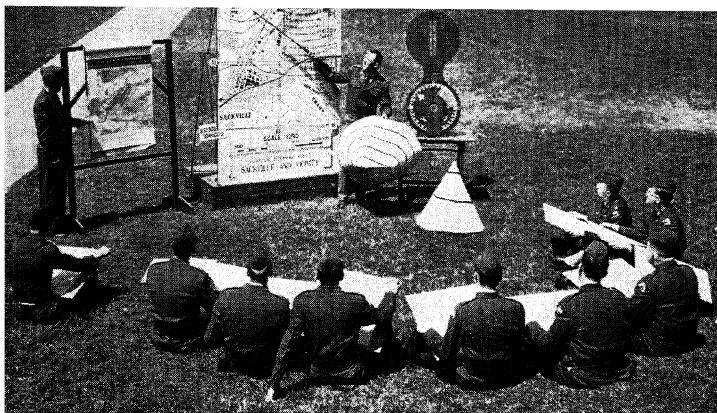

LAKEMONT-ON-SENECA, NEW YORK

NORMAN COLVIN, President and Director
 AUBY C. STRICKLAND, BRIG. GEN. USAF (RET.), Head Master

Founded in 1842 as Starkey Seminary, this preparatory school has long been known for its thorough college preparation and development of Christian character, qualities of leadership and good health. Enrolled are boys from many states and countries. Approximately 20 per cent of the students receive some scholarship aid. Lakemont conducts a complete testing program with classes in reading development and good speech.

The 170 acre campus, comprising athletic fields, hills and wooded areas, overlooks 20 miles of beautiful Seneca Lake. In addition to the usual school sports, swimming, and sailing are offered. The Academy conducts a 7 weeks summer school and a camp.

MANLIUS SCHOOL

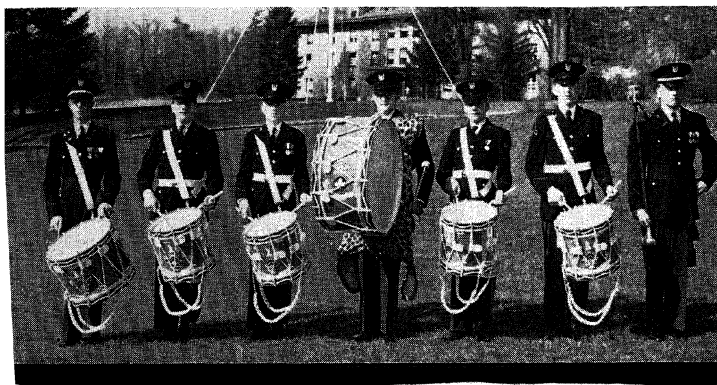

MANLIUS, NEW YORK

RAY W. BARKER, MAJ. GEN., U.S.A. (RET.), Superintendent

JOHN W. MACDONALD, A.B., M.A., Head Master

The Manlius School has national prominence for college preparation. Fully accredited, its certificate is accepted by all colleges admitting without examination. Scientific testing, ability grouping, and specialized remedial instruction contribute to a thorough college preparation.

The School is located eleven miles southeast of Syracuse in the rolling hill-country of the Finger Lakes Region. It is easily accessible to cross-state Highways 5 and 20 and the New York State Thruway.

NORTHWOOD SCHOOL

LAKE PLACID, NEW YORK

JOHN G. HOWARD, B.A., Head Master

Northwood School, a closely-knit community of 110 boys, has two basic objectives. The first is that each boy be thoroughly grounded in the fundamentals of verbal and scientific skills. Secondly, each boy must have an understanding of the fact that the worthwhile and good things of life are acquired only in proportion to the effort expended to achieve them. At Northwood, a boy's effort in his every activity — academic, athletic, extra-curricular — is the major criterion by which he is judged, not only by the faculty but by his fellow students.

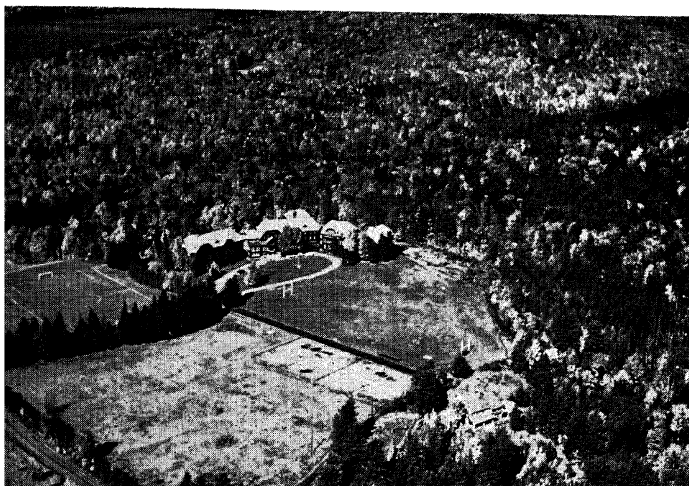

Classes at Northwood are purposefully kept small, permitting exacting supervision. The primary academic objectives of the faculty are to provide close personal counseling for each boy, and to instill a sense of mental discipline in him.

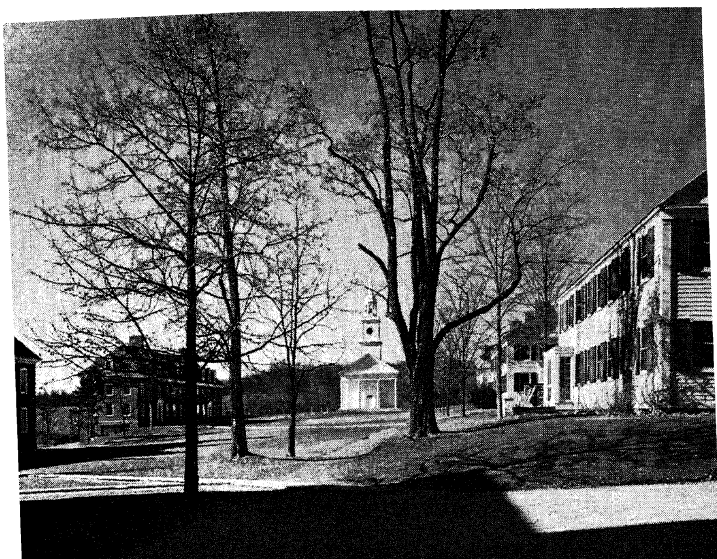

The School is ideally located on fifty acres of property in the heart of the Adirondacks at an altitude of almost 2000 feet. The dry, bracing air promotes good health and the rural setting affords freedom from the distractions of town and city life. The four modern buildings are joined by enclosed corridors. The excellent snow conditions, plus the fact that the School has full use of the Mt. Whitney ski tow and slope, and the Intervales 40 and 70-meter jumps, make Northwood noted for its exceptionally fine skiing facilities.

NORTHWOOD offers an all-around athletic program with varsity teams having regular interscholastic schedules. The School has access to the facilities of the Lake Placid Club whose property is adjacent to the school grounds, as well as to the Olympic Arena for hockey, and nearby slopes for skiing. Golf, tennis, canoeing, hiking, squash, swimming, riding, camping, hunting, fishing, flying; are a part of the sports program.

A variety of talents and interests find outlets in the extracurricular activities. These include the school paper, the school annual, dramatic club, glee club, debating teams, etc. For several of these activities, the facilities of the Lake Placid Club supplement the school's equipment. The automotive mechanics, woodworking, and outing club programs are popular leisure-hour activities.

MILLBROOK SCHOOL

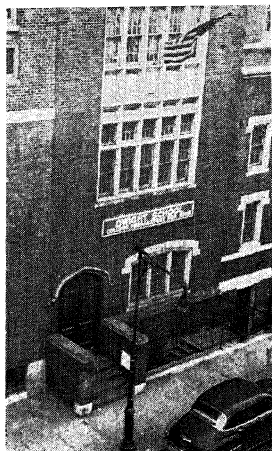

MILLBROOK, NEW YORK

EDWARD PULLING, A.B., M.A., LITT.D., Head Master

Millbrook School's modern plant provides excellent facilities for both academic and varied extra-curricular activities. Its special features are the lovely New England Chapel, the large library, a new gymnasium, and two well equipped science laboratories. The boys have built and operate a zoo, a greenhouse, and an astronomy observatory.

The curriculum stresses scholarly preparation for college in basic subjects, but also challenges a boy's special abilities by a wide choice of elective courses. The Community Service Plan, directed by the Student Council, confronts every boy with the challenge of sharing responsibility for the effective functioning of the School Community. An important by-product of this plan is the interest it stimulates in many worthwhile hobbies, such as photography, astronomy, conservation, ornithology, and meteorology.

Dwight graduates are now attending such colleges as: Annapolis, Illinois, Duke, M.I.T., R.P.I., Princeton, Purdue, West Point, Cornell, Harvard, Syracuse, and Wisconsin.

DWIGHT DAY SCHOOL FOR BOYS

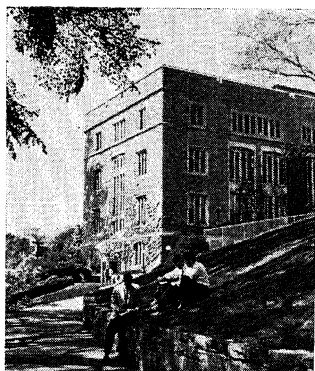

402 EAST 67th STREET
NEW YORK, NEW YORK

WINTON L. MILLER, JR., Head Master

Strategically situated in the heart of Manhattan, Dwight — a day school for boys — offers 7th Grade through High School. Included in the academic program are remedial reading, mathematics, and a testing program. The School offers all the extra-curricular interests, such as gym, inter-scholastic athletics, etc.

Dwight is fully accredited, and is a member of the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges. Providing thorough, individualized instruction in small classes, Dwight's entire program is planned for the preparation of its students for all colleges, regents, college boards, West Point, Annapolis, engineering courses, air force and maritime examinations.

HORACE MANN SCHOOL, NEW YORK 71, N. Y.

MITCHELL GRATWICK, M.D.,
Principal

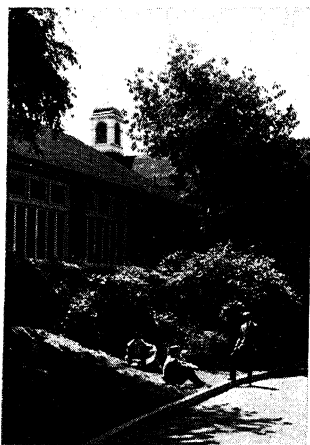

Horace Mann, a pioneer country day school in the Fieldston-Riverdale area, has a fine record preparing boys for many leading colleges and technical schools. The School emphasizes scholarship, citizenship, the creative arts, physical education, and ethical values.

Horace Mann's facilities are excellent. It has a library of 15,000 volumes, and also a 15-acre campus with fine equipment for physical education. A new lower-school classroom building, with additional space for art, music, and shop work was opened in September 1956.

RIVERDALE COUNTRY SCHOOL

253RD ST. and FIELDSTON RD., NEW YORK 71, N. Y.

JOHN HAYDN JONES, M.A., Head Master

In a residence area near New York City, Riverdale Country School, including the Boys School (boarding and day), Girls School, Neighborhood School, and School of Music, prepares for college, leading its students through an integrated education from Kindergarten to college age. Metropolitan opportunities in Music, Art, Drama, and United Nations are used. Summer session is held for seven weeks. Camp Riverdale, in the Adirondacks, is endorsed by the School.

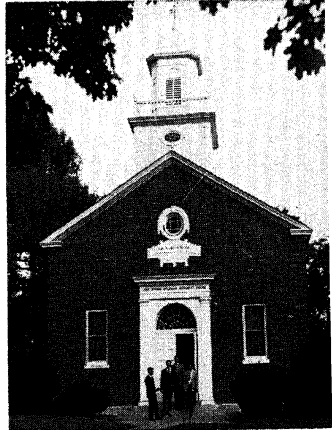

For catalog, address the Director of Admissions.

STONY BROOK SCHOOL

STONY BROOK, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK

FRANK E. GAEBLEIN, LITT.D., D.D., Head Master

Among the boarding schools for boys, Stony Brook is known for its distinctive work in Christian education. Undenominational in organization, though Presbyterian in tradition, it welcomes students of various churches and aims to develop not only mind and body, but also Christian faith and character. The School holds as its motto: "Character before Career." Stony Brook was established in 1922.

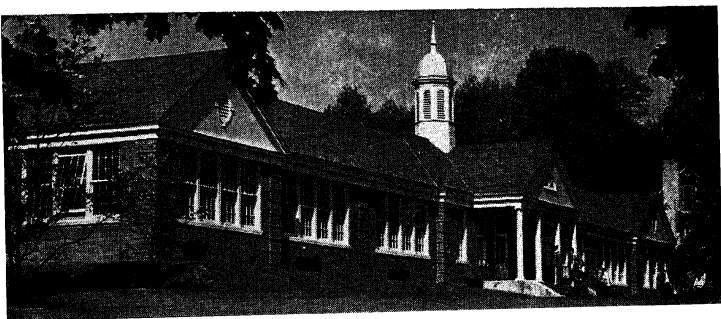

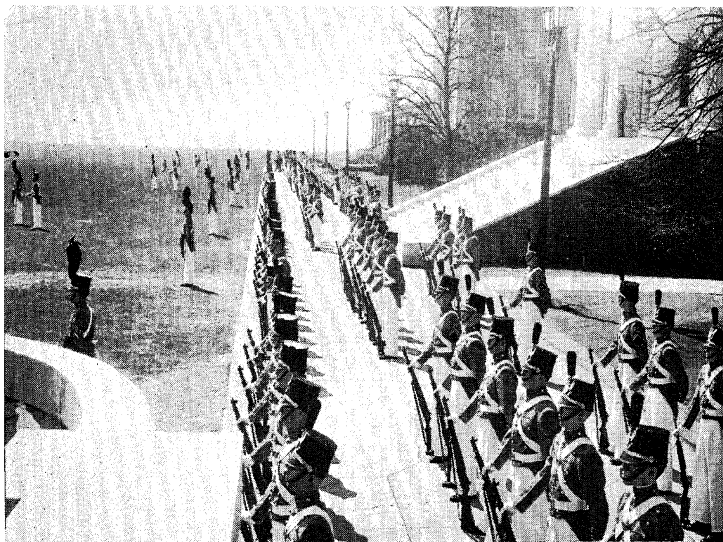

The School covers five years, eighth grade through high school. Emphasis is on thorough college preparation. Classes are comparatively small; the work is fully accredited.

The seventy-acre campus, with its ten buildings, is on the north shore of Long Island, less than two hours from New York.

Currently 190 boys are enrolled from 12 states and 18 foreign countries. Graduates last year entered 33 colleges.

Memorial Hall, new classroom and library building, completed 1950.

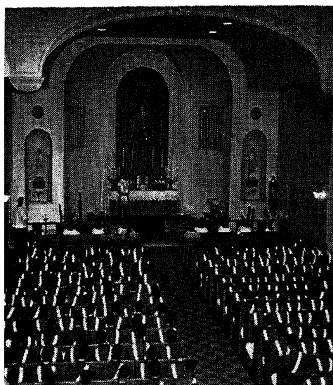

LA SALLE MILITARY ACADEMY

OAKDALE, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK

BROTHER ANTHONY JOSEPH, F.S.C., M.A., M.Ed., Head Master

La Salle Military Academy is a Catholic Prep School conducted by the Christian Brothers. It is essentially a boarding school and is designated as an Honor Military School by the United States Army. The aim of the Academy is to promote the maximum spiritual, intellectual, social and physical development of its cadets in a thoroughly Christian atmosphere. Almost all of its graduates go on to institutions of higher learning, and the enviable record of its Alumni during its 74 year history at Clason Point and Oakdale indicates the success of its program. The school is accredited by the New York State Board of Regents and the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Cadets are accepted for grades 9 through 12.

The Military Department is under the direction of officers assigned by the United States Army. As a Military Institute with a senior R.O.T.C. honor rating, La Salle's program is rather intensive. Military discipline and courtesy are an integral part of Academy life. This program and the manly Christian atmosphere that prevails aid the cadets to develop character and leadership ability.

The record of LSMA graduates in a long list of colleges and in the professional life of their cities proves the wisdom of the La Salle Military educational policy which emphasizes sound and thorough religious and moral training, intellectual development, and military training for additional advantages of health and character training.

The La Salle Campus and facilities are outstanding. This 160-acre Campus, off the Great South Bay, includes an Administration Building, Chapel, residence and school buildings, a splendid gymnasium and a spacious and attractive Mess Hall. Play fields for the various activities abound. A well-trained and dedicated faculty, small classes, supervised study, and excellent library and laboratory facilities make for a sound academic program. While varsity teams represent the Academy in the various sports, emphasis is placed on a well-organized intramural program for all cadets.

DE VEAUX SCHOOL

NIAGARA FALLS, NEW YORK

Founded 1853.
Day and Boarding
Grades 7 - 12

SETTING:

DeVeaux School's beautiful campus is located on the edge of the northern limits of the city of Niagara Falls, amid scenic beauty and historic interest.

Its 50 acre, elm-covered campus borders on the famous Whirlpool Park along the Niagara Gorge. Three miles to the south are the great Falls themselves.

Over its historic grounds once rumbled the supplies which fed the famous ports of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys.

Today, broad athletic fields, tennis courts and spacious lawns, visible in the air view opposite, surround the quadrangle.

NEW GYMNASIUM:

A new gymnasium, including swimming pool, was completed for Sept. 1957.

NIAGARA

HISTORY:

DeVeaux School was founded and endowed by Judge Samuel DeVeaux in 1853, under the Protestant Episcopal Church.

For over 100 years DeVeaux's doors have been open to outstanding boys of all faiths.

DeVeaux accepts boys on the basis of strong character and evidence of ability to handle college preparatory work.

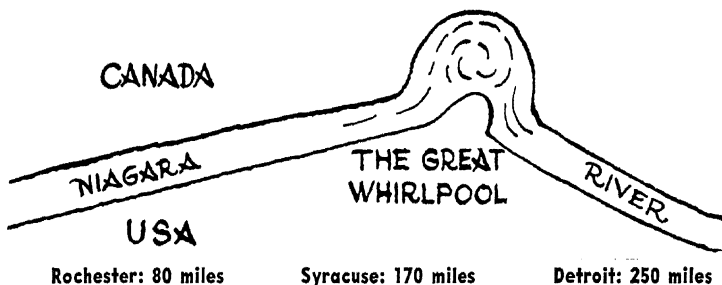

AIMS:

As DeVeaux enters its second one hundred years of service in preparing youth for college and life, it is appropriate to state our educational objective and the philosophy which underlies it.

We believe that America and the principles on which its constitution were laid down are based on character, courage, and vision inspired by God.

We believe that this land of ours has attained its stature because of great and free men who had these qualities—men who had trained minds, disciplined bodies, and humility.

We, therefore, seek to train youth in the fundamentals of mind, body and spirit, which will place upon them the stamp of integrity so sorely needed in future leadership of family, affairs, and state.

COLLEGE PREPARATORY:

As DeVeaux's academic curriculum is stringent, students are admitted only on evidence of sound academic ability.

PEEKSKILL MILITARY ACADEMY

PEEKSKILL-ON-THE-HUDSON, NEW YORK

HOWARD MOORE, A.M., Head Master

Peekskill Military Academy, with a campus of about 50 acres only 45 miles from New York City, was founded in 1833. It borders on a state park, with superb trails for hiking.

As an independent school, Peekskill Military Academy is free to choose its own special educational goals; to recruit such a faculty and student body as will facilitate their attainment; and to adopt such regulations and customs as will encourage in the daily life of the students the maximum of physical health, mental growth and social development.

As a boys' boarding school it provides the best possible preparation for college with 95 percent of its graduates going on to college and doing well there. Masters are always ready to give extra help outside the classroom, when needed or desired.

Peekskill Military Academy

Extra-curricular activities include dramatics, publications, radio club, camera club, projection club, Glee Club and Band, formal and informal dances. Athletic training is required of all in intramural and varsity sports. The Trustees and Faculty believe that all this is part of a true educational program, since by education we mean the normal all-around growth in which a boy is seeking to develop all his abilities. Through many years of distinguished tradition, it has become international in representation and democratic in life and spirit.

NYACK BOYS SCHOOL, UPPER NYACK, NEW YORK

VICTOR W. HAGGAR, B.S., M.A., Head Master

This school for boys, grades I through VIII, is 19 miles from New York, overlooking the Hudson. The three attractive dormitories provide a friendly atmosphere conducive to natural living. The School is chartered by the Board of Regents of the State Education Department. Nyack graduates enter the leading college preparatory schools. Classes average seven boys; each boy is given individual attention and training in correct habits of study. Health is closely guarded with diet, sports, and exercise, carefully supervised. Nyack also has a summer camp and school.

CROYDON HALL ACADEMY

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, NEW JERSEY

This small school for boys offers work from Grade III to XII. About 40 miles from New York on the Jersey shore, the site is well adapted to wholesome outdoor living with its private bathing beach and rugged woodland background. Courses and instruction are based on individual needs, arousing interest in the fundamentals, and on correction of reading deficiencies. Parents are kept in close touch with their son's progress.

Debating, hobby clubs and organized sports are adapted to the needs of the individual. The informal homelike atmosphere provides a daily life of continuous interest and enjoyment. Social functions in which the boys participate are arranged.

HACKLEY SCHOOL

TARRYTOWN, NEW YORK

FRANK R. MILLER, Head Master

Hackley, occupying 83 acres of beautiful wooded hills, and located 25 miles from New York City, offers day and boarding facilities for boys from fifth grade through high school.

Founded in 1899 as a college preparatory boarding school, its charter stipulates that the School be operated as a non-sectarian institution.

Flanked by thousands of acres of woodland, Hackley combines a country freshness with easy accessibility to the cultural advantages of New York City. The School continues to emphasize the importance of a truly liberal education in this age of specialization. There is a seven-week summer high school, and a summer day camp for boys, ages 6-13. Hackley offers a Remedial and Developmental Reading Program.

BORDENTOWN MILITARY INSTITUTE

BORDENTOWN, NEW JERSEY

HAROLD MORRISON SMITH, M.A., L.H.D., LL.D., Litt.D., Headmaster

These are the objectives of the Bordentown Military Institute: to maintain a first-rate College Preparatory School, (its graduates are in one hundred leading colleges) to continue the long standing Honor Rating of its R.O.T.C. by the United States Army, and above all to give each of its boys every inducement and influence that will develop the character and leadership potential of these men of tomorrow.

B.M.I.'s seventy-five years of experience have demonstrated the truth that in the formation of a boy's attitudes and habits — the building of his character — a boy is helped most if he has constant encouragement and opportunity to practice acts which require cooperation, responsibility, and integrity. The educational program and the military organization, as combined at B.M.I., provide this encouragement and opportunity.

A Junior School, separately organized, meets the needs of the adolescent boy.

Boys Schools—693

Situated in the Far Hills-Bernardsville area, in a neighborhood of fine country homes and farm estates, the School is within one hour's drive of Lincoln Tunnel to New York City and conveniently near Princeton and Philadelphia. Enrollment is limited to 50 boys; teaching is highly individualized and selective. The School emphasizes high standards of conduct, academic excellence and intellectual honesty which are reflected in new confidence and achievement among its students.

THE WARREN SCHOOL

CHESTER, NEW JERSEY

PHILIP LINCOLN GARLAND, A.M., Head Master

The Warren School is designed for boys who need the close and personal attention which is possible only in a small-group situation where the ratio of boys to masters is four to one. It is for boys who must save time or make up for time lost or wasted. After a frank discussion with the boy and his parents, and a careful analysis of previous school work, a program is outlined to fit his particular needs, including remedial work and those subjects necessary for a well-rounded college preparation. Eight hours of personal instruction and supervised study constitute the daily academic program. For the few boys whose plans do not include college, secondary school subjects of a practical nature are available.

Boys are graded daily on their progress; no boy is permitted to fall behind in his work or to develop a feeling of failure or frustration. Special privileges are accorded on the basis of each day's work. Boys proceed at their own individual pace without the embarrassment of usual classroom comparisons. Admission is possible any time during the year whenever a vacancy occurs.

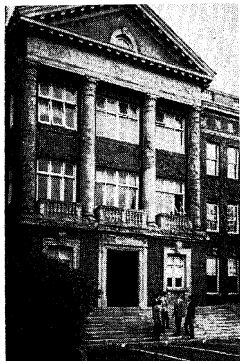

The majority of Warren boys are referred to the school by headmasters and teachers of larger preparatory schools who recognize the need of more intensive and individualized instruction. Warren graduates enter college by certification of the school. Each year a proportion of the student body prepares for College Entrance Board Examinations.

Boys Schools—695

Peddie is a college preparatory school whose graduates attend the leading colleges in the country, including the Service Academies. Preparation for advanced college standing is available for outstanding students.

Scholarship aid is available to worthy boys needing assistance.

Special professional scholarships are awarded to sons of clergymen, educators, and officers of the armed services.

THE PEDDIE SCHOOL

HIGHTSTOWN, NEW JERSEY

CARROL O. MORONG, B.D., T.H.D., Head Master

At Peddie, the spirit of industry, the zest for varied extracurricular activities, the democratic atmosphere of friendliness all help to produce high academic work, healthy personality growth and development of Christian character. Peddie, affiliated with the Baptist denomination, is independent and non-sectarian. Christian teaching is supervised by the resident school pastor, and there are daily chapel services.

The 280-acre campus offers unusual facilities for golf, track, football, soccer, baseball, tennis, squash, wrestling, basketball, swimming. 24 modern buildings include a new gymnasium, a new chapel, and a new library.

The Junior School (grades 7 and 8), in a separate dormitory, is supervised by the Director, three masters, and a housemother.

Summer Session for both Upper School (9 weeks) and Junior School (6 weeks) offers opportunities to review subjects or take advanced courses where the student is qualified to accelerate. A full 8-weeks course in Remedial Reading is available.

ST. BERNARD'S SCHOOL

GLADSTONE, NEW JERSEY

DONALD R. WILLIAMS, A.B., Head Master

St. Bernard's School was founded in 1900. Situated in the Somerset Hills, one mile from the picturesque village of Gladstone and 40 miles from New York City, the school property consists of 300 acres of beautiful farm land at an elevation of 700 feet. The school has a six-year course of study, preparing boys thoroughly for college.

An Episcopal Church School, St. Bernard's emphasizes the primary importance of religion in the life of its boys. With a faculty of thirteen the School can offer individual attention to the needs of each boy. There are in the neighborhood of 90 boys enrolled, sixty percent of whom are boarding students. The School is fully accredited.

The school plant consists of a chapel, two dormitories (an assembly hall and the dining and kitchen unit included in one of the buildings), a classroom building, a library, a gymnasium and an infirmary, together with athletic fields, tennis courts, a riding ring and the school farm and farm buildings.

Each boy is required to do a certain amount of manual work on the grounds or buildings. Field trips to various industries and cultural centers are made periodically during the year. Music is part of the regular curriculum, and lessons in piano, organ and voice are available. Courses in art and shop are offered. Every boy participates in some form of athletics or outdoor activity. The School offers football, soccer, basketball, baseball and tennis.

Extracurricular activities include dramatic, science, and photography clubs, choir, chapel committee, school paper and year book.

CARTERET SCHOOL

WEST ORANGE,
NEW JERSEY

A College Preparatory School for Boys

GEORGE DOUGLAS HOFÉ
B.S., M.A., President

ROBERT W. PORSCHE,
A.B., M.Ed., Headmaster

By emphasizing the teaching of the fundamental subjects, and making extensive use of the cultural advantages of the New York metropolitan area, Carteret School aims to provide its students with a deep understanding of, and an ability to use, the basic skills essential to their further education and to the making of wise decisions, the efficient use of their time, and the proper handling of new situations. For over 50 years, Carteret's graduates have compiled enviable records at well-known colleges.

At Carteret School, class periods are 60 minutes in length instead of the customary 40 minutes, the additional time being devoted to the development of proper techniques of study. Reading Centers are maintained to increase the reading speed and comprehension of students. Some of the Senior class courses follow the methods of instruction employed in the college freshman curriculum, thus easing the transition from preparatory school to college. The well organized Physical Training Department requires body building exercises for all.

Boys ranging from 8-18 years of age are invited to our Boarding Department. The spacious lounge, large game room, quiet reading alcove, and bright dining room together with terraces and groves overlooking the New York skyline, all make this a delightful home.

THE LAWRENCEVILLE SCHOOL

LAWRENCEVILLE, NEW JERSEY

ALLAN V. HEELY, M.A., LITT.D., LL.D., L.H.D., Head Master

In the main stream of American democratic education throughout its long and vivid history, Lawrenceville has since 1810 drawn boys from all parts of this country and abroad, and from a diversity of social and economic backgrounds.

The School accommodates five hundred forty-five boarding pupils in buildings supervised by resident masters. The House System encourages individual aptitudes through its small groups of boys. The life is friendly and informal, the relations between boys and masters close. The House is the centre of social life and of various intramural activities.

For the youngest boys the Lower House provides a special regime. Seniors, separately housed, are expected to exhibit the self-reliance necessary for successful College achievement.

The round-table method of instruction, extending to the classroom the principle of small-group education on which the House System is based, encourages free discussion and individual initiative in an informal setting.

Lawrenceville is non-sectarian. A number of scholarships are available. Parents and boys should if possible visit the School.

MORRISTOWN SCHOOL

MORRISTOWN, NEW JERSEY

THOMPSON D. GRANT, A.B., M.A., Colby, Head Master

A small college preparatory school for boys, with an abiding faith in the fundamental soundness of the individual. Set among wooded hills and surrounded by ample playgrounds, the attractive Colonial buildings suggest that atmosphere of friendliness which characterizes the School.

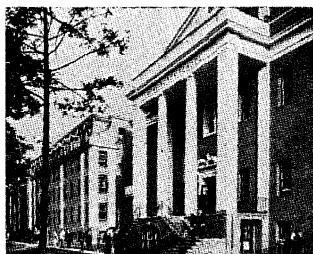

Since most of the boys enter leading colleges, the scholastic standing is high. The school program is as informal and flexible as possible, and a limited enrollment enables the Head Master to keep in close personal touch with the problems of each member of the school community.

The School believes that boys should be encouraged to assume responsibility wherever possible. The Student Council therefore plays an important part in the maintenance of discipline and in the smooth functioning of school life.

The physical education program is varied, and opportunities for recreation and physical development are numerous. Varsity teams are made up of boys who have risen through intramural competitions. Every boy in the School is expected to take part in the inter-club contests which run throughout the year. The program includes: football, baseball, basketball, hockey, tennis, track, boxing, and swimming.

There are regular opportunities for extra-curricular activity in the Glee Club, Band, Debating Club, Language Clubs, International Relations, school newspaper and yearbook.

THE PENNINGTON SCHOOL, PENNINGTON, N. J.

IRA S. PIMM, M.A., D.D.,
Head Master

The Pennington School, now in its 120th year, has a large endowment which makes possible exceptional advantages at minimum cost. With classes averaging 12 boys each, with sport activities directed toward individual development and with the friendly counsel of a university-trained faculty, the school offers all-round benefits of direct bearing upon success in college and later life.

Located near Princeton, and steeped in century-old traditions, Pennington inspires educational effort at its best. Scholarships and opportunities for self-help are available.

A visit to Pennington is urged upon prospective patrons and boys as the best means of gaining insight into the school's program and facilities. Catalog on request.

DELBARTON SCHOOL, MORRISTOWN, NEW JERSEY

Delbarton School is a country day and boarding school for boys. Conducted by Benedictine monks, it offers college preparatory courses exclusively from the seventh grade through fourth year high. The Catholic religion is the integrating principle of all studies and activities which have for their objective the formation of cultured Christian gentlemen.

Delbarton accepts only a limited number of registrations thus insuring the small classes that guarantee individualized attention for each student. Audio-visual aids play a prominent part in classroom techniques and a smoothly functioning guidance department helps solve personal scholastic and vocational problems.

Students receive a sound foundation in the fundamentals of education with a curriculum designed to conform to the admission requirements of the leading colleges and universities.

A well balanced athletic program affords all students opportunity for competition in the major sports and is designed to keep them in good physical condition and to develop in them the best qualities of sportsmanship.

THE OXFORD ACADEMY

PLEASANTVILLE, N. J.

EDWARD R. KNIGHT, PH.D., Head Master

Oxford is known as "The Educational Troubleshooters" in the field of education. It is not in competition with, but complements the work of, the better schools. It is indicated for boys who cannot keep up with class instruction, who have weak educational backgrounds, who have reading difficulties, and who cannot study and concentrate effectively.

Oxford's psychometric tests—intelligence, emotional, educational, achievement, and aptitude—discover the causes of previous failures and enable the Head Master to devise the method of education and guidance indicated for each boy. Almost all of the Oxford students are referred for admission by Head Masters, Principals, Guidance Counselors, School Psychologists, etc.

Each student is in a class by himself and progresses in each course of study at his own tempo of learning. Enrollment is limited to about thirty boys. Twenty-five are admitted for college preparation and attain their goal regardless of previous difficulties or failures. About five students are accepted to receive a sound education in preparation for business. A student is enrolled at any time of year when a vacancy occurs.

The founder of Oxford, Joseph M. Weidberg, discoverer of the Oxford Method of Individualized Education, was succeeded in 1947, as the Head Master, by Dr. Edward R. Knight, who had served under him as teacher, psychologist, and Assistant Head Master.

THE HAVERFORD SCHOOL, HAVERFORD, PENNA.

LESLIE R. SEVERINGHAUS, M.A., L.H.D., Head Master

The Haverford School, a college preparatory day school for boys, sends most of its graduates to leading colleges and universities, where they have had marked success. The School also gives a thorough, intensive general training, and the best in physical education. Classroom instruction is in small groups from the pre-school class through 12th grade. A coeducational summer session is open to pupils from other schools. New Science building, new Middle School, new Elementary School building now under construction.

THE PHELPS SCHOOL, MALVERN, PA.

NORMAN T. PHELPS, A.B., M.S., Headmaster

A preparatory school for boys, Phelps provides opportunities for continuous intellectual, physical, spiritual and social growth. The educational program is individualized; enrollment is therefore limited to 80 boys. The school property of 144 acres is located just 22 miles west of Philadelphia. The activity program supplements the academic program to insure all around development for each boy.

THE MERCERSBURG ACADEMY

MERCERSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

CHARLES S. TIPPETTS, PH.D., LITT.D., SC.D., Head Master

Beautifully located in the historic Cumberland Valley, only 7 miles from the Mason-Dixon Line, Mercersburg, founded in 1836, offers a boy an opportunity to prepare for college in a setting of great natural charm. The Academy buildings face West toward the first range of the Alleghenies, 3 miles distant.

The Campus of nearly 300 acres is dominated by the Academy Chapel, designed by Ralph Adams Cram, and visible for miles around. In its spire hang the great bells of Mercersburg, 43 in number, one of the famous carillons of America.

Nearly 13,000 boys from every state in the country and from 50 foreign nations have studied here during the past 50 years; 23 Olympic champions and many Rhodes' scholars are among its graduates. Its athletic teams are famous, but scholastic standards come first.

Because the doors of all administrative offices stand open, Mercersburg is known as "The School of Open Doors".

The atmosphere is democratic. Snobbishness is not tolerated. Regardless of family, wealth or influence, boys must stand on their own feet, judged by what they are and what they do. Mercersburg exists for the boy. His interests come first. He should be happy but he must learn to work. This is not a school for boys who are disciplinary problems. Classes are small. Close personal supervision of each boy's work is assured. Debating, public speaking, student publications, music and dramatics are the chief non-athletic activities. Every boy is required to take part in the athletic or physical training program. Developmental Reading is emphasized. A summer session is offered.

Perkiomen School for Boys is located in the town of Pennsburg, in the beautiful Perkiomen Valley, near Valley Forge, in historical Pennsylvania. The rural setting is conducive to good health and study yet is easily reached by bus, train, or air from the large eastern cities.

PERKIOMEN SCHOOL

PENNSBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

STEPHEN W. ROBERTS, A.B., B.S., M.A., LL.D., Head Master

A small school, steeped in tradition, there are distinct units for both the upper and lower schools allowing a simple homelike atmosphere in this family type school.

Perkiomen boys are taught how to study and have an excellent record in the leading colleges. Small classes, taught by experienced, sympathetic masters, insure individual attention and maximum progress. A summer school with accelerated program and special courses is maintained. A balanced extra-curricular program meets boys' cultural and hobby interests.

Boys Schools—705

Sports have a recognized and proportionate place in the life of the School. Participation, carefully suited to interest and need, in some athletic activity is required of each boy. Normal schedules of inter-scholastic competition with other preparatory schools of the area are maintained.

Perkiomen has the only Carnegie Library at a preparatory school. Adjacent to the campus is the New Schwenkfelder Museum and Historical Library. Through the efforts of the Schwenkfelders and others, Perkiomen is one of the strong preparatory schools in the East.

Students on Rear Porch of the New Schwenkfelder Library

THE HILL SCHOOL

POTTSTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA

EDWARD T. HALL, B.A., M.A.,
Headmaster

The Hill offers personal attention of the smaller school with the superior facilities, strong faculty and varied student body of a large residential college preparatory school. It is owned by the alumni and operated not for profit through a board of 21 trustees. The flexible curriculum is designed to develop a student along intellectual and creative lines. The academic program, which includes advanced courses in the humanities, mathematics, sciences and classics, is adaptable to the individual needs and aptitudes of each student. Scholarships are awarded on the basis of merit and need to a representative group of deserving boys from all parts of the country.

KISKIMINETAS SPRINGS SCHOOL, SALTSBURG, PA.

JOHN A. PIDGEON, Headmaster

Kiskiminetas Springs School, known throughout the country simply as Kiski, is the only independent secondary school exclusively for boarding students in the Pittsburgh area. Kiski was founded in 1888 and in 1941 was re-incorporated as a non-profit institution. It is a small school, as schools go, but among the 200 boarding students in grades 9 through 12, there are boys from 20 states and 8 foreign countries. The faculty consists of 21 full-time teachers. Strenuous academic endeavor is the order of each day. Recent graduates have entered Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Amherst, Wesleyan, Williams, Dartmouth, Swarthmore, Lehigh, Carnegie Tech, Stanford, Michigan and many other colleges and universities. Kiski's 260 acre campus in view of the Western ranges of the Allegheny Mountains provides complete facilities for virtually all recreational activities.

VALLEY FORGE MILITARY ACADEMY

WAYNE, PENNSYLVANIA

Valley Forge, hallowed shrine of American Freedom, has loaned its cherished name to this fully accredited, distinguished military academy and junior college.

In the historic Radnor foothills, the Academy keeps faith with their forefathers by training young men for responsible citizenship. Its classrooms educate them for entrance into all leading colleges. Senior ROTC prepares them for a commission in the armed services. The athletic program keeps bodies well, teaches fair play, and sportsmanship.

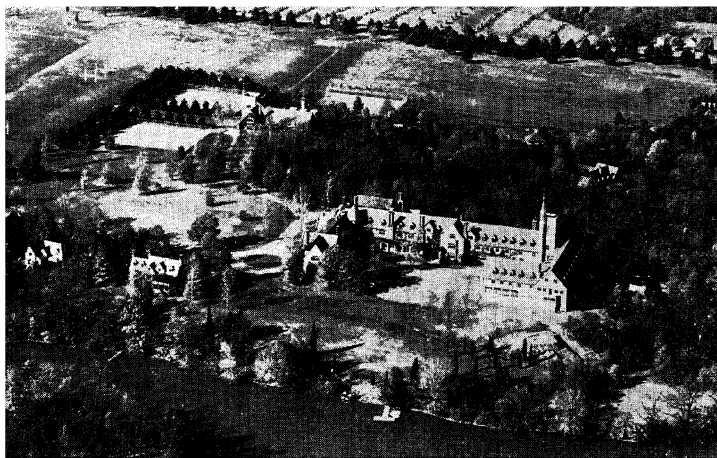

A beautiful campus, with 52 colonial brick and stone buildings, houses Infantry, Artillery, Cavalry and renowned Cadet band. On its 200 rolling acres young Americans prove the Academy's right to say: "From the embattled fields of Valley Forge went men who built America; from the training fields of Valley Forge go men who will preserve America."

ST. JAMES SCHOOL, ST. JAMES, MARYLAND

THE REV. JOHN E. OWENS, B.S., S.T.B., Head Master

St. James School is in the Cumberland Valley, 6 miles from Hagerstown and 70 from Washington and Baltimore. In the 116 years of its existence, St. James has directed its energies towards maintaining high scholastic standards, excellence in athletics, and development of sound Christian character. New Lower School Building and equipment. Individual attention is stressed. Tuition and board, $1700.

ST. ANDREW'S SCHOOL

MIDDLETOWN, DELAWARE

WILLIAM H. CAMERON, B.A., M.A., Headmaster

Holding "Faith and Learning" as its motto, St. Andrew's provides an environment in which the Christian idea can flourish and give meaning and direction to living and learning. As a boarding school, St. Andrew's affords opportunity for each boy to mature as a social being while retaining aspirations and interests of his own.

While emphasis is necessarily directed to masters of basic subjects, the curriculum is designed to stimulate and broaden. A five-year college preparatory course is offered. Classes average about ten boys, assuring that individual attention and special help are given those who experience temporary academic difficulties.

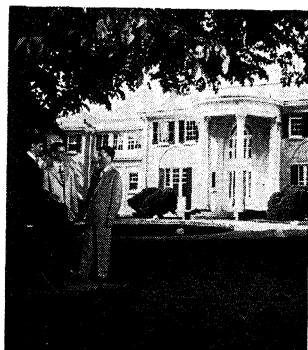

St Andrew's property comprises 350 acres, 2 miles from the center of Middletown, 25 miles south of Wilmington and about 60 miles from Philadelphia. Besides the main building (accommodating 152 boys), there are a gymnasium, 5 football fields, 2 soccer fields, 2 baseball diamonds, 9 tennis courts, piers for fishing and boating on Noxon-town Pond, and a farm which is operated by the School.

Such organizations as school publications, clubs (Drama, Debate, Conservation, Stamp, Rifle, Camera, Press, and Yacht), school band, choir, and glee club, afford recreational and creative outlets. The library, housing over 7000 volumes, plays an important part in the intellectual and recreational activities of the School.

LONGFELLOW SCHOOL FOR BOYS

BETHESDA, MARYLAND

REESE LONGFELLOW SEWELL, B.S., Head Master

Longfellow has developed steadily as a country day school for boys since moving to its present location in 1941. Situated in the northwest residential area of the national capital, it gains the advantage of ample grounds for a full and varied play and athletic program.

Good citizenship and full development of each boy's personality is emphasized. A thorough aptitude and testing program, combined with small classes and a carefully chosen faculty, assure personal attention and thorough instruction. This aids greatly in the achievement by each boy of the objectives set for him and develops confidence.

HARGRAVE MILITARY ACADEMY, CHATHAM, VA.

COL. JOSEPH H. COSBY, B.A., M.A., President

This School is superbly located in the rolling country of Piedmont, Virginia, in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains on U.S. Highway 29. Hargrave is a Christian school giving personal attention to students and emphasizing remedial reading under expert supervision. Its faculty ranks with the best in prep school circles.

The spacious and beautiful 180-acre campus includes ample athletic fields, drill grounds, tennis courts and an outdoor swimming pool. There are facilities and opportunities for all sports.

STAUNTON MILITARY ACADEMY, STAUNTON, VIRGINIA

COL. HARRISON S. DEY, B.S., Superintendent

COL. J. WORTH PENCE, A.B., M.A., Head Master

For more than three generations, this fully accredited Military School has been educating boys to be resourceful, self-reliant and independent, preparing them, not only for college, but for life. Dedicated to sound scholarship, its students have been unusually successful in every major university, college and Government Academy.

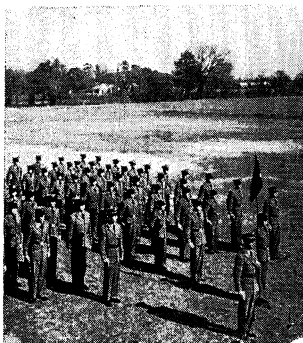

The Academy's ample facilities include four fireproof dormitories, well-equipped library and laboratories, two gymnasiums, and indoor swimming pool. Boys from more than thirty states. Individual and personal guidance. All sports. Continuous Honor School rating by Dept. of The Army. Separate Junior School. Remedial Summer Session.

CARLISLE MILITARY SCHOOL, BAMBERG, S.C.

COL. JAMES F. RISHER, B.S., Head Master

Carlisle was founded in 1892 by generous citizens of Bamberg, who were interested in the proper training of the youth of this section of the state. The community is deeply interested in Carlisle and students soon find a warm welcome in homes of culture and refinement. The School is now owned by Col. James Risher.

The entire system at Carlisle is based on the theory that a human personality is the greatest thing in the world. Three full courses are offered: the Scientific, the Commercial, and the English. The amount of work done in each course exceeds that of the average high school. The rate is $890.00 including allotment of uniforms.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY

FRONT ROYAL, VIRGINIA

COL. JOHN C. BOGGS, A.B., Principal

Located in Front Royal at the entrance of Shenandoah National Park, the Academy stands on an eminence which affords an inspiring view of the surrounding Blue Ridge Mountains. An accredited member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, Randolph-Macon offers a college preparatory curriculum with special emphasis on science and mathematics. Its carefully chosen faculty maintains personal supervision over each cadet and his program. Particular attention is given to CEEB exams.

All school routine is organized and conducted under a military program which enjoys an Army "Honor School" rating. Military instruction is complete, thorough, and efficient.

Life at the Academy is essentially religious and includes daily devotional services, church attendance, a YMCA unit organized and administered by the cadets, and Bible as part of the regular course of study.

The favorable climate, controlled diet, and physical training keep R. M. A. cadets in excellent health. The athletic program includes teams in football, basketball, baseball, track, tennis, swimming, and rifle marksmanship, with physical drill for all. Further extra-curricular activity includes the school newspaper, the yearbook, and the Academy Glee Club.

ASHEVILLE SCHOOL

ASHEVILLE SCHOOL P.O., NORTH CAROLINA

DAVID R. FALL, A.B., Head Master

A college preparatory boarding school for 150 boys, grades VII through XII, Asheville has a unity of purpose shared by all members of the community in achieving high academic standards, sound character development, and healthy living.

Instruction is offered in all subjects required for college entrance, as well as manual training and optional courses in music and religion. Classes are small, faculty well trained and highly skilled, and graduates are successfully prepared for any university in the country—the majority going to the northern and eastern colleges, where their achievements demonstrate the breadth and soundness of their preparation.

Ideally located in the healthful, invigorating climate of western North Carolina (alt. 2400 ft.), the School's property contains over 300 acres, some cleared and landscaped, the rest consisting of woodlands, fields, and a lake. The spacious campus provides for football, tennis, basketball, soccer, baseball, track and swimming. The surrounding country affords camping and hiking.

Extra-curricular activities have been planned to develop the interests and abilities of students, and to provide varied means of self-expression. There are publications, choir, dramatics, manual arts and science shops. Social life includes dances, entertainments, picnics, etc.

FORK UNION MILITARY ACADEMY

FORK UNION, VIRGINIA

JAMES C. WICKER, D.D., President

Keenly aware of the long felt need for strong and more effective methods of scholastic training, the One Subject Plan has been in effect now for several years bringing most gratifying results. It disciplines rather than furnishes the mind; trains it in the use of its own powers, rather than to fill it with the accumulation of others. The academic program is based on numerically small classes; is administered by a faculty carefully selected for professional ability, character, personality and purpose; and provides additional individual instruction when needed.

In caring for physical needs of cadets, the Academy provides excellent facilities, the Library, Science Department, Post Exchange, Gymnasiums, Chapel and Music Department being in separate buildings. The diet is scientifically planned and abundant; a regulated daily schedule; equipment and direction for all types of competitive sports.

Boys Schools—713

WARNER WOOD SCHOOL OF EFFICIENT PREPARATION

127 Chancellor Street

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VIRGINIA

R. WARNER WOOD, A.M., Head Master

This small college preparatory group has been conducted by Mr. Wood for years with signal success. The system offers a very limited number of boys an opportunity to gain greater mental and physical energy as well as a strong character background. Two years' work can be accomplished in one. The boys not only get into college, but graduate.

This work has its greatest value for boys who have fallen behind in their studies because of sickness or inefficient methods of preparation. Boys who do not thrive on the mass production basis necessary in most schools here find themselves and are made capable of doing a good job in college and in after life. They are thrown more and more on their own resources to develop self-confidence and to prepare them for life in college.

Charlottesville is the home of the University of Virginia. The pleasurable advantages of the city are available, and opportunity for training in various sports.

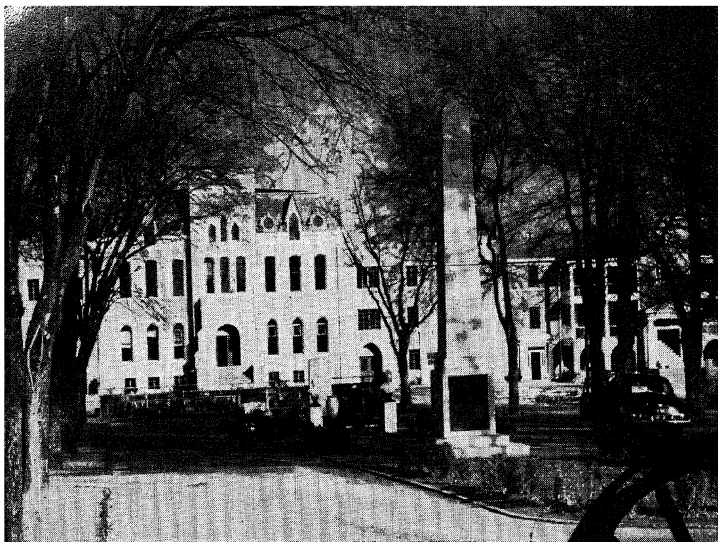

WARNER WOOD SCHOOL

In the pleasant surroundings of Mr. Wood's home, the boys are carefully guided in all phases of their intellectual growth, while given sufficient freedom to develop responsibility.

A good mind depends upon Memory, Interpretation, and Reason, with Imagination and Interest increasing its efficiency. When a pupil has these three mental powers, he has a good mind. Since success in life so often depends upon a well-trained mind, the subjects are taught to produce these three requirements in the pupil. When he has a good memory, a fine interpretation, and a powerful reason, he has the capacity for a broad and enduring education, and college is a pleasure.

The Languages with the aid of association and visualization are especially suited to develop memory; English and History, interpretation; Mathematics and the other Sciences, reason. The subjects have some value in themselves, but many will not be used directly in after-life. If the emphasis is on the subject and not on what the subject gives, it is as disastrous as emphasizing sports for themselves rather than for the health, strength, and character they give.

The tuition is $500 per month payable in advance monthly. This does not include board and laundry but does include everything else.

GEORGIA MILITARY ACADEMY

COLLEGE PARK, GEORGIA

COLONEL WILLIAM R. BREWSTER, President

Essentially a Military R.O.T.C. Secondary School, Georgia Military Academy was founded in 1900. Owned and operated by a Board of Governors, the Academy is non-sectarian, but places great emphasis on Christian living. Cadets attend their own churches on Sundays. Both the Secondary and Junior schools enroll boarders and day students, maintaining average classes of about 20 students. The academic program covers Grades I through XII.

Ninety per cent of the graduates go to college, although courses are offered which are not strictly college preparatory. The School has made a specialty of preparing boys for Georgia Tech and Emory University in Atlanta, and the Service Academies.

Team sports include football, basketball, baseball, track and cross country, swimming, soccer, tennis, wrestling, gymnastics and golf, for which the Academy maintains three gymnasiums, ten tennis courts, a stadium with $\frac{1}{4}$ mile track, and an indoor swimming pool.

The location in College Park, which is only seven miles from Atlanta, offers mild temperate climate, with an average daily temperature of 61.2 degrees. The elevation here is 1100 feet.

DARLINGTON SCHOOL

ERNEST L. WRIGHT, A.B., M.A., PED.D., President

Rome, Georgia, in the foothills of the Lookout Mountain Range is the home of Darlington—a college preparatory school for boys. The school grounds cover nearly 200 acres and include the campus proper, a lake that affords swimming facilities, several athletic fields, and a farm. About 400 boys are in attendance, three-fifths of whom are boarding students.

The School is organized on the twelve-grade basis, beginning with the sixth grade. Advancement is made by subject rather than by grade, and opportunity is given the superior student to progress toward graduation as rapidly as he can master the required courses. A Diploma and a Certificate of graduation are offered. C.E.E.B. examinations are used for juniors and seniors.

Every boy has the opportunity to compete in games and sports with and against boys of his own age and physical development. The School encourages student organizations, among which are the Band, Camera and Radio clubs, Senior Forum for discussions, the Rifle Club, and the YMCA student religious organization. The Honor System is maintained.

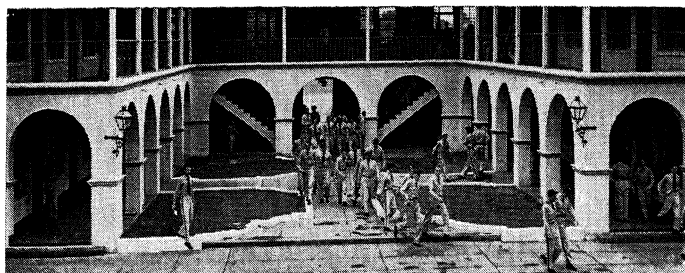

RANSOM SCHOOL

COCONUT GROVE, FLORIDA

D. PIERRE G. CAMERON, A.B.,
M.A., Head Master

High standards for college preparation are combined with climate and recreational facilities unduplicated in the East. The school includes tennis courts, swimming pool, a fleet of sailing boats, and 13 buildings for dormitories, classrooms, dining hall and offices. A carefully selected faculty combining experience, training, and youth blends supervised study and a varied sports program according to the needs of each boy.

THE BOLLES SCHOOL, JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

MAJ. DEWITT E. HOOKER, ARTY, USAR, B.S., Supt.

Ideally located in the northern part of Florida, seven miles from Jacksonville, Bolles offers military and naval training, excellent scholastic preparation for college, and full athletic program of year round outdoor sports. Small classes, capable instructors and individual attention result in high academic standards. School buses transport 130 day boys from Jacksonville to augment 200 boarders. Bolles is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

MILLERSBURG MILITARY INSTITUTE

MILLERSBURG, KENTUCKY

COL. LESLIE C. BLANKINSHIP, A.B., President

Beautifully and healthfully located in the heart of the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky, Millersburg Military Institute encompasses 18 acres of campus.

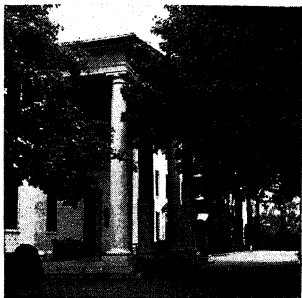

Fundamentally a college preparatory school, the Institute prepares boys for entrance to all colleges, universities and the service academies. Its scholastic curriculum is well-coordinated with physical and military, while stimulating the full expression of individual initiative.

Intensive study methods, continually supervised by an interested and experienced faculty dedicated to their work, guarantee a sound educational program. Facilities and equipment are modern, including up-to-date dormitories and classrooms, new gymnasium and ample playing fields. The social and athletic programs are fashioned to meet the needs of every cadet.

The Junior Division of the Institute, while definitely integrated into the over-all school program, maintains its own staff (including a house-keeper and school mother), dining room, gymnasium, swimming pool and playground.

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE

LYNDON, KENTUCKY and VENICE, FLORIDA

COL. C. B. RICHMOND, A.B., D.Litt.,
President

Commandant

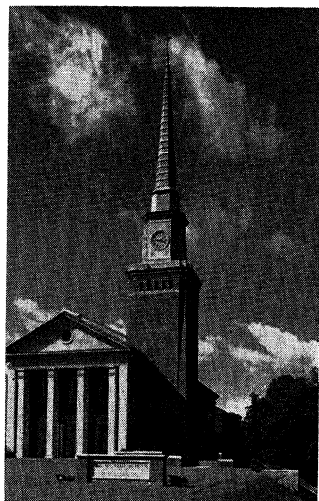

The Institute is the oldest private military school in America. By tradition and policy it remains a small college preparatory, limited to 300 select boys. Through military discipline cadets learn the lessons of community spirit, responsibility, co-operation, and loyalty.

A large faculty of boy specialists and a successful plan of intelligently supervised study reduce failures and assure thorough mastery of essentials for admission to leading colleges. The entire School moves to Florida for the months of January, February, and March providing recreation in the open air and sunshine the year-round. Complete sports facilities.

THE McCALLIE SCHOOL, CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

S. J. and R. L. McCALLIE, M.A., LL.D., Headmasters

McCallie is a college preparatory school for boys, with 100% of its graduates going to college. It is a center for CEEB examinations. Although non-sectarian, there is a strong Christian emphasis at McCallie, with daily chapel and Bible required. McCallie also offers modified military training (Nat'l Defense Cadet Corps), a broad athletic program in which every boy participates, and a well-rounded program of activities including band, glee club, Drama, Astronomy Club, Sailing, Boatbuilding, Driver Training, and publications. Located on beautiful historic Missionary Ridge near Lookout Mountain, McCallie has excellent, well-equipped facilities.

Located in Shelby County, the 700-acre campus of open fields and hilly wooded areas furnishes a picturesque setting for the modern one-story dormitories, library, gymnasium-auditorium, industrial arts building, the 10-acre playing field, rifle range, and 4 tennis courts.

INDIAN SPRINGS SCHOOL

HELENA, ALABAMA

LOUIS E. ARMSTRONG, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., Director

Indian Springs, a non-sectarian boarding and day school for boys, created under the will of Harvey G. Woodward, Birmingham industrialist, to "practice the principles of truth, morality, and justice and assist in elevating American citizenship," is owned and operated by the Alabama Education Foundation.

The Academic Program has two major phases: General Education and Special Education. The former aims to prepare boys for those common activities which, as citizens and heirs of a joint culture, they will share with others. The chief characteristic is the emphasis given to a core of social values, which consists of the major premises of free men in a free society. The requirements are: four years each of English and history, two years each of science and mathematics. In addition, students are afforded music, arts and crafts, dramatics, physical education, shop, work experience, and hobbies.

The Special Education phase aims to help boys fulfill the unique, particular functions in life which are in them to fulfill. It embodies elective courses in mathematics, science, languages, agriculture, industrial arts, and religion.

Organization as a community allows students to take part in planning and directing traffic regulations, fire protection, conservation of wild life, the use and services of the dining hall, store, etc. Sports include baseball, basketball, volley-ball, tennis, golf, riflery, hiking, swimming, fishing, and camping. The social calendar is well filled with dances, picnics, camp fires, weekly get-togethers, sings, and movies.

Students are accepted on previous school records, individual screening tests, and an interview with the boy and his parents. Only those boys are admitted who are judged to be capable of achieving distinction of performance.

CASTLE HEIGHTS MILITARY ACADEMY

COL. H. L. ARMSTRONG, A.B., M.A., President

CHMA aims not only to prepare a boy for college, but to train him in habits of study, industry and perseverance. The academic curriculum covers all units required for entrance by leading colleges and universities, many of which our graduates enter each year. Each student receives personal attention through small classes, Remedial reading when necessary, and extra help in afternoon and evening study periods. Discipline, while essentially military, is a system of control by means of which cadets receive certain benefits. The military is subservient to scholarship.

Located just outside Lebanon — a beautiful historic little town 30 miles from Nashville — CHMA has a 200-acre campus with ample space for parade ground and athletic fields. Its equipment is housed in 17 buildings, affording auditorium, gymnasium, swimming pool, mess hall, armory, library, hospital, and cadet quarters.

Along with its full academic and military program, CHMA offers participation in all the favorite sports, gives instruction in Aviation, maintains a Band and Glee Club, and opens its campus to a broad program of extra-curricular activities which embraces the weekly school newspaper, Student Council, and many clubs.

All cadets participate in the scientific health program. Religion at CHMA, while frankly Christian, is non-sectarian.

CULVER MILITARY ACADEMY

The Culver Educational Foundation

On Lake Maxinkuckee

CULVER, INDIANA

Seven hundred seventy-three students from 38 states and 16 other countries are attending the Academy during 1957-58. They enjoy the excellent facilities of the large and attractive campus on the shores of Lake Maxinkuckee. When the three new modern academic buildings — Science, Humanities, and Gignilliat Hall — were dedicated in May 1957 Mr. Eppley announced another gift of $1,000,000 for endowed academic chairs.

Mr. Eugene C. Eppley, a graduate of the Academy, who provided $1,200,000 for two of the new academic buildings, made another gift of $1,400,000 on October 8, 1956, for a very complete and beautiful auditorium-theater seating 1500. Both of these gifts were made through the E. C. Eppley Foundation. Construction of this addition to Culver began in the fall of 1957. Recently alumni, patrons, and friends provided a beautiful Memorial Chapel through gifts totaling $1,250,000.

The student body is made up of those who by previous school record, character, family background, and the results of scholastic tests, have the capacity to pursue college preparatory courses. During the school year 1957-58, 650 Culver graduates were attending 202 colleges and universities. Some of these institutions are Iowa (12), Cornell (13), Dartmouth (7), Georgia Institute Technology (17), Harvard (9), Illinois (13), Indiana (22), Massachusetts Institute Technology (11), Northwestern (34), Ohio State (11), Princeton (16), Purdue (20), Stanford (19), Tulane (12), Michigan (31), Vanderbilt (14), and Yale (11).

The military training as given at Culver contributes immeasurably to each cadet's growth in poise, courtesy, thoroughness, initiative, self-reliance and self-confidence. He develops physically, mentally, and spiritually and receives special training in the ability to lead and direct others effectively. Culver provides thorough preparation for a useful, successful and well-rounded life.

The success of the Culver philosophy of education is attested by the record of its graduates in the colleges of the country and by their success in later life. In the number of its alumni listed in "Who's Who In America" Culver stands high among the leaders in the preparatory school field, non-military as well as military.

The Summer Naval School (est. 1902) and the Horsemanship School (est. 1907) are for boys 14-18 years of age. The Woodcraft Camp (est. 1912) is for younger boys 9½ to 14 years. These well-known camps are in session for approximately eight weeks each summer.

WESTERN RESERVE ACADEMY

JOHN W. HALLOWELL, A.B.,
M.B.A., Headmaster

Western Reserve is dedicated to "giving a thorough classical and scientific preparation for college", and aims to make it a full and rich experience for each boy. The academic curriculum allows each boy to try different fields of study and develops his capacity in elected and continued fields.

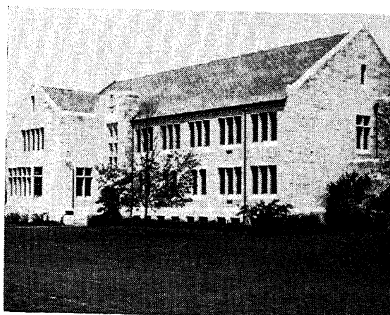

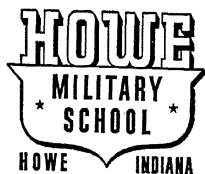

Sports are offered in season; activities in music are exceptional; wood-working and machine shops, natural history club, art, literary magazine, newspaper, typing and photography round out this program.

LAKE FOREST ACADEMY, LAKE FOREST, ILLINOIS

HAROLD H. CORBIN, JR., A.B., Head Master

This long-established non-military preparatory school has been engaged since 1857 in producing men versed in our common cultural heritage, trained in fundamentals, keenly alive to civic responsibility. Here boys are encouraged by a competent faculty to think independently. Sound physical development parallels training of the mind. In September of 1948, Lake Forest Academy opened a new 200-acre campus with greatly increased facilities. Boys from all parts of the country come to the school and are prepared successfully for the nation's finest colleges and universities.

The New Academic Building

Howe, one of the oldest boys' schools of the midwest, is located half way between Detroit and Chicago. Respected by patrons and praised by alumni, this prominent Episcopal school emphasizes sound scholarship and Christian character.

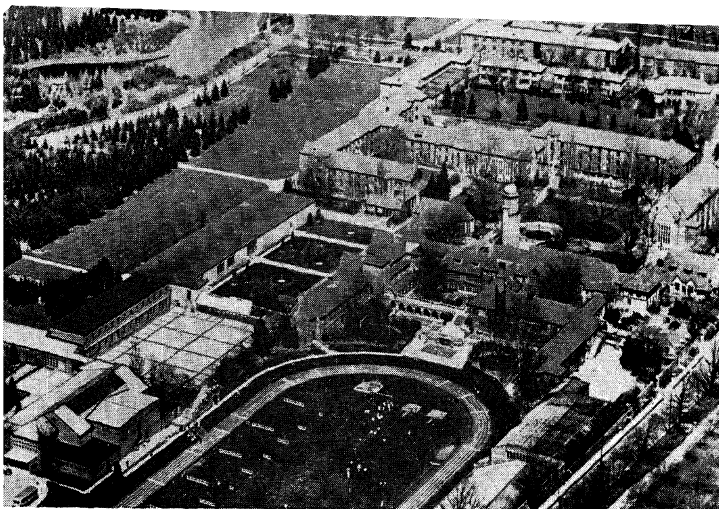

Its academic program, supplemented by carefully planned athletics and military training (R.O.T.C.), is the result of years of experience. Through the means of an academic "par", each student is encouraged to do his best work.

A restricted enrollment provides highest type of companionship. The Junior School has its own buildings and faculty.

The recent million dollar building program has provided the school with four new fireproof dormitories, an academic building and swimming pool, also a new dining room and infirmary just completed.

A Retreat Parade

CRANBROOK SCHOOL

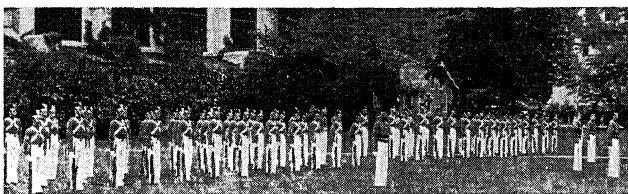

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICHIGAN

HARRY D. HOEY, B.A., M.A., Head Master

Cranbrook, a boarding and day school for boys, founded and endowed by Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth in 1926, offers college preparatory and general courses in grades 7-12, a postgraduate year, and opportunities in fine and industrial arts, music, and sciences. The faculty, averaging one teacher for every ten boys, has been selected because of personality, training, and ability to win the confidence and respect of the students. An intelligent guidance program aids teachers in directing instruction and supervision toward the all-round development of each boy.

All students participate in a sports program featuring team games with outside groups and physical education for developing strength and coordination. Two gymnasiums, football, baseball, and soccer fields, tennis courts, artificial ice skating rink, and natural facilities for outdoor swimming and winter sports encourage healthful year-round physical activity.

Cranbrook is affiliated with the Episcopal Church but does not emphasize sectarianism. The School is one of six cultural and educational institutions making up the Cranbrook community, all of which have won recognition for high standards of achievement and for architectural beauty.

The Governor of Wisconsin's Honor Guard

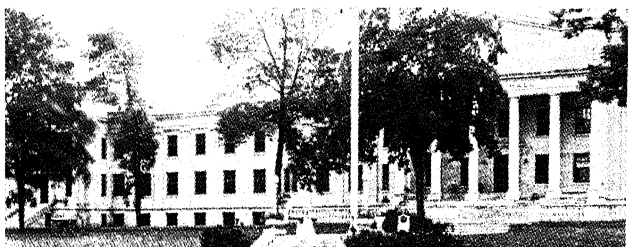

ST. JOHN'S MILITARY ACADEMY, DELAFIELD, WISC.

BRIG.-GEN. ROY F. FARRAND, President

At St. John's, famous for the esprit of its students and loyalty of its graduates, scholastic success is based upon the discipline of hard work with its subsequent satisfactions.

The courses of study lead to the Classical, Scientific, or Technical Courses of the Universities plus a Commercial Course of exceptional value. A Remedial Reading Clinic is maintained for diagnosis and correction.

Classes are small, insuring individual attention. The experienced faculty of college-trained people have an aggregate experience exceeding 500 years. While Episcopal, all denominations are represented.

NORTHWESTERN MILITARY AND NAVAL ACADEMY

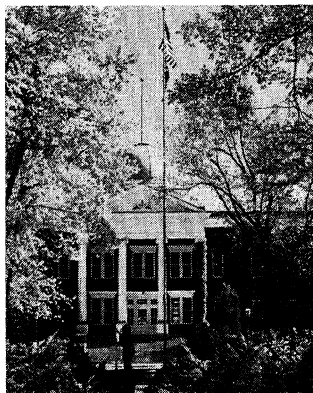

LAKE GENEVA, WISCONSIN

THE REV. JAMES HOWARD JACOBSON, Superintendent

Northwestern is a college preparatory military school seeking to develop an allaround boy. A superior educational environment is achieved through selection of students, careful guidance, traditionally small classes, and solid training in mathematics, science, social studies and languages with especial emphasis on English and reading. Participation in sports, marksmanship, debate and other activities is expected of all. Northwestern's location on beautiful Lake Geneva makes sailing, swimming and other water sports popular in the spring and fall. Summer camp.

MISSOURI MILITARY ACADEMY, MEXICO, MISSOURI

COL. C. R. STRIBLING, B.A., President and Superintendent

The sixty-nine year old MMA has established a substantial reputation throughout the nation by its unique approach to scholarship, leadership, and campus activities.

The curriculum is college preparatory, with each course of study designed to fit individual needs. The personal incentive plan gives each boy his own standard of achievement.

The military program develops those traits of character that are so necessary in a democracy and prepares cadets for positions of responsibility in both peace and war.

The broad scope of campus activities reaches each boy and includes golf, equitation, and aviation in addition to the usual sports and extra-curricular projects.

SHATTUCK SCHOOL, FARIBAULT, MINNESOTA

REV. SIDNEY W. GOLDSMITH, JR., Rector and Headmaster

Directed by the Episcopal Church for more than a century, Shattuck today offers sound education and preparation for universities and colleges. The record of graduates is evidence of the School's success in fostering the physical, social, intellectual, and spiritual growth of its students.

Senior Division ROTC.

Sports offered on the 250-acre campus include golf, track, swimming, football, wrestling, basketball, baseball, hockey, tennis, riflery.

A complete Summer School-Camp is conducted on the campus.

SOUTHERN ARIZONA SCHOOL

TUCSON, ARIZONA

CAPT. RUSSELL B. FAIRGRIEVE, B.S., Head Master

The goal of this 28-year old ranch school is the development of the complete individual. Incorporating the East's high standards of scholarship with the advantages of a mild, dry climate, the balanced program reflects equal concern for character building and the intellectual, physical, and social needs of the growing boy.

The campus covers 240 foothill acres 14 miles from Tucson. Adobe buildings of Hopi architecture modified to meet requirements of health, comfort, and convenience are surrounded by playing fields and courts, polo field, calf-roping arena, corrals, trap and rifle ranges, and open desert crossed by bridle paths and a mountain stream. A prehistoric Indian village lies on the property.

Enrollment is limited to assure small classes and individual guidance. The Upper School curriculum meets college requirements and prepares for CEB examinations; the Lower School provides a solid elementary education, emphasizing sound study habits.

Applicants are interviewed by the Head Master, who travels extensively spring and fall. No one with communicable diseases is admitted but consideration is given to boys seeking relief from sinusitis, asthma, arthritis, or recurring colds.

THE FOUNTAIN VALLEY SCHOOL

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLORADO

HENRY B. POOR, A.B., Head Master

Drawing its students annually from over twenty states, Fountain Valley combines the high standards of New England with the liberal traditions of the West. The faculty works closely with the boys and encourages them to accept the responsibilities of democratic living. The school supplements the college preparatory curriculum with courses in such fields as music, art and public speaking. Moreover, the location offers opportunities for field trips, riding, skiing, and excursions into the mountains.

COLORADO ACADEMY

DENVER 9, COLORADO

F. CHARLES FROELICHER, A.B., Headmaster

About 12 miles southwest of Denver, situated in a quiet country location of 74 acres and commanding a beautiful view of the Rocky Mountains, Colorado Academy accepts boarding students from grades IV through XII and day students from grades I through XII.

The Academy's curriculum is college preparatory in nature, and the long school day and small classes enable every boy to produce his best.

The full athletic program includes football, basketball, baseball, soccer, swimming, tennis, track and from October to May skiing.

The Academy has two athletic fields, three tennis courts, a baseball diamond, swimming pool, a new two court gymnasium and theater and maintains its own stable of horses.

ST. MARK'S SCHOOL, SALT LAKE CITY (3), UTAH

ROBERT L. BOLBACH, A.B., M.A., Headmaster

The re-establishment of Saint Mark's — a day school for boys — in 1956 was the crystalization of the Bishops of Utah's plan to meet the needs in the intermountain area for a college preparatory school. The curriculum is designed according to admission requirements of eastern colleges and universities. Sports offered include tennis, swimming, skiing and golf supervised by professional athletic instructors from the various private clubs.

Admission is based upon prognostication concerning the boy's ability to profit from the opportunity to study on the collegiate level and his demonstrated academic achievement at the time of application.

Sectarian background is not considered. Saint Mark's does not pretend to be responsible for the full development of the child; it recognizes that the Church and the home have their peculiar roles in the training of the youth and requires that they cooperate with the school in the training of the boy.

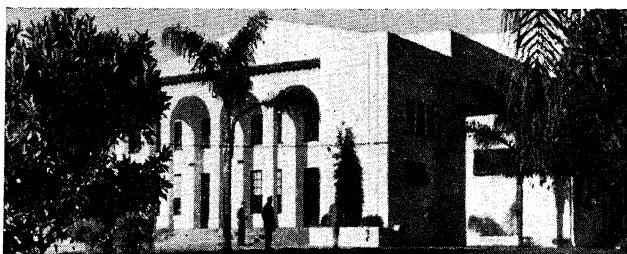

MT. LOWE MILITARY ACADEMY, ALTADENA, CALIF.

MAJ. J. H. DARGIN, B.S., C.E.,
President

Located at 1600 ft. elevation near the base of famous Mt. Lowe, the Academy is easily accessible to the metropolitan area of Los Angeles. Fully accredited academic training through 10th grade is supported by a planned athletic program and military training as specified by the War Department. Emphasis is upon development of effective study habits, self reliance and self control. Major J. H. Dargin, educator with a successful record of many years in the training of boys, and an experienced staff coordinate their efforts toward a realization of the Academy's motto: "Manliness and Loyalty in a Mind Alert."

The year-round program with balanced athletic and recreational activities includes summer school.

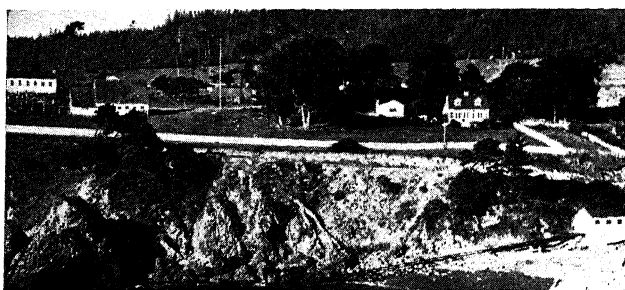

ARMY AND NAVY ACADEMY, CARLSBAD, CALIF.

COL. W. C. ATKINSON, President

RAYMOND EDE, Dean of Faculty and Head Master

Founded in 1910, this fully accredited military academy, non-profit and undenominational possesses dignity and sincerity of purpose which command nation wide respect. The Academy, with its established faculty, modern plant, and private ocean beach affords every opportunity for mental, physical, and spiritual development. Its graduates are successful in college and in life. Special emphasis is placed on training of the individual boy.

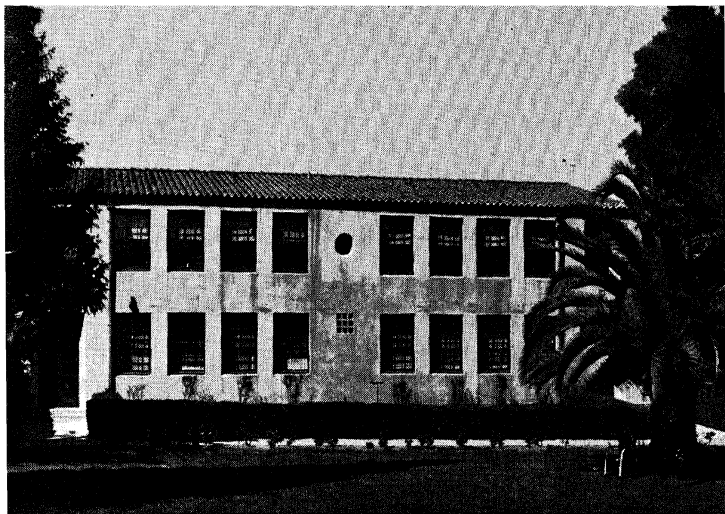

STILLWATER COVE RANCH SCHOOL

JENNER, CALIFORNIA

PAUL P. RUDY, Univ. of Wisc., Head Master

On the coast in the heart of the Redwood Empire, this Country School offers boys all grades through junior high school as well as instruction in piano, horsemanship and crafts, lessons on plant and animal life, and experience in seamanship, camping, and fishing. The boys live in homelike, fireproof, bunk houses constructed of native stone and hand-hewn redwood taken from the Ranch. The summer camp features canoe and pack trips.

VILLANOVA PREPARATORY SCHOOL

OJAI, CALIFORNIA

Villanova Preparatory School, a Boys' Catholic Residential School, is situated at Ojai, California's Valley of Enchantment, 25 miles south of Santa Barbara. The climate is mild and healthful year around with countless days of sunshine.

The beautiful campus, on State Highways 399 and 150, comprises 131 acres magnificently landscaped with palms, cypress, shrubs, flowers and lawns. The dormitory buildings are equipped with deluxe furnishings (semi-private occupancy). Study hours are supervised by the Faculty.

The swimming pool sets off a mountain-surrounded gridiron, track, practice field and outdoor basketball court. There are 3 tennis courts, 3 baseball fields, rifle range and volleyball courts. The School competes in all major and minor sports in the Tri-Valley League.

Educational facilities meet the high standards of the Augustinian Order, teachers for 16 centuries. Accredited by the University of California.

MENLO SCHOOL, MENLO PARK, CALIFORNIA

WILLIAM E. KRATT, A.B., A.M., LL.D., President

Menlo School and College, located 30 miles south of San Francisco, offers to boys a preparatory program in grades 9 through 12, and provides thorough academic preparation for university and college work. A separate program is provided for students in 7th and 8th grades.

The School has its own campus which is separate from but continuous with the College campus, occupying 46 acres in all. Proximity to Stanford and the University of California's main campus at Berkeley, facilitates Menlo's many desirable educational contacts with these institutions.

Small classes and close association between instructors and students make it possible for each boy to be observed closely. The course of study has one objective: — to prepare boys for college and university. The School program is accompanied by a wide variety of other activities: sports, dances, dramatics, school paper, photography, electronics, etc.

THE SARGENT SERVICES

Since 1915 Porter Sargent and Staff have served as educational advisers to parents.

Information on a great variety of schools, colleges and camps is available from our office, and a bureau is maintained to advise parents and guardians.

Thousands have been helped by sending details of their child's needs. A complete form will be sent on request, to be filled in with data that will make our suggestions pertinent and helpful. Specify name of student, age, school and class, grades received, the type of school sought, tuition range, and desired geographical location, in writing to Porter Sargent, 11 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass. A fee to offset the costs of service and handling is usually asked of parents able to pay. We do not condone, nor do we accept fees or commissions from the schools for enrollments made. This procedure, recognized and approved by educators assures, we believe, recommendations in the best interests of the child.

THE HAWAII PREPARATORY ACADEMY

KAMUELA, HAWAII

JAMES MONROE TAYLOR, II, B.A., Head Master

This School of small classes in the Hawaiian Islands is a college preparatory boys' boarding and day school for grades VII through XII. Though its firm aim, as with any good school, is the development of character, it believes that this personal quality develops best from daily association with high demands and standards and with fine and able people. Consequently it asks much of its students in both conduct and scholarship; and through the understanding leadership of the Head Master and faculty and through the effective discipline of a sound academic curriculum, it brings to its students those ingredients which character demands.

Easily accessible by air from the other islands and the mainland, The Hawaii Episcopal Academy is located at Kamuela, on the Island of Hawaii, in the heart of the famous rural Waimea District, elevation 2600 feet. Beautiful ranch and mountain country surround the campus, and a lovely Hawaiian beach is only twenty minutes away by car. The recreation program, though including conventional sports as well, takes full advantage of these natural surroundings, offering among other outdoor pursuits a fine riding program.

GIRLS
SCHOOLS

A Friends School For Girls

OAK GROVE SCHOOL

VASSALBORO, MAINE

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT OWEN, Principals

The strong college preparatory work of Oak Grove draws students from a wide area. Recent graduates have entered over fifty major colleges and universities including Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Goucher, Mills, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar and Wellesley. Oak Grove is accredited to all colleges which admit by certificate and prepares its students thoroughly for College Board Tests.

Recognizing the value of gracious, well rounded living, Oak Grove offers a General Course with credit for Music, Art and Dramatics with a choice of electives. Careful attention is given the younger girls in grades 7 and 8. A zestful Student Council supervises a two week volunteer project for each girl. Faculty and students are frequently guests at interesting lectures and concerts at nearby Colby College.

Oak Grove has a stately Tudor Quadrangle of new fireproof buildings (Class A construction) with a separate hall for Seniors, a Recitation Hall, and a central Administration Building with one floor for Music Studios and another for the richly furnished and much used Library which a trained librarian always leaves unlocked. The Quaker Meeting House, built in 1784, is impressive in the serenity of its Colonial simplicity. A Homestead of the same period, opened in 1958, adds a charming residence for fifteen teachers and students.

OAK GROVE'S gymnasium, built in 1912, is spacious and well equipped but a new one is planned. A fireproof stable for 18 horses and a small indoor Riding Ring were completed in 1955. Riding under an expert Master is included without extra fees. Tennis, Badminton, Archery, Dancing, Swimming in an outdoor pool, Skating, and Skiing are sports of long-range value taught to promote health, skill, grace and good sportsmanship. Among the international teachers is an expert for skating and skiing. All possible gymnastics are in the sunshine of spacious playing fields and recreation begins daily at 2:10 P.M. There is a pleasant exchange of dances with Hebron Academy.

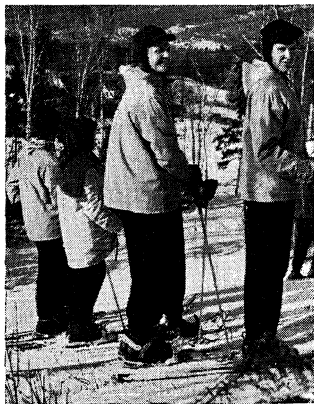

The early afternoon sunshine of the dry and exhilarating climate, a registered nurse alert to preventive therapy, plain but wholesome food, orderly living, popular "Sleep-ins," a warm but challenging community friendliness and the glad esprit de corps traditional in Quaker Schools, combine to eliminate stress and foster healthy, happy students who are eager for responsibility. There is a school uniform for recitations.

The Admission Requirements are high. This is not a school for adolescents with social or academic problems nor who are addicted to tobacco or alcohol. Applications are made long in advance. A girl must be recommended by her previous school for integrity, courtesy, ambition, and the community spirit of a well integrated and well bred student. Oak Grove is warmly interested in helping each girl discover and develop her talents and potentials. Oak Grove students annually win honors in national tests and competitions.

SAINT MARY'S-IN-THE-MOUNTAINS

SEVEN SPRINGS, LITTLETON, NEW HAMPSHIRE

MARY HARLEY JENKS,
Principal

Saint Mary's-in-the-Mountains, a boarding school for girls which offers the four years of high school work, has a distinguished record of college placement. An Episcopal school, it welcomes girls of all faiths into a community life based on Christian principles in which all students share responsibility for social, sports, dramatic, religious, and social service activities. A student-faculty planned work program further promotes maturity.

Location in the White Mountains gives opportunities for all major seasonal sports with intensive ski instructions. Music and art are emphasized.

ABBOT ACADEMY, ANDOVER, MASSACHUSETTS

MRS. ALEXANDER CRANE, B.A., Principal

Situated in the pleasant, historic town of Andover, Abbot Academy with its spacious and beautiful grounds suggests a country school. Boston is only 23 miles to the south.

Abbot is a college preparatory school, beginning with the ninth grade. Music is specially emphasized. Abbot Hall (1829), pictured above, is the original building and contains the school chapel, an observatory, and an art gallery. Nine other buildings, some completed in 1955, afford ample facilities for academic and social needs.

SEA PINES ON CAPE COD, EAST BREWSTER, MASSACHUSETTS

FAITH BICKFORD, Director
GLADYS PARKER, Assoc. Dir.

This beautiful and spacious sea-shore estate on Cape Cod includes a modern building, gardens, tennis courts, and playing fields. Sea Pines is a school home for children, grades one through eight. Experienced teachers train pupils in right study habits and prepare them for the best secondary schools. Unusual opportunities are offered in music, French, dramatics, dancing, and art. Each girl learns to enjoy the responsibilities of normal home life. Special care is given to grooming and development of poise. Pupils attend Christian Science Sunday School. The School conducts a summer camp; five age groups for girls; small boys.

ROGERS HALL SCHOOL, LOWELL, MASSACHUSETTS

MRS. KATHARINE WHITTEN MACGAY, B.A., Principal

Now in its 65th year, Rogers Hall offers College Preparatory and General Courses; Courses in Liberal Arts, and Secretarial Training; and opportunities in Music, Art and Dramatics.

The old Colonial home, in a delightful New England setting, serves as the main dormitory. Its attractive interiors, quaint shuttered windows, fireplaces and many books, aid the girl, often away from home for the first time, to adjust herself easily to boarding school life. Pleasant events are planned to develop normal social contacts.

A comprehensive Health Program stimulates interest in all sports: Riding, Swimming, Tennis, Hockey, and Basketball.

STONELEIGH-PROSPECT HILL SCHOOL

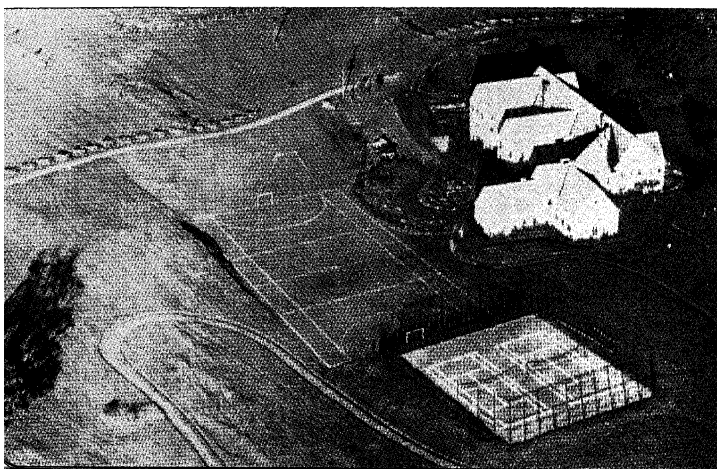

GREENFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

EDWARD EVERETT EMERSON, A.B., Principal

This is a happy school with a friendly atmosphere—the attractive environment is conducive to pleasant relationships. Located in the hill country of northwestern Massachusetts—a region noted for beauty of scenery, importance as an educational center, and healthful climate—the 150-acre school property provides tennis courts, playing fields, riding ring and miles of bridle paths, a private stable and string of horses, ski slopes, and a skating pond. The campus is two miles north of the center of Greenfield, Massachusetts.

On the secondary level, curricula are divided into two major classifications: college preparatory, designed to meet requirements of College Entrance Examinations; and General Academic, for those desiring to enter music, art, or vocational schools.

Besides sports—riding, hockey, soccer, basketball, tennis, swimming, skiing—Stoneleigh further encourages the physical well-being of students by lessons in the Mensendieck System of posture. A full complement of clubs, plus a generous social calendar, make life complete at Stoneleigh.

FOXHOLLOW SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

AILEEN M. FARRELL, B.A., M.A., OXON, Principal

The integrated study of cultural subjects at Foxhollow is one of the stimulating features of its teaching which includes expert instruction in languages, the sciences and mathematics. Students are encouraged to work for College Entrance.

The teaching staff is distinguished and faithful, drawn from Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Smith and Bates colleges, the universities of Oxford, Frankfurt, Lyons and Yale, and from the Eastman School of Music.

The scholastic plan is well balanced by a varied country life in the beautiful surroundings of the School's two adjacent lake properties. This extensive acreage provides playing fields for the two school teams. Their Captains support the Student Council and the friendly rivalry of the two teams produces a spirit of good sportsmanship always shown in competitive games with other schools. The afternoon program includes skiing, riding, tennis, badminton, canoeing, swimming.

Being in a district of many boys' schools the girls of Foxhollow enjoy a fair share of social life in dances, joint glee clubs recitals and even an occasional operetta.

Parents frequently spend weekends in the Berkshires. Any girl satisfying Student Government requirements is free to be out for meals on Saturdays and Sundays and to go in a group into Lenox and Pittsfield during the week.

MILTON ACADEMY GIRLS' SCHOOL

MILTON, MASSACHUSETTS

MARGARET A. JOHNSON, A.B., A.M.,
Principal

The Girls' School of Milton Academy admits day scholars in grades 7-12 and boarding scholars in grades 9-12. Day students and boarders share equally in the life of the school and a number of activities are carried on jointly with Boys' School.

Milton offers girls a simple country life, yet the proximity of Boston, ten miles away, makes it possible to enjoy the resources of the city. The School believes in giving boarding students as much freedom as it is practical to grant. The academic program, though it offers a wide choice of courses and ample opportunity for artistic, musical and athletic activities, is carried on entirely at the college preparatory level.

WALNUT HILL SCHOOL, NATICK, MASSACHUSETTS

MISS MILDRED MARCY, A.B., Ed.M., Principal

An efficient Boarding and Day Preparatory School, Walnut Hill is well known for its excellent equipment and high standard of instruction, successfully preparing girls for College since 1893.

The School, beautifully situated on Walnut Hill, is 17 miles from Boston. The 45-acre campus includes Laboratories, a Gymnasium, Schoolrooms, 5 Dormitories and a Playhouse, as well as a hillside for Skiing, a Hockey field, a Skating pond and several Tennis Courts.

Students attend the Theatre and Symphony Concerts in Boston. Lectures and Concerts at Wellesley College; also visit museums and places of historic interest in this area.

Northampton School for Girls is a relatively small, college preparatory school, with a total of seventy students in residence and sixty commuting from their homes in Northampton, Amherst, South Hadley, Holyoke, and other nearby communities.

NORTHAMPTON SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

NORTHAMPTON, MASSACHUSETTS

DOROTHY M. BEMENT, M.A., SARAH B. WHITAKER, Principals

Although nearly a third of its graduates have entered Smith College since the School's founding in 1924, nearly another third have chosen Mount Holyoke, Vassar, Wellesley, Connecticut, Wheaton, and Radcliffe, and the balance have scattered to over eighty different colleges, junior colleges, and professional schools.

Friendly relations between student and faculty, thorough preparation for college, ample opportunity for outdoor sports and other extra-curriculars, and high standards of good citizenship account in large measure for the School's excellent college record and the loyalty of alumnae. Nearby Smith College provides stimulating educational advantages. Some students enroll for one or two years of preparation for college entrance, others enter on the eighth or ninth grade level.

Northampton maintains on the campus a six-week Summer School of French, now in its 23rd season. A separate catalogue is available.

THE MARY A. BURNHAM SCHOOL

MRS. GEORGE WALDO EMERSON, A.B., Principal

Northampton provides an ideal setting for a girls' school. The home of Smith College, one of the largest resident colleges for women, it is noted for the culture and public spirit of its citizens. The town overlooks the beautiful Connecticut River valley, with its picturesque villages and lovely meadows. On the rise of land above the river and directly opposite the college campus are the main buildings of The Mary A. Burnham School.

One of the oldest girls' schools in New England, Burnham accepts 175 resident students. The average size of each class is twelve pupils. Only boarding students are accepted; in this way uniform standards for study hours and recreational activities are maintained.

The basic course of studies is the College Preparatory. A strong faculty has been chosen for their inspirational qualities as well as their experience in preparing students for college. The individual need of each girl is considered in conjunction with the requirements of the college she chooses. In addition to the College Preparatory, a General Academic Course offers a number of electives including art and music, and prepares for entrance to junior colleges, music and art schools.

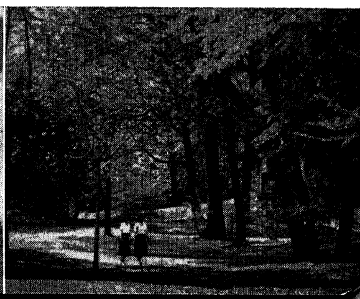

At Burnham a homelike atmosphere prevails. The girls live in three dormitories which give the impression of spacious, well-appointed homes. Students and teachers mingle in a friendly spirit. Teas, dinners, and appropriate holiday parties give each student the opportunity to serve both as hostess and guest that she may develop poise and social awareness. To this training, Burnham adds regular lessons in the Mensendieck system of posture.

Students eagerly await such extra-curricular highlights as trips to historic spots in New England, ski weekends, tea dances with boys from nearby preparatory schools, Mountain Day, as well as the festivities connected with Commencement, such as the crowning of the May Queen and the Senior Pageant.

The School fosters a number of clubs to embrace varying interests—Athletics, Current Events, Art, Speakers' and Writers', Journalists, language clubs (French, German, and Spanish), Glee Club, and the Social Activities Committee. A Student Council and House Councils cooperate with the Faculty in promoting good school government.

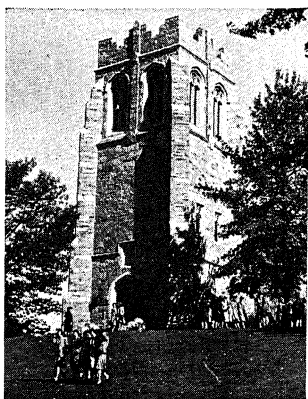

Fifteen sports are taught under the expert guidance of ten specialized teachers. The sports include field hockey, soccer, basketball, softball, volleyball, tennis, golf, swimming and life saving, water ballet, horse-back riding, skiing, skating, badminton, modern and folk dancing.

NORTHFIELD SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

EAST NORTHFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

EDMOND STEPHEN MEANY, JR., A.B., A.M., PH.D., Acting Head Master

Northfield School for Girls, formerly Northfield Seminary, was founded by D. L. Moody, who also established the nearby Mount Hermon School for boys. Undenominational, Northfield stresses a program of constructive Christian education. The program of studies includes three curricula, all college preparatory. Twelve dormitory units provide a homelike environment. On the 200-acre campus bordered by the Connecticut River are classroom, home economics and music buildings, library, gymnasium, pool, and chapel.

MACDUFFIE SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

RALPH D. RUTENBER, JR., A.B., A.M., Headmaster

Founded in 1890, MacDuffie is a small, college preparatory school for girls who want a natural, homelike environment; thorough preparation for college; and a chance to attend outstanding concerts, art exhibits, and plays. Academically, the emphasis is on small classes and how to study. A little theatre, art studio, gymnasium, playing field, and near-by swimming pool, riding stables, and skating pond permit a full extracurricular program. Although undenominational, the School is Christian, committed to the practical, every-day application of the Sermon on the Mount.

Thirty miles from Boston, House in the Pines provides metropolitan opportunities in art, music, and dramas, and healthful enjoyable country living. Important is the home-like atmosphere maintained.

HOUSE IN THE PINES

NORTON, MASSACHUSETTS

M. ELIZABETH JOHNDROE, A.B., Director

House in the Pines has an excellent record of preparing girls for college. A postgraduate review year is provided. Students in the general course may elect majors in dramatics, music, art, household arts, or secretarial science.

The graduate division, living in a separate house, gives the high school graduate an opportunity to anticipate courses for full college credit.

Numerous beautiful bridle paths, indoor riding ring, a stable of twenty fine horses appeal to girls interested in riding.

MISS HALL'S SCHOOL

PITTSFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

MISS ELIZABETH M. FITCH, A.B., A.M., Head Mistress

Pittsfield, a large urban community in the western part of Massachusetts, with a population of some 54,000 and an altitude of 1000 feet, is noted for the beauty of its setting in the Berkshire Hills, and for its invigorating climate. Here, on a campus of approximately 70 acres, bordered by the Housatonic River, is Miss Hall's School. These ample grounds offer a woodland park, a pond for skating and hills for coasting and skiing, six tennis courts and athletic fields.

Of Georgian architecture and fireproof construction, the main building contains school offices, living and dining rooms, study halls, classrooms, and students' bedrooms. Adjoining it is the auditorium, the Mira H. Hall Memorial Library and the new School house — a Sixtieth Anniversary Gift of parents and alumnae—equipped with physical science laboratory, offices, 16 classrooms, an audio-visual room and an art studio. Also the gift of alumnae and friends, the Library contains 6000 volumes and a catalogued record collection.

The School takes its name from its founder—Mira Hinsdale Hall, who from 1898 was headmistress for almost 40 years. From 1937 until her retirement 11 years later, her niece, Margaret Hinsdale Hall, was headmistress of the School. During its first 50 years, standards of work and character were developed which have proved to be basic for the academic and social education of girls. These standards are adhered to today: altered in emphasis, however, to meet the increasing demands of everyday living.

Strengthened by successful experience and sustained by the vision of Miss Hall, the work of her niece and the enrichment of the curriculum, the School today meets the challenge of modern, independent education in a democratic society.

Air View — Miss Hall's School

Now, when right attitudes of mind must be developed which will help prepare girls for the problems which face them today, the School tries to give its students a feeling of spiritual security and academic adventure by providing them with opportunities which will teach them how to develop a sensible and rational attitude toward the uncertainties of the future; by helping them become well-informed, stable and responsible citizens; and by showing them how to exercise sound judgment in the complex social, economic and political life in which they must soon take an active and intelligent part.

To accomplish such a dual purpose, this college preparatory school for girls, maintains an enrollment small enough to insure individual attention on the part of the faculty and individual responsibility on the part of each girl.

Liberal in its educational philosophy, Miss Hall's School has established a curriculum sufficiently elastic to permit academic programs which are adapted to individual aptitudes and interests, with emphasis on the development of the student's ability to do independent and increasingly mature work in preparation for the larger experience of college and community. The diploma may be earned in four years after the completion of work of the eighth class in an elementary or junior high school.

Extracurricular activities include workshops in many creative fields, honor societies, the student council, choir, glee club, community service committee and other student organizations which embrace the whole gamut of sports.

DANA HALL SCHOOLS

DANA JUNIOR SCHOOL

MRS. WERNER HEGEMANN, B.S., Headmistress

This is the junior high division of the Dana Hall Schools, coördinate with Dana Hall proper. It covers grades 7, 8, and 9. The school cultivates a homelike atmosphere in the residences and gives each student a great deal of personal attention. It maintains an academic program of high standards under the direction of its qualified teachers. Many opportunities for school trips and visits to cultural centers.

TENACRE COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL

MISS PHYLLIS G. SCOBORIA, B.A., Headmistress

The elementary division admits boys and girls between 4 and 11 years of age. Courses follow the best modern educational practices. The school has well-equipped classrooms and an excellent program of physical training, including such sports as riding, tennis, hockey, baseball, basketball, and skating.

DANA HALL

MRS. ALNAH JAMES JOHNSTON, B.A., Principal

Founded in 1881, Dana Hall covers the three senior high school years. Although a majority of its graduates enter the leading colleges for women, alumnae are to be found in forty different colleges and universities.

Located in a New England college town 15 miles from Boston and possessing extensive and attractive grounds, Dana Hall affords, to an unusual degree, the advantages of both country and city life, especially the music, art, and drama opportunities of Boston.

The extracurricular life is rich in opportunity for every student and helps prepare for leadership in college and community life.

HOWARD SEMINARY

WEST BRIDGEWATER, MASSACHUSETTS

MRS. VIDA S. CLOUGH, A.B., Ed.M., Director

West Bridgewater, the oldest inland town of the Old Colony of Plymouth, is within three miles of Brockton, and less than an hour's drive from both Boston and Providence. Here, in a rural setting with atmosphere conducive to study and outdoor recreation, Howard Seminary has its home.

The Seminary's grounds comprise nearly twenty acres of fields and shaded lawns, providing facilities for tennis, field hockey, baseball, and other field sports. Opportunities for riding, swimming, basketball, roller skating and winter sports are available in the vicinity.

The School is housed in five buildings: Drury Hall, the center of resident life at the School, has the atmosphere of a spacious comfortable home; Packard Hall and Perkins House (for eighth grade girls) are likewise dormitories. The new recreation building comprises a gymnasium and theatre. A new classroom building, chemistry, biology and speech laboratories, library, study hall, art and music studios, dining room, administrative offices and conference rooms will be ready in 1958.

Girls Schools—755

HOWARD SEMINARY with its emphasis on sound college preparation seeks to educate girls of junior and high school age for intelligent happy and constructive living. Academic standards are high stressing successful achievements in English, languages, history, mathematics and science. Howard limits its enrollment in order to afford the best opportunity for every student. A flexible curriculum is adjusted to individual needs and interests. Students enter Goucher, Wheaton, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Vassar, Bates, Brandeis.

A very important part of the total learning experience of the Howard girl is her participation in a variety of student activities. Our limited enrollment assures each student the opportunity to develop self-confidence, cooperation, initiative, and leadership through the exercise of her duties or office initiated and conducted by the students under faculty supervision.

Extracurricular activities include: the Student Council, the Dramatic Club, the School publications (yearbook and newspaper), musical organizations (Glee Club, Choir and Howard Singers), Speech Choir, International Relations, Science, French, Sewing and other clubs. School picnics, frequent theatre and symphony concerts in Boston, and many impromptu parties and special treats contribute to the informal, family-like quality of Howard life. Field trips in connection with class work help to make subject matter stimulating. Formal and informal dances with Lawrence, Monson and Wilbraham Academies are annual social attractions.

BURNHAM-BY-THE-SEA

NEWPORT, RHODE ISLAND

MABEL H. EMERSON (Mrs. George Waldo Emerson), Principal
MIRIAM EMERSON PETERS (Mrs. Macdonald Peters), Associate Principal

This summer session offers girls of high school age intensive study under expert guidance, as well as unusual facilities for creative work in painting, sculpture, drama, and music (piano, harp, or violin).

Academic subjects may be review or cover a year's work toward high school diploma or college credit.

Art classes are conducted by Felix de Weldon, sculptor of the famous Iwo Jima monument in Washington, D.C. The Glee Club is under the direction of John K. Hanks, Head of the Voice Department at Duke University, who teaches voice, speech and music appreciation at Burnham-by-the-Sea.

The school occupies one of the most modern and spacious of the beautiful Newport estates on the Cliff Walk. The 54-room house (built in 1926) offers complete facilities for study and recreation. Sports include swimming, tennis, riding, and golf. Delightful social life includes weekly dances, attendance at annual music festivals and tennis tournaments.

THE MARY C. WHEELER SCHOOL

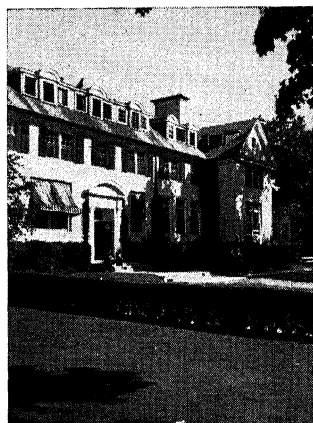

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND

S. ROWLAND MORGAN, JR., A.M.,
Headmaster

For sixty-nine years this Boarding and Day School has emphasized sound college preparation with training in good study habits, self-reliance, initiative, and citizenship. The curriculum is essentially college preparatory with a wide range of electives including Studio, Music, Dramatics, and the Dance. Graduates in colleges and universities give proof of high standards and effective training.

Civic and social responsibilities are developed through school government, student committees and social service. The 120-acre School Farm with lake and woodland provides excellent facilities for sports, informal recreational activities, and a home for the Junior Boarding Department (grades 4-8).

LINCOLN SCHOOL, PROVIDENCE 6, RHODE ISLAND

MARION S. COLE, M.A., Ed.D.
Head Mistress

One-fifth of the Upper School girls at Lincoln are resident students. These have the advantage of living in a small friendly group, where teachers and the principal know each girl personally. They also profit by association with the larger group of day students from Providence and nearby suburban homes, where the parents and alumnae are actively interested in the school's standards and welfare.

Lincoln is a Friends school, encouraging thoughtful attitudes toward life, interest in the welfare of other people, and an appreciation of Christian values. More than three-fourths of the graduates each year enter four-year colleges. Many have won scholarships at well-known colleges.

ROSEMARY HALL, GREENWICH, CONNECTICUT

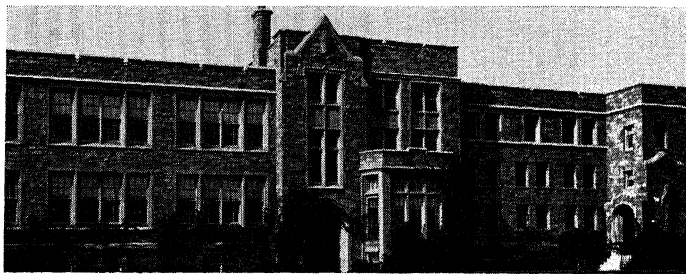

ALICE EATON McBEE II, B.A.,
B.S., M.A., Head Mistress

Founded on faith in young girls and full awareness of their capabilities, Rosemary Hall offers vigorous academic training for leading colleges, with Music, Arts and Dramatics enriching and broadening the curriculum. Integration of subjects, constant personal guidance, and individual attention insure each girl's achieving her goal.

The school also stands for training in leadership through a long established system of self government.

An hour from New York City, in a healthy country environment, a kind of old-world charm in modern, fireproof buildings on the 20-acre estate has its effect in developing an appreciation of beauty.

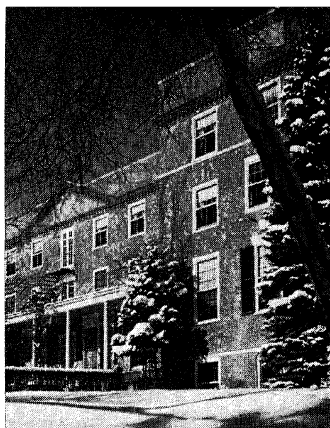

ST. AGNES SCHOOL, ALBANY, NEW YORK

BLANCHE PITTMAN, M.A., L.H.D., Headmistress

Enriched by the traditions and experiences of over four decades, this Preparatory School sends its graduates to leading Women's Colleges. General Courses, Art, and Music are available for the non-college girls. Emphasis is on scholarship, character development, and physical fitness. Country Day Pupils are accepted in the Primary and High School; Boarders in the High School only.

Forty acres of playing fields afford opportunity for varied outdoor sports. A chapel, six classrooms and a fireproof Gymnasium-Auditorium building have been added recently.

SAINT MARGARET'S is an Episcopal school, established in 1865, specializing in college preparatory work and providing country atmosphere on a 32-acre campus within city limits. All students live in one fireproof building.

SAINT MARGARET'S SCHOOL WATERBURY, CONNECTICUT

PAULINE S. FAIRBANKS, A.B., Headmistress

Throughout its history Saint Margaret's graduates have maintained good records at leading colleges.

Special attention is given to the development of the individual girl through careful guidance and sympathetic counsel.

Friendly encouragement prompts the student to take part in the activities of groups such as the Glee Club, Dramatic Club, Language Clubs and Modern Dance Club. The program includes concerts in nearby cities. Occasional informal dances with neighboring boys' schools add variety to weekend recreation.

WESTOVER SCHOOL

MIDDLEBURY, CONNECTICUT

LOUISE BULKLEY DILLINGHAM, Ph.D., Head

Westover School is primarily a college preparatory school providing a sound foundation both in academic work and in character training for girls during their secondary school years.

The School, located in a small New England village, has a 200-acre campus of gardens, woodland, and rolling pastures. The main school building encloses a large grass quadrangle. Other buildings house the science laboratories, the art and music studios, the infirmary, and the 14,500 volume library.

The School offers several plans of study. The core curriculum for all students provides English, Mathematics, a Foreign Language, History and Science. The College Preparatory Course trains students for admission into leading women's colleges and universities throughout the country. The Pre-Professional Course gives training for Nursing, Business, and other specialized schools. There is also a General Course of study for students interested in the arts. Individual and group work in Remedial Reading is given as needed.

The daily chapel services are non-denominational. Frequent meetings of the Faculty-Student Council require student participation in discussing school policies. The many extra-curricular activities provide opportunity for sports, recreation and the development of individual interests.

THE HEWLETT SCHOOL

EAST ISLIP, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK

JEANNETTE M. SULLIVAN, Headmistress

Primarily designed for college preparation, Hewlett's curriculum has ample range and scope to assure full development of each girl's talents and interests. Careful analysis of psychological, intelligence and achievement tests is a basic part of the individual help and guidance each Hewlett girl receives.

The School property is a fine old 24-acre estate on a salt water inlet of Great South Bay, offering healthful country living within two-hours drive from metropolitan New York and its many advantages. In addition to its own excellent facilities, Hewlett has access to the Brookhaven Laboratories, the Milk Testing Bureau, and other scientific and industrial developments.

Recreational activities are many and varied including an extensive program of sports. Campus life is planned so that many hours may be spent in the open, a feature largely responsible for the fine health record Hewlett enjoys.

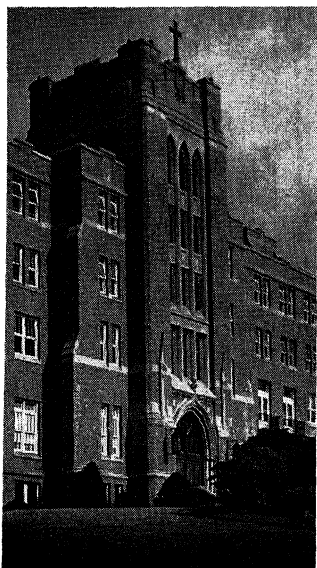

THE MASTERS SCHOOL, DOBBS FERRY, NEW YORK

ELIZABETH BROOKE COCHRAN, M.A., Head Mistress

PAULA DRESSER, M.Ed., Associate Head Mistress

Overlooking the beautiful Hudson Valley 20 miles north of New York, Dobbs offers sound academic training enriched by unusual cultural advantages of a great city. Students are helped to develop their own potentialities and to understand both their capacities and limitations. New interests as well as old are encouraged. On the 94-acre campus there are 9 tennis courts, 2 hockey fields used also for baseball, soccer, and lacrosse.

SISTER MARY VINCENT, O.P., M.A.,
Principal

A resident school for girls, emphasizing character development, sound health and a solid cultural education, combined with preparation for the practical needs of life. Individual progress is stimulated by small classes, homelike personal supervision, and participation in a well-rounded program of school activities including year-round athletics. Fire-proof buildings; beautiful 42-acre campus healthfully situated on the heights overlooking the Hudson; 57 miles north of New York City via Thruway, NYC Railroad or bus lines.

"Quiet country living amidst ivy-covered buildings and shade trees."

GARDEN CITY, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK

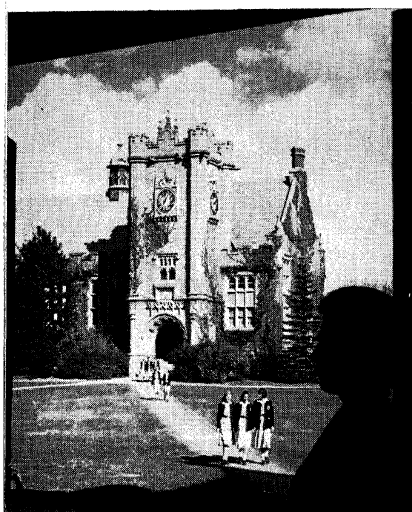

In an attractive residential town 23 miles from New York, this Episcopal School emphasizes sound college preparation with two courses; the intensive College Board Preparatory Course for the major colleges; and the General College Preparatory Course for smaller colleges for women and junior colleges, with a broader emphasis on cultural background. Graduates enter Bryn Mawr, Wellesley, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Radcliffe, Connecticut, Duke, Wheaton, Pembroke, Swarthmore, Michigan, Cornell, Barnard. etc.

Intellectual and spiritual training is balanced by social and athletic programs, dramatics, music and art. New York opera, theatre and ballet are available, and field trips to museums. Community citizenship is stressed. Basketball and apparatus work in the well-equipped gymnasium, riding, modern dance, hockey, archery and tennis, four student publications, eighteen 'interest' clubs, aid in training for happy constructive use of leisure time.

Miss Maude Yeoman is Registrar.

At Emma Willard School residence halls, a modern classroom building, a library with over 12,000 volumes, a separate science building with four complete laboratories and reference library and lecture room, Alumnae Chapel, recreation building, swimming pool, infirmary, playing fields and gardens serve the educational and community needs of 280 residence students and their teachers at Emma Willard.

The Alumnae Chapel

EMMA WILLARD SCHOOL

TROY, NEW YORK

MISS ANNE WELLINGTON, A.B., Head Mistress

MISS CLEMEWELL LAY, A.M., Co-Head Mistress

Founded in 1814, Emma Willard is a college preparatory school. Each year graduates enter over thirty different colleges and a dozen junior colleges and specialized schools. Its curriculum includes a new Plan of Education, introduced in 1947 and now thoroughly tested by students who have attained distinctive achievement in college. The program is based on the needs of the girl of the present day. The curriculum includes integrated courses in the humanities—social studies, English, religion and the fine arts; mathematics and science which have everyday appreciation as well as college preparatory credit; Latin and the modern languages that will meet a student's future needs.

The community life of the school is democratic. The student body, organized into councils with faculty advisers gives the girls, teachers, and administration joint responsibility in the conduct of the school. Cooperation in the care of the household, planning chapel services and welfare work, and many other council functions make a girl aware of the significance of her contribution in the life of the community.

The

THE BEARD SCHOOL

ORANGE, NEW JERSEY

EDITH M. SUTHERLAND, Headmistress

Preserving the best of the school's traditional character as inherited from Miss Beard, the Founder, Miss Sutherland has increased opportunities for independent study and research, particularly in English and history. Library facilities have been improved for increased offerings in history. The school has moved with the times, altering its course to meet the needs of progress.

With a long record of successful academic preparation of girls for college, Beard has established a reputation also for its emphasis on fundamental values of living.

Students are given opportunities to develop civic and social responsibility through offices and student activities in art, music, dramatics, modern dance and intra mural sports. Museums, theaters, and opera in New York provide cultural advantages close at hand.

MORAVIAN SEMINARY FOR GIRLS

GREEN POND, BETHLEHEM, PA.

LILLIE SUZANNAH TURMAN, M.A.,
Headmistress

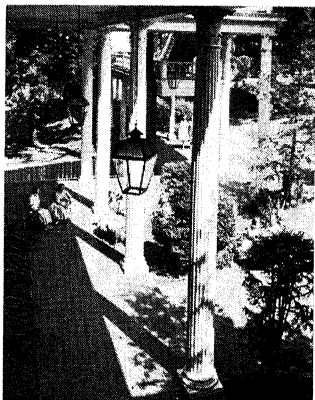

Moravian Seminary for Girls, America's oldest Protestant boarding school for girls, carries on with the sound educational practices of its heritage adapted to the needs of the time.

Located in the charming Pennsylvania countryside, the school offers a well recognized educational program, together with outdoor sports — hockey, tennis, swimming, riding, golf, ice skating. The school has an enviable record of college preparation. More than 95% of its graduates continue their education in well recognized colleges.

Grades 7 through 12 are offered at Moravian, and the school is accredited by the Middle States Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges.

THE GRIER SCHOOL, TYRONE, PENNSYLVANIA

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS C. GRIER, Heads

This all-boarding School, located on 1000 acres in the Alleghany Mts., offers 9th-12th grade College Preparatory and General Courses. Academic standards are high, and graduates attend a wide range of colleges and universities (50 at present).

Guidance is stressed to teach self-discipline and assist girls to adjust to group living. Students are taught to help each other through the Student Council and other organizations.

All sports, including riding, swimming, tennis, fishing, golf, winter sports and team games are offered.

Although the school is over a century old, the buildings and equipment are modern and fireproof. The School operates its own farms and stables.

Linden Hall, a junior college and academy, is the second oldest girls' school in America. Its endowment enables it to combine moderate fees with a personalized education that offers a broad, generous culture and gracious living.

A wide range of sports is offered, and other activities include the Glee Club and the Dramatic Club, as well as riding and hiking.

LINDEN HALL

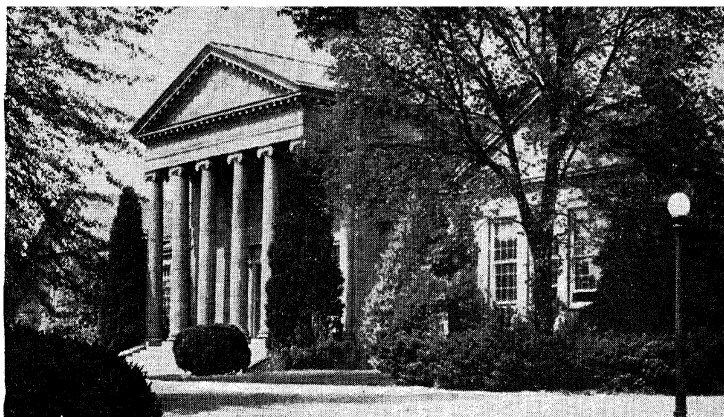

LITITZ, PENNSYLVANIA

BYRON K. HORNE, M.A., D.D., President and Head

The Junior College attracts students who need an intermediate step between high school and senior college as well as those who wish a terminal two-year course. The Academic curriculum is planned for girls who will continue their studies at a senior college, and the Liberal Arts for those who will finish in two years. In addition, programs are offered in Home Economics, Secretarial Science, Medical Secretarial, Fine Arts, Dramatic Arts, and Music. The satisfactory completion of any of these qualifies the student for a diploma.

The Academy for Girls not only gives a thorough preparation for college but also ensures a strong secondary training for those students who are completing their education.

CHARLES E. ELLIS SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

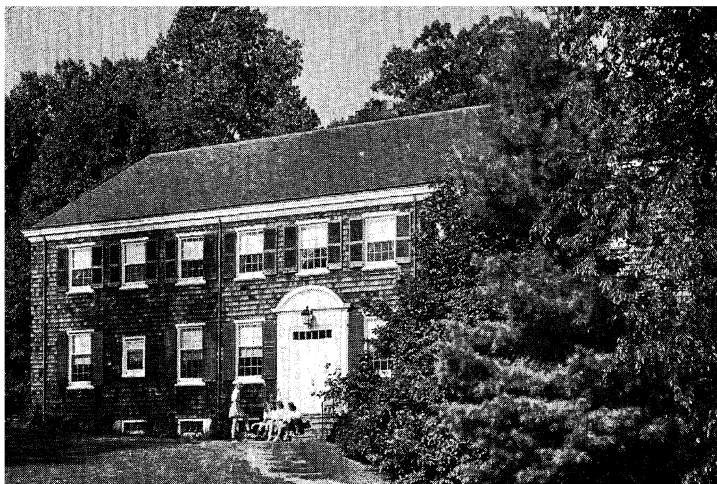

NEWTOWN SQUARE, PENNSYLVANIA

ARNOLD LOOK, M.T.H., PH.D., President

Established in 1910 as a country boarding school for girls, the large campus is located in an attractive suburban area ten miles west of Philadelphia. The central group of stone buildings includes Ellis Hall, the Gymnasium and Auditorium, the Commons, the Infirmary, and six dormitories for Upper School students. Lower School girls live in a separate group of three dormitories near the central buildings. Other facilities include a library of several thousand volumes, art and music studios, nine sound-proofed music practice rooms, extensive playing fields for school sports, an outdoor pool, and a nearby academy where riding is available.

The School is accredited, endowed, non-profit, non-sectarian, and enrolls students from many states and several foreign countries. In addition to preparation for all colleges, major courses are also offered in home economics and secretarial departments. A limited number of scholarships are available for applicants of high ability who live in Philadelphia or one of the four neighboring counties. Residence students are admitted to vacancies in any grade after the fifth, to a capacity of about 60 in the Lower School and 130 in the Upper School.

Strong emphasis is placed on all phases of guidance, special interests and abilities, and high academic standards. Students participate in planning and leading school activities. A busy extra-curricular schedule includes athletics, clubs, entertainments, inter-school dances and other programs with a number of nearby schools for boys, and participation in community organizations, inter-school debating, and organizational conferences.

GARRISON FOREST SCHOOL

GARRISON, MARYLAND

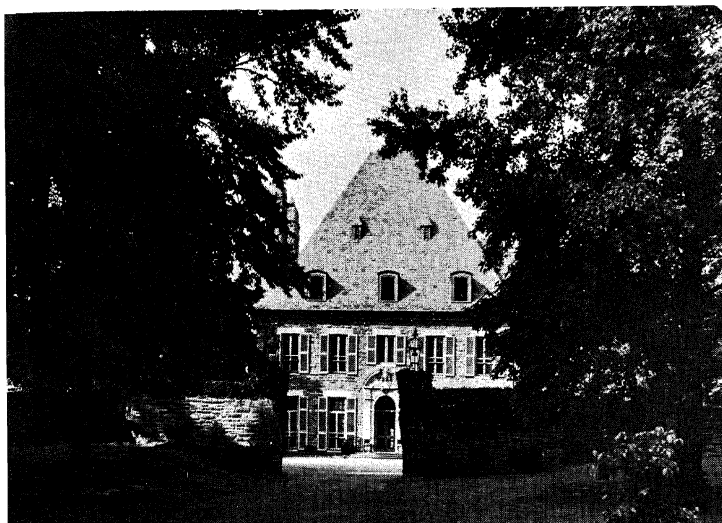

MISS JEAN GILMOR MARSHALL }
MISS NANCY JENKINS OFFUTT. } Head Mistresses

A country school for girls, Garrison Forest was founded in 1910. It is located on a 70-acre campus in the village of Garrison, 12 miles north of Baltimore and at the head of the Green Spring Valley.

In the Lower School which consists of Classes V, VI, VII and VIII, emphasis is placed on a thorough mastery of reading, arithmetic, English grammar and spelling.

In the Upper School, greater importance is attached to work of a more critical nature. Students are encouraged to reason as well as remember.

Student organizations are active; on week ends, students visit Washington and Baltimore; there are extra curricular diversions; all major sports are offered and games are played with neighboring schools. Growing up as the School has, in hunting country, riding has long been a tradition at Garrison Forest.

ST. TIMOTHY'S SCHOOL

STEVENSON, MARYLAND

ELLA ROBINSON WATKINS, A.B., Headmistress

St. Timothy's School, one of the oldest of the college preparatory schools for girls in the United States, is located at Stevenson, Maryland, 9 miles northwest of Baltimore on the ridge above the Green Spring Valley. Situated on 220 acres of rolling fields and woods, the School has new and modern buildings; an outdoor swimming pool; basketball, tennis, and hockey courts; riding trails and ring. Golf and modern dance are available; the athletic program stresses posture.

Small classes give emphasis to developing fundamental skills and awakening intellectual curiosity. The varied courses, and the many interest groups and activities, make a well-balanced program for the development of each girl in a warm informal atmosphere. The high standards of the academic work have been reflected in the large percentage of the graduates of the School who have been admitted to the colleges and universities of their choice, and the success which they have found there.

Concerts, lectures, theatres, and art exhibitions in Baltimore, Washington, and New York City, together with field trips in connection with Art, Current Events, History, and Mathematics to these cities, provide stimulating opportunities for the students.

THE HANNAH MORE ACADEMY

REISTERSTOWN, MARYLAND

CATHERINE O. COLEMAN, M.A.,
Headmistress

"Let cheerfulness abound with industry" is the watchword of this traditional school as it enters its 126th year of continuous operation. It is accredited by the Middle Atlantic States Association of Schools and Colleges.

Fifteen miles from Baltimore in rolling country-side, the school offers two study plans for college preparation. As Maryland's diocesan school for girls, sound spiritual guidance and instruction are correlated with suitable portions of the curriculum in accord with dedication of the School to the Christian way of life.

In keeping with modern conservative educational philosophy, the Honor System, Student Government, field trips, art, music, dramatics, riding, and sports, are all contributing factors to a well-balanced program of growth at the secondary school level.

Affiliated is RICHLEIGH, a coeducational country day school.

NATIONAL CATHEDRAL SCHOOL, WASHINGTON 16, D.C.

Wisconsin and Woodley Road

THE RT. REV. ANGUS DUN, D.D., Bishop of Washington, President

KATHARINE LEE, M.A., Principal

Now in its second half century, this School looks forward to continuing its strong program of college preparatory and general courses. A new academic building has been recently added. Its location on the 58-acre Cathedral Close provides unusual opportunities for outdoor sports and also affords easy access to all that Washington offers in music, the theater, art, and current history.

Characterized by a warm and friendly spirit, the School emphasizes individual growth and responsibility through student organizations, activities, and challenging academic work. Training and experience in Christian education are a vital part of the school life.

MOUNT VERNON Seminary, one of the oldest schools for girls in Washington, will commence its eighty-third year next Fall. Classes are small and the School is characterized by an air of informality and friendliness resulting in a close Student-Faculty relationship. Throughout, there is special emphasis on each individual, her progress as a student and her responsibility as a citizen. The program (ninth through twelfth years) includes sound college preparation, as well as a general course of study offering a more varied curriculum. The majority of its graduates continue their studies in institutions of higher learning.

MOUNT VERNON WASHINGTON 7, D. C.

GEORGE W. LLOYD, M.A., LITT.D., President

Situated on a beautiful 26-acre tract of land on Foxhall Road, easily accessible to all the features of interest connected with the seat of government, the Junior College operates as a distinct unit from Mount Vernon Seminary. The two-year college attempts to stimulate in the student an intellectual interest which will provide a basis for appreciative and intelligent living and for further study.

HOLTON-ARMS SCHOOL 2125 S STREET, WASHINGTON, D.C.

SALLIE E. LURTON, Head Mistress

Holton-Arms enrolls day students from kindergarten through Grade XII, resident students from Grade VIII through XII. The School offers both college preparatory and general courses. Each girl is given individual attention in a program adapted to her needs. Location in residential Washington enables students to take advantage of the cultural and educational opportunities of the Nation's Capital.

CHATHAM HALL, CHATHAM, VIRGINIA

WILLIAM W. YARDLEY, Rector

A college preparatory school for girls, Chatham Hall is in the Piedmont section of Virginia. The location is superb, the equipment excellent.

As Chatham Hall accepts only a limited number of girls each year, it is wise to apply at an early date.

Present enrollment includes girls from 30 states. Nearly all graduates go on to study in the well known Eastern women's colleges where they have made an enviable reputation.

There are 350 acres in the school property, including gardens, athletic fields, a spacious campus shaded by splendid trees, and one hundred acres of woodlands.

THE MADEIRA SCHOOL, GREENWAY, VIRGINIA

This School, founded in 1906 by Miss Madeira, for resident and day pupils, prepares girls for leading colleges for women and provides a liberal education for those not wishing to pursue a college course. It is situated on 380 acres along the Potomac River 12 miles from Washington. Student government trains each pupil to be a responsible member of the community; she learns to judge and regulate her own conduct with a view to the welfare and happiness of others as well as her own. The girls take a lively interest in sports. A stable with riding horses is maintained.

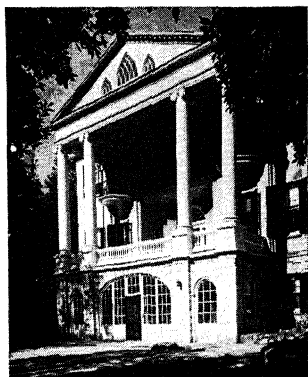

SALEM ACADEMY, WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

MARY A. WEAVER, M.A.,
Principal

Founded in 1772, Salem Academy has the enviable record of 185 years service in education. Fully accredited, it successfully prepares students for colleges admitting by certificate or College Board Examinations; 99.3% of graduates of past 10 years have entered college. Outstanding music instruction is available to Academy Students at the nearby Salem College School of Music. Academic, social, and spiritual growth of the individual is the concern of the School, and effective guidance carries over with gratifying results into the college and community life of the alumnae. Modern, well-equipped buildings are on a beautiful 56-acre campus where outdoor sports are enjoyed.

ASHLEY HALL

CHARLESTON, S. C.

CAROLINE PARDUE, A.B., M.A.,
Head Mistress

This resident and day school for girls, now in its 49th year, enjoys the unusual advantage of being located in one of the most beautiful and historic cities of the South. It is owned and operated by a non-profit corporation, the Ashley Hall Foundation.

The College Preparatory Course is fully accredited and the majority of graduates enter leading women's colleges. A General Course is also offered which includes Art, Music, and Sewing.

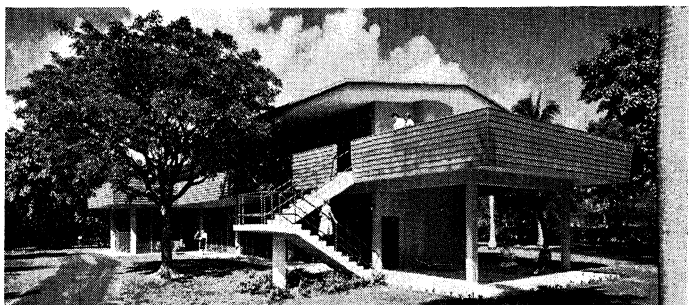

The climate is ideal for year round sports; tennis, riding, and swimming are among those offered. Trips are made to nearby beaches, gardens, and places of historic interest.

BARTRAM SCHOOL, JACKSONVILLE, FLORIDA

OLGA L. PRATT, M.A., Director

In twenty years of successful operation, Bartram has developed a program designed to appeal to the girl who wishes excellent academic preparation for college—a cultural background of literature, art, music, and drama, and good techniques of study—together with experiences in democratic living, a variety of outdoor sports, and a rich and disciplined social life.

EVERGLADES SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, MIAMI, FLORIDA

GERTRUDE C. PEIRCE, M.A., Headmistress

Located on a ridge overlooking Biscayne Bay, this day school for girls provides a balanced program of high academic standards for college preparation with sports, school and community service, and social experiences. Varied outdoor activities take full advantage of Miami's climate, and cultivation of the spirit is further facilitated by the school's unusually beautiful grounds and the inspiring architecture of the buildings.

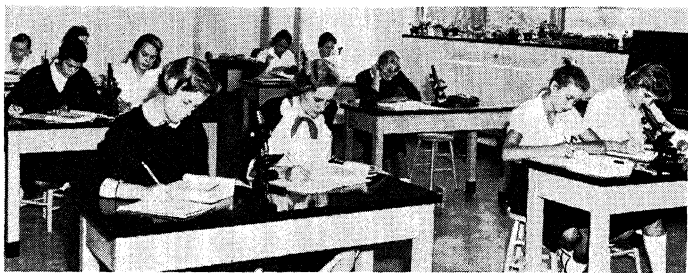

MISS HARRIS' FLORIDA SCHOOL, STUART, FLORIDA

JULIA FILLMORE HARRIS, B.A.,
Principal

Moved in 1957 to a beautiful location on the St. Lucie River, across from Stuart, 100 miles north of Miami, the School continues to fulfill its original objectives. The quiet, friendly, outdoor life prepares students for college and for the adult world.

Building soundly on established foundations of hard work and respect for moral values, yet with pioneering spirit to investigate new ideas and adopt those that are proved good, the School offers programs designed individually to fulfill each student's academic and personal needs.

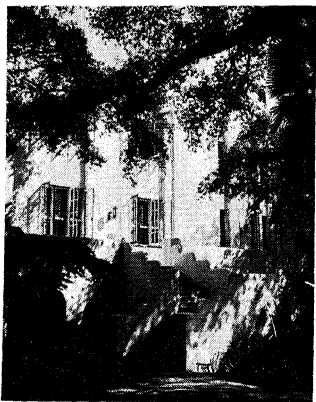

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL, SEWANEE, TENN.

SISTER CHRISTABEL, Sister Superior, C.S.M.

Saint Mary's, an Episcopal School under the direction of the Sisters of Saint Mary, prepares the student for the college of her choice. Classes are small; they begin with the ninth grade and go through the twelfth grade. Sisters and teachers do their utmost to bring out the best in each girl so that after graduation she may take her place in the world of today, a Christian woman with high ideals. The enrollment is limited to sixty girls.

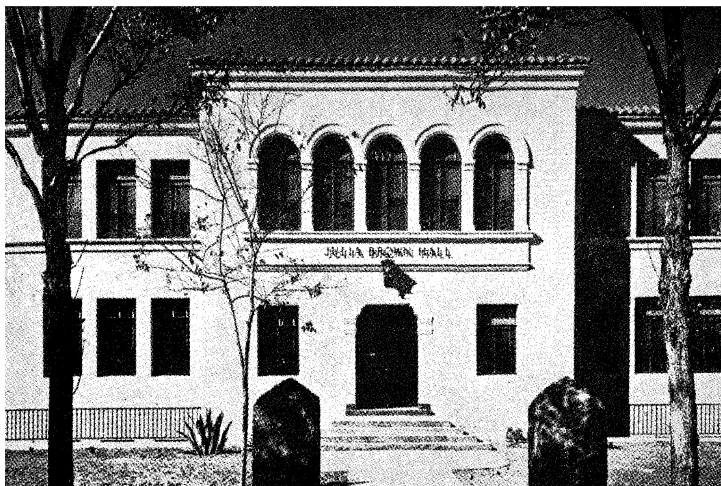

ST. MARY'S HALL, SAN ANTONIO 12, TEXAS

BEATRICE McDERMOTT, B.A., M.A.,
Head Mistress

Strongly Christian in character, Saint Mary's Hall offers thorough college preparation, year round participation in a variety of sports, and school activities which develop leadership for later responsibilities. The school motto, "Teach Us Delight in Simple Things", is exemplified in the various school programs of the year where cleverness and originality are emphasized rather than elaborate costumes or settings.

The Resident Department, limited in number, has a friendly, home-like atmosphere and encourages participation, self-reliance, and mutual cooperation. Outdoor swimming is enjoyed through the fall and spring; tennis and horseback riding are year round sports.

RADFORD SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

EL PASO, TEXAS

LUCINDA DEL. TEMPLIN, Ph.D., Principal

Formerly El Paso School, this Boarding and Day School for Girls limits its resident enrollment to insure a real home life. $500,000.00 has been spent since 1931 on improvements and equipment. A new dining hall was dedicated in September.

Accredited by the Southern Association and the State Education Department, Radford offers College Preparatory and General Academic courses. Advanced work is offered in Music, Art, Dramatics, and secretarial.

The School is in a Mountain Pass, 3722 feet high, on the outskirts of El Paso. Proximity to Mexico, invigorating climate, brilliant sunshine, outdoor classes, sports, camping, and riding also attract.

The mutual cooperation of a big family prevails.

COLUMBUS SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, COLUMBUS, OHIO

ARLEIGH D. RICHARDSON III, B.A., M.A., PH.D., Headmaster

This School is widely known through the excellent college records of its graduates; many have won scholarships in leading colleges. Small classes and an able faculty permit individual attention. The atmosphere of the School is distinguished and cosmopolitan.

Strong departments are: art, music, and dramatics. The year round sports program — hockey, tennis, soccer, riding, basketball, bowling — completes the vigorous school life.

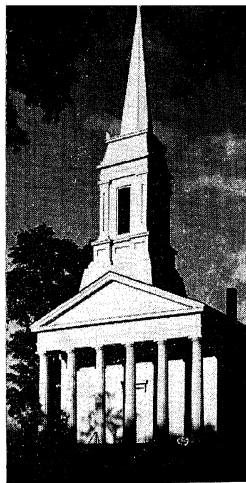

TUDOR HALL SCHOOL

3171 N. MERIDIAN ST., INDIANAPOLIS, INDIANA

I. HILDA STEWART, A.B., Ed.M., Principal

This Accredited School has its Certificate accepted by all colleges so admitting. Excellent Preparatory Courses for Eastern Colleges. General Courses are supplemented by Music, Art, Dramatics, Dancing, and Sports. Physical fitness is emphasized. The Residence Department provides a well-balanced schedule of work and recreation with opportunity to attend concerts, theatres, and art exhibits. The aim of Tudor Hall is to establish for its students a way of thinking and of living that will fit them to take their places in the complicated world of today.

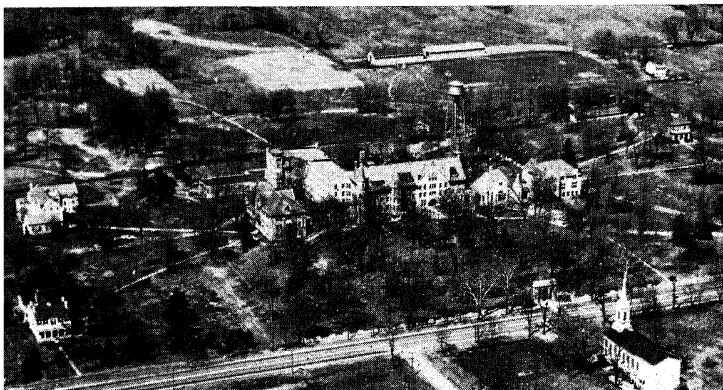

MONTICELLO COLLEGE, founded in 1835, offers two years of college education, with a sound core of liberal arts subjects. Fully accredited by the Northwestern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges, its graduates are accepted by leading colleges and universities. Monticello seeks to develop in every student a sense of responsibility for her own and for the common welfare. Students who have learned to develop their leisure-time skills and social competence through the Monticello program receive more than their normal share of offices, honors and invitations to join sororities and other organizations in the four-year colleges and universities to which they transfer.

MONTICELLO ALTON, ILLINOIS

RUSSELL T. SHARPE, PH.D., President

MONTICELLO PREPARATORY SCHOOL offers a program of instruction primarily for students preparing for college entrance; a more general and flexible program can be arranged to meet special needs. Monticello welcomes the student who can benefit from the individual attention to her interests and talents which a small enrollment and a friendly, interested faculty make possible. 275 acres of wooded campus, and proximity to St. Louis with its cultural resources, give Monticello students opportunity to learn to appreciate the advantages of both urban and rural living.

KINGSWOOD SCHOOL CRANBROOK

BLOOMFIELD HILLS, MICHIGAN

MARION E. GOODALE, B.A., M.A., Head Mistress

This School for girls is one of five educational institutions at Cranbrook, the gifts of Mr. and Mrs. George G. Booth. It is located on Cranbrook Lake, 20 miles north of Detroit. Day students, grades 7-12; boarding 9-12. Thorough college preparation is offered in small classes with exceptional facilities for study in Fine and Applied Arts, science and dramatics. Sports program.

ROYCEMORE SCHOOL EVANSTON, ILLINOIS

CORNELIA A. TOMES, PH.D., Headmistress

Roycemore, a private day school for girls, pre-kindergarten through high school, offers a well integrated academic program. Its uncrowded conditions make possible individual attention to each girl's needs. The School encourages participation by all in its many activities such as dramatics, art, music, athletics, student government, publication work and social activities. Northwestern University is adjacent to Roycemore.

Built high on a bluff above the Straight River, overlooking the rolling lands of southern Minnesota, Saint Mary's Hall was originally a school for the pioneer west and maintains that pioneer spirit in a modern setting. Located in Faribault, it is only 50 miles south of Saint Paul and Minneapolis on the Jefferson Highway.

SAINT MARY'S HALL FARIBAULT, MINNESOTA

MARTHA ROBBINS, A.B., M.S., Head Mistress

Saint Mary's Hall, an Episcopal boarding school for girls, was founded in 1866 by the Right Reverend Henry Benjamin Whipple. It is one of the oldest schools for girls west of the Mississippi,—the only one in the northwest wholly boarding in character. Christian ideals are an integral part of the daily life in this school founded "to cultivate the mind and heart, to educate for time and eternity".

Saint Mary's is the Diocesan school of the Episcopal church for Minnesota and North Dakota and is accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools; its certificate admits to any college or university in this association.

This preparatory secondary school offers four years of high school. The curriculum is flexible enough for individual needs, broad enough to prepare for college, and rigid enough in standards to pass college preparatory regulations.

KEMPER HALL, KENOSHA, WISCONSIN

MOTHER MARY AMBROSE, Principal

ANNA J. MORSE, Academic Head

A distinguished Episcopal Church School drawing students from 18 states, Kemper Hall gives thorough college preparation, supplemented by work in music, art, dramatics and domestic science, and a full sports program. Both Upper and Lower Schools maintain high scholastic standards. Graduates have won scholarships in Wellesley, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, Vassar, Barnard, Rockford, and Oberlin.

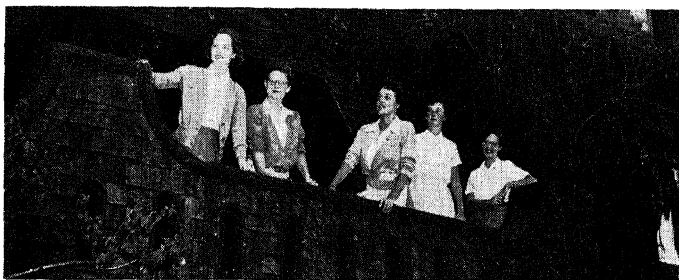

ANOAKIA SCHOOL, ARCADIA, CALIFORNIA

MRS. MARGARET C. WINFIELD, Headmistress

MISS MARGARET E. HILL, Dean of Academic Studies

Anoakia was founded to meet the growing need in the West for a country boarding and day school that would adhere to high scholastic standards and provide the advantages of a cultural environment. Enrollment is limited in order that each student may be given individual consideration. The faculty is chosen for their professional training in specific fields, their understanding of personality, individual aptitudes, and interest in guidance and development of students. Anoakia, through its carefully planned curriculum, prepares its students for entrance to leading colleges and universities throughout the United States.

THE ANNA HEAD SCHOOL, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

DANIEL DEWEY, A.B., M.A. }
CATHERINE H. DEWEY, A.B. } Heads

The School, established in 1887, is a resident and day school offering grades 1-12, in the university city of Berkeley across the Bay from San Francisco. The School provides a balanced program of academic work, physical education, and activities. Student government is stressed. Accredited to eastern and western institutions which accept candidates by certificate, preparation is provided for C.E.E.B. examinations.

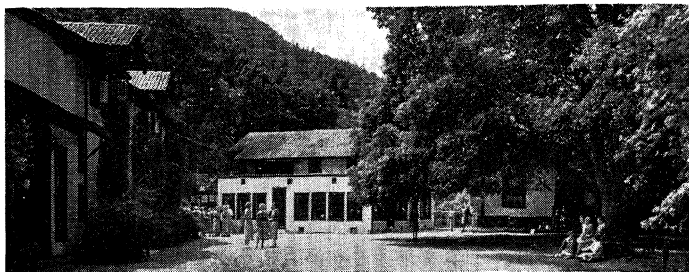

THE BISHOP'S SCHOOL LA JOLLA, CALIFORNIA

ROSAMOND E. LARMOUR, A.B.,
A.M., Headmistress

This Episcopal Church School offers resident and day girls in grades VII through XII spiritual, moral, intellectual, and physical training of the highest standard. College Preparatory courses are supplemented by work in Dramatics, Music, and Art. Individual attention is stressed. Graduates attend colleges and universities all over the country.

The girls study, play, and often eat outdoors. Ample facilities are provided for all sports including riding, swimming, and tennis.

KATHARINE BRANSON SCHOOL, ROSS, CALIFORNIA

In addition to the college preparatory curriculum, the school offers a variety of activities suited to the promoting of individual interests and talents. The symphony, theatre, and art museums of San Francisco are also made available to the students. Of paramount importance in all phases of the school's work is the honor system, a creative force in developing personal responsibility and integrity.

THE SARAH DIX HAMLIN SCHOOL

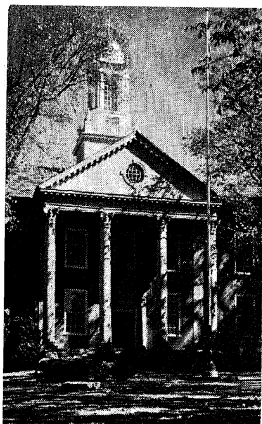

SAN FRANCISCO 15, CALIF.

EDITH A. MEREEN, A.B., M.A., Principal

The oldest non-sectarian school for girls in California, Hamlin has kept pace with modern times all the way from Gold Rush days to the present maintaining the rich atmosphere which is San Francisco's heritage. A day and resident school for girls — strictly college preparatory — all instruction and courses are planned to prepare girls for the college of their choice, to help them make a satisfactory adjustment to environment, and develop confidence in attacking new problems. Each pupil is guided through definite training to form good habits of work and is encouraged to assume responsibility in the care of her possessions, in the performance of tasks, and in considering the interests of others. Hamlin offers Kindergarten, Grades I through VIII and High School I through 4. Athletic program includes modern dancing, fencing, tennis, swimming, and riding. Extracurricular activities embrace various clubs, student government, yearbook and newspaper, and many special and traditional events. (Residence for grades 9-12 only).

COEDUCATIONAL
SCHOOLS

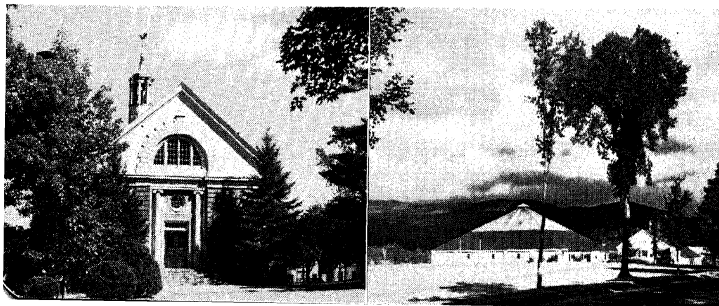

GOULD ACADEMY, a coeducational school with accommodations for boarding and day students, is now well embarked on its second century. Situated in the picturesque hill country of Oxford County, Gould offers a normal, healthful, well-rounded school life under careful supervision in order to give each student opportunity to develop his whole personality.

GOULD ACADEMY BETHEL, MAINE

ELWOOD F. IRELAND, B.S., M.A., Head Master

The Academy prepares its students for college and other institutions of higher learning, and through the foundation of correct habits of thought and action, fits them to face wisely the problems that will confront them in later life. While undenominational, Gould endeavors to inculcate reverence for spiritual matters.

Five separate courses of study, designed to meet the specific needs of the various students, are offered — each for a 4-year period: College Preparatory, Commercial, Home Economics, Manual Arts, and General. Full athletic and recreational programs, distinctly separate for boys and girls, are under the guidance of trained leaders. Extracurricular activities are pursued through clubs — boys' and girls' glee, varsity glee, photography, foreign language, homemaking, — plus the band and several dramatic productions each year.

From its site on a high hill in the township of Readfield, Kents Hill School overlooks the valleys and lakes of the Belgrade region. The School's chief playground is the out-of-doors. Widespread playing fields, an outing club cabin and a lake for sailing and swimming are part of the Kents Hill campus. The long Maine winter helps to make the school a center for winter sports.

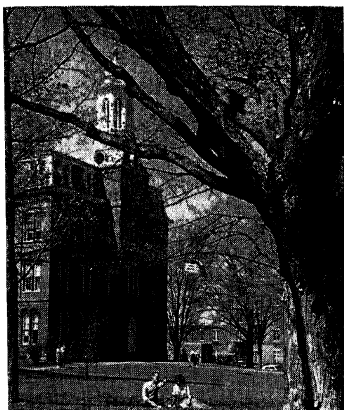

KENTS HILL SCHOOL

KENTS HILL, MAINE

WILLIAM WARREN DUNN, A.B., M.A., Head Master

Building on the strong foundation laid by its founder, Luther Sampson, Kents Hill—a coeducational college preparatory school—today offers a well-rounded and attractive school life in the luxury of simplicity. Through its carefully planned curricula, administered by an able and versatile faculty, the School seeks to develop social maturity in its students; to strengthen their power to think clearly; and to foster a spiritual atmosphere which inspires faith and courage. Its high scholastic atmosphere has been recognized by the establishment of a Cum Laude Society Chapter.

In addition to the college preparatory course, the School offers Secretarial and General Courses and covers four years of high school and eighth grade.

All students participate in the many sports. The School's 50-acre campus provides for football, soccer, field hockey, basketball, tennis, baseball, track, ice hockey, and skiing. Students publish a school paper and maintain several clubs—Crafts, Camera, Outing — as well as a choir and a Little Theatre.

HAMPSHIRE COUNTRY SCHOOL

RINDGE, NEW HAMPSHIRE

HENRY CURTIS PATEY, B.A., M.A., Director

At high altitude, in the Monadnock region, Hampshire Country School occupies a 1900 acre estate, 65 miles from Boston. Students are able to take full advantage of the varied terrain, including a producing farm, three private lakes, and woods and streams. The main buildings and residences are supplemented by cottages, studio and shop facilities.

This coeducational boarding school for children 8 to 14, of superior endowment, but overly sensitive, academically blocked, or emotionally immature, has a faculty and staff specially trained to help them overcome their personality problems.

AT HAMPSHIRE COUNTRY SCHOOL, happy living, low pressure discipline and satisfaction in fulfilling the special interests and the personality needs of each student are foremost.

Academic work is suited to the pupil, and sound training in fundamentals is combined with the development of individual expression.

Extra-curricular activities, including '49 Gold Rush, Paul Bunyan Day, Winter Carnival, Junior Olympics, Country Fair, Riding, Dog Sledding, Farm Animals, and Camping, develop both group cooperation and individual self-reliance.

There are four semi-independent summer program units: a rugged camp, summer school, automotive mechanics, and farm program.

HIGH MOWING SCHOOL, WILTON, NEW HAMPSHIRE

BEULAH HEPBURN EMMET,
Principal

Old New England buildings on a 150-acre farm have been remodelled into a gracious and attractive home and school for boys and girls 14 to 18 years old.

The educational program is based on Rudolf Steiner's Waldorf School plan. Work in the main subjects is arranged in three-week units.

Painting, music, Eurythmy and drama, ceramics, shop, weaving, printing, wood carving are integrated in the program and may be taken for credit. College requirements are fully met.

Winter sports, country activities, group projects and garden and greenhouse work, as well as varsity sports, make up the outdoor program.

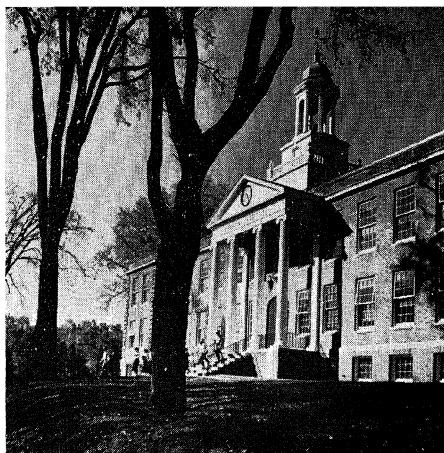

THE PUTNEY SCHOOL, PUTNEY, VERMONT

HENRY BENSON ROCKWELL, Director

Putney, a coeducational college preparatory boarding school, combines high academic standards with a varied program in athletics, work jobs, and the arts. Founded in 1935 by Mrs. Carmelita Hinton, a recognized leader in secondary education, the School occupies 950 acres of farm and woodland in southeastern Vermont.

Strict college preparatory work is supplemented by such activities as orchestra, choral singing, art, drama, dance, shop, electronics, farming, riding, skiing, and team games.

The School is located on an elevation overlooking the beautiful Passumpsic River valley with green Burke Mountain a few miles away.

LYNDON CENTER, VERMONT

ROBERT K. LEWIS, B.S., Headmaster

Chartered in 1867, Lyndon Institute offers 30 boarding boys and 30 boarding girls the opportunity to share in the school, home, and community life of 320 day students in this friendly Vermont village.

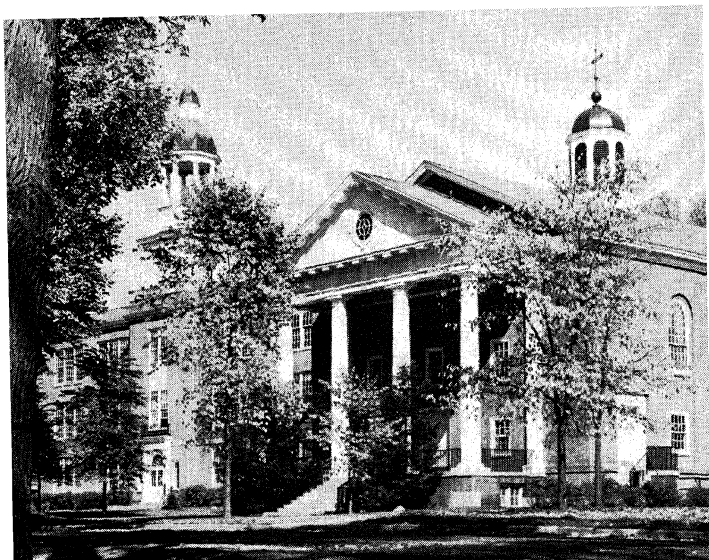

The well-organized academic program, which is aimed at thorough college preparation, stresses good study habits, health, and discipline; and provides for close attention to each student's needs. While primarily preparing its students for college (with its graduates attending many of the leading colleges), Lyndon also affords guidance for those who seek vocations, with opportunities in Homemaking, Business, Vocational Agriculture, Building Trades, and Auto Mechanics. Also offered are: Art, Music, Driver Education, Orchestra, Glee Clubs, Press Club, Debating, Dramatics, and a full program of athletics with its complete calendar of sports.

While strictly non-sectarian, Lyndon encourages spiritual growth among the students.

Lyndon Institute, a pioneer in the development of winter sports, conducted its first Winter Carnival in 1925.

SAINT JOHNSBURY ACADEMY

ESTABLISHED IN 1842

ST. JOHNSBURY, VERMONT

ELWIN H. TWOMBLY, A.B., Ed.M., Head Master

This sound old New England school where Calvin Coolidge prepared for Amherst, is beautifully situated on an elevation almost midway between the Green and White Mountains.

Brantview, the girls' dormitory, is on an attractive 22-acre wooded estate. Fairbanks, the boys' dormitory, named for the family who endowed the School, is on Main Street adjacent to the academic buildings.

Fully accredited College Preparatory and Business Courses, as well as special courses suited for individual needs, are offered. An enlarged curriculum of social activities and week-end programs offers a normal way of living for boys and girls, and helps to build fine and wholesome relationships between them. A new athletic field and a new science building have just been completed.

The tuition at Saint Johnsbury is $1300.

Small Classes

CUSHING ACADEMY

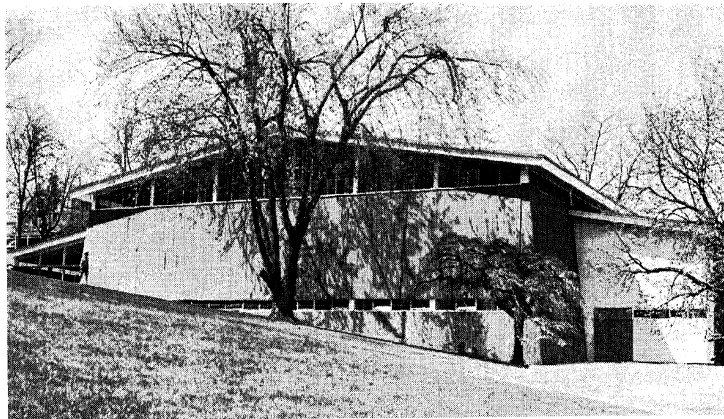

ASHBURNHAM, MASSACHUSETTS

RALPH O. WEST, Ed.M., Headmaster

Cushing Academy is in its 83rd year. Its country campus of more than 30 acres lies 57 miles northwest of Boston. Not far from the modern highway, Route 2, it is little more than an hour's driving distance from Greater Boston communities. It is equally accessible to other points in New England.

Cushing is a college preparatory school, its extra-curricular program is enriched with courses in art, music, drama, and journalism. The extra-curricular activities provide ample opportunity for a happy, healthful school life.

The New Gymnasium

COMMONWEALTH SCHOOL,

151 COMMONWEALTH AVENUE, BOSTON 16, MASS.

CHARLES MERRILL, Headmaster

Commonwealth School opens September 1958 as a coeducational, college preparatory, day school in the Back Bay district of Boston. For the first year grades will run VIII, IX, X; (XI and XII will be added in successive years).

The goal of Commonwealth is to restore good secondary schooling to the city as an environment more stimulating and more realistic than the suburbs, and to establish a school that will combine educational efficiency — thorough instruction in mathematics, foreign languages, and the use of clear, accurate English — with a sense of cultural richness, an appreciation of literature, science and history for their own sake. This is directed toward the building of civilized, self-reliant, independent human beings, — boys and girls who know who they are and what they stand for. The faculty is young but experienced, well educated and well paid.

Full sports program includes sailing, soccer, basketball, fencing, swimming, tennis. Music and art are also offered.

THE KINGSLEY SCHOOL, BOSTON, MASS.

LOWELL V. KINGSLEY, S.B., Ed.M., Director

EDITH H. KINGSLEY, A.B., A.M., Remedial Supervisor

The student at Kingsley School is close to his teacher. Whether he is in the small class group or in a remedial room outside the class to receive special attention, he can count on a skilled helping hand.

The student's program is planned to focus his energies on the subjects of lowest achievement, but allows him to proceed at his own pace in his stronger subjects.

High interest is maintained through colorful projects, committee work, debates and free discussions, student newspapers for current events, and visual aids, including moving pictures.

CAMBRIDGE ACADEMY

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS

GAETAN R. AIELLO, A.B., Amherst, M.A., Univ. of Ill.,
M.A., Ph.D., Harvard, Head Master

Distinguished for its home-like atmosphere and expert teachers, the Academy emphasizes studies and study habits that prepare for effective college work.

The Summer Session (established in 1936) offers intensive preparation in all high school subjects covering a complete year's work with full credit. The Summer School is conducted by the regular staff of experienced men teachers.

Small classes permit a conference type of instruction in a curriculum covering all secondary school work required by leading Colleges and Technical Schools.

The drama club is an integral part of the curriculum of the Academy. Plays are given to inculcate correct habits of speech, to improve the personal efficiency in oral expression, to develop a more effective means of conveying the speaker's personality, to add charm with a better sense of posture, and to create a drawing room poise.

MANTER HALL SCHOOL

JOHN C. HALL, Head Master

Founded in 1886 by William Whiting Nolen, well known to many generations of Harvard men for his efficient and successful methods of instruction, Manter Hall is one of the oldest and best known unendowed schools in America. An exceptional curriculum prepares boys and girls for College Entrance. Special courses in remedial and developmental reading are offered to all students whose reading speed or comprehension is below overage.

The School offers (1) a regular secondary school curriculum, (2) a special course of small class and private instruction, (3) intensive preparation for Annapolis and West Point.

The School enjoys a high reputation for successfully overcoming individual difficulties. Each instructor is a specialist and has an exhaustive knowledge of complete requirements for College Entrance in his subject.

The building, designed for the unusual purposes of Manter Hall, offers dormitory accommodations. Classrooms and laboratories are small, intended for Manter Hall's small group teaching method. The school is open throughout the year and students may enter from time to time when facilities permit.

Manter Hall has a summer boarding school for girls at Cape Cod.

WINDSOR MOUNTAIN SCHOOL

DR. GERTRUD BONDY, Director

HEINZ E. BONDY, Headmaster

The School offers the best European educational and cultural experience with American educational contributions.

Boys and girls 12-17 are held to high standards while preparing for college. In all courses critical faculties are stimulated, standards of judgment solidly grounded and related to actual living.

Fluency and correctness in spoken French and German may be expected after attendance at the School for the four high school years.

THE BEMENT SCHOOL

DEERFIELD, MASS.

MISS KATHARINE F. BARTLETT

MRS. MARY H. DREXLER, Directors

In classes of 10 or 12, children benefit from the all-day program of this Boarding and Country Day School. Under the guidance of a competent faculty, boys and girls are encouraged to develop their own personalities through self-initiative and at a rate according to capacities. From Nursery through the Elementary Grades, students learn to cooperate, to be independent, and to live happily in a group. Baseball, softball, soccer, basketball and ice hockey, are the team sports. Tennis is available. Skiing and skating are major winter sports. Activities include Shop, Art, Choir, Dancing, Ballet, and instrumental Music.

THE TOWER SCHOOL, MARBLEHEAD, MASSACHUSETTS

MRS. LEOPOLD R. MICHEL,

Director

Tower School's motto and guiding principle is Education for Living, defined as the wholesome development of mental, emotional and physical resources. With small classes and individual attention, the School offers an enriched curriculum in French, music, art, and drama. Planned sports develop co-ordination and team play.

Pre-school curriculum is aimed at developing the art of group living; Primary years imbue pupils with disciplines of formal work; by the Intermediate and Junior High years, good study habits, concentration, and breadth of vision lead to maturer academic interests. The School magazine, to which each student contributes, develops literary values and business judgment.

THAYER ACADEMY

SOUTH BRAINTREE, MASS.

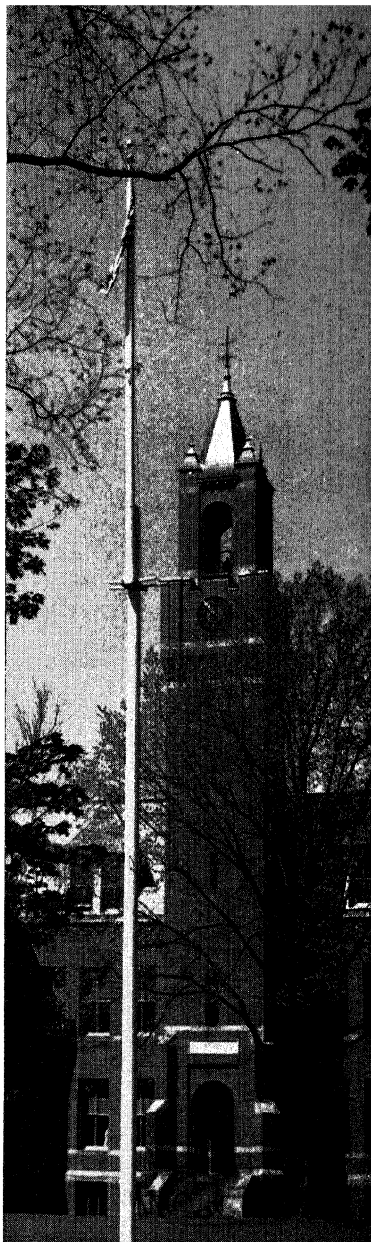

GORDON O. THAYER, A.B., Ed.M.,
Ed.D., Head Master

In 1876, Brig.-Gen. Sylvanus Thayer, distinguished "Father of West Point," founded Thayer Academy to offer youth the opportunity "to rise through the pursuit of duty, industry, and honor from small beginnings to honorable achievement." The Thayer ideal rests on the basis of hard work and development of self-reliance, and recognizes no distinctions except those of character. Democratic, with moderate tuition, it offers 20 competitive scholarships yearly.

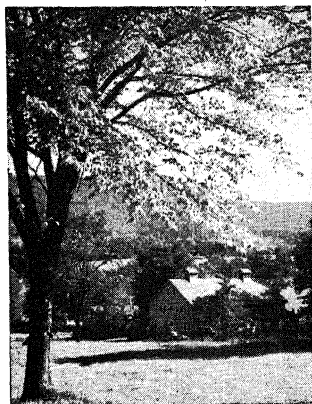

A complete program from Nursery School to College is offered in this noted day school. Thayerlands is an elementary division where 200 boys and girls are offered sound instruction in the fundamentals and are prepared for exacting work in preparatory school.

Thayer Academy, where over 300 boys and girls are enrolled, is the preparatory division from which nearly all graduates go on to college.

Graduates have entered leading colleges and universities and are leaders in civic, science and business fields.

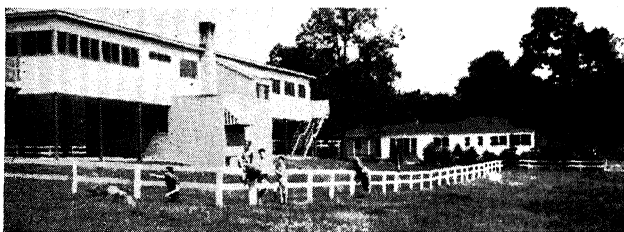

BUXTON SCHOOL WILLIAMSTOWN, MASS.

ELLEN GEER SANGSTER,
BENJAMIN G. C. FINCKE,
Co-Directors

This four-year boarding school for boys and girls offers a College Preparatory curriculum with opportunities for advanced study in Social Sciences, Mathematics, and the Arts; creative writing, music, art and drama.

An active work program, interscholastic sports and student government afford a well rounded program to all students.

CHERRY LAWN SCHOOL, DARIEN, CONNECTICUT

DR. BORIS B. BOGOSLOVSKY } Directors

This coeducational boarding and day school for children 11-18, on 28-acre campus 41 miles from New York City, stresses development of individual abilities and well-rounded personality. Thorough college preparation is provided through flexible, broad academic curriculum with music, art, dramatics, dance, athletics, and riding. A large faculty and small groups of the same social age provide unusual opportunities for instruction and creative work. Graduates' college records prove the value of Cherry Lawn's educational philosophy and programs.

THE ARNOLD SCHOOL

EAST PEMBROKE, MASSACHUSETTS

NATHAN P. ARNOLD, A.B., Head Master

Working together, studying together, playing together, the students of this "school on a farm" achieve a sense of fulfillment, of competence, of self-reliance that prepares them for either college or the earning of a livelihood.

Academic fundamentals, including both college preparatory and general programs, are strengthened by opportunities in home economics, mechanics, dramatics, and other meaningful activities. Graduates have made successful careers at many leading colleges and universities.

All students participate in the farm program, — in the gardening, in the care and feeding of cows, pigs and chickens, in forestry, and even in the actual construction and maintenance of buildings. Teachers and pupils have direct responsibility for the success of the community life. In addition to the program of education, all have chores which are regarded as important in the total educational processes.

Non-competitive recreations, including boating, swimming, tennis, skiing, dances, puppetry, and varying projects serve to develop a feeling of joy in being and doing with others.

Here, boys and girls from six to eighteen mature in a wholesome, satisfying atmosphere that stimulates growth of the mind, body, and spirit. Discriminating minds will develop for themselves the strength to profit from the manifold demands of modern life.

READING SERVICES, INC.

GREENWICH, CONN.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

PLEASANTVILLE, NEW YORK

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.

KENNETH P. BALDRIDGE, Director

READING SERVICES offer an intensive individualized Developmental Reading Program for secondary school and college students. Through the Reading Services Program fair-to-good readers increase their comprehension, sharpen their concentration, improve their organization and retention of material read — while greatly increasing their reading speed. This Developmental Reading Program is designed for students who have mastered basic reading skills and desire to develop their silent reading ability to a superior level.

Students receive individualized instruction from a skilled Reading Services Counselor; practise on individual training equipment; and use a wide range of tests and other training materials prepared from secondary school and college textbooks including biology, chemistry, history, physics and mathematics. "The Techniques of Reading", co-authored by the Director of Reading Services Inc., and currently used in reading programs in more than one hundred colleges, is also used in this program.

During the school year Reading Services carries out developmental reading programs at independent secondary schools and colleges as well as at the Reading Services training centers in New York City, Greenwich, and Beverly Hills. When training is carried out at a secondary school or college, the training sessions conform with the regularly scheduled class periods. Training at the Reading Services training centers is on an appointment basis. Summer training is available at several schools and in a number of cities.

Brochure sent on request.

THE HAITHCOCK SCHOOL

GREENWICH, CONN.

MARY DARE HAITHCOCK, B.S., M.A., Ed.D., President

The aims and objectives of The Haithcock School are formulated on a philosophy of education designed to prepare boys and girls for college under the most favorable conditions. Through diagnostic study of reading and learning capacities, a program is planned for each student including corrective teaching when required.

Located on a 20-acre site in the Rock Ridge section of Greenwich, Haithcock provides a broad and varied educational program based upon a knowledge of each student's academic achievements, aptitudes, interests, personality, health, and physical capabilities. Classes consist of one to six students in order that each may receive special attention. Faculty members are selected because of their qualifications and experience to promote the ideals and beliefs fundamental to the School.

The academic curriculum, beginning at the fourth grade level where reading, spelling, composition, literature, penmanship, arithmetic, science, geography, history are taught; extends through the senior high school which offers English, reading, speech, mathematics, history, science, languages, geography and art. Secondary school students are given a thorough preparation for entrance to colleges and universities.

THE WATERFORD COUNTRY SCHOOL

RFD #1, Quaker Hill, Connecticut

Tel. No. GIBson 3-9820

THE BUCKINGHAM SCHOOL

22 Buckingham Road, Brooklyn, New York

Tel. No. BUckminster 4-7400

These schools provide for the emotionally and intellectually retarded child the educational, vocational, psychological and medical services necessary for a positive adjustment to a life of wholesome daily activities and relationships. Skilled instruction and guidance are adapted to each child's emotional and intellectual needs, and are given individually and in small groups after each child is studied and a program arranged to fit his capacities. The Schools' qualified teachers, counselors, supervisors, psychologists, nurses and consulting physicians work in close cooperation with personal physicians and psychologists.

Since work with the exceptional child is both individualized and specialized, enrollments may be made at any time. The fee is dependent upon the problem involved. A number of part-time scholarships are available.

WATERFORD — a country school — offers year-round educational facilities. Kindergarten, grades I-X — Homemaking, manual training, agriculture, social and recreational activities, practical training.

BUCKINGHAM — a day school — ideally located on spacious grounds adjoining Prospect Park, is equipped with facilities for outdoor and indoor educational activities, and provides transportation to Brooklyn, Manhattan, Queens and Nassau. Buckingham also offers a summer school and day camp.

CAMP WATERFORD — a summer camp for exceptional children — modern and well-equipped, is on a beautiful 600-acre estate with a farm, lakes, cabins, sport facilities, etc. Occupational work pertaining to life experiences plus the social and educational rehabilitation of the exceptional child is stressed.

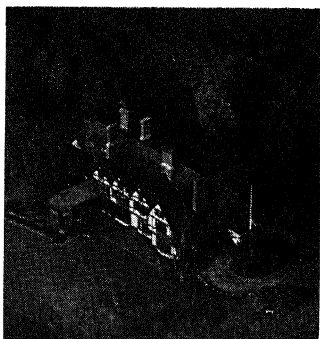

DAYCROFT

STAMFORD, CONNECTICUT

CLAYTON L. AKIN, Ed.D.,
President

JAMES L. HEGGIE, M.Ed.,
Head Master

Daycroft was founded in 1928 by Mrs. Sara Pyle Smart to provide a school for the children of Christian Scientists, where the teachings of Christian Science, already an integral part of the child's life in his home, would be honored, understood and applied in his school. Sound academic preparation is stressed in college preparatory and general courses. Classes range from preschool through high school. A full and varied social program is provided. Proximity to New York City makes possible many rare and outstanding cultural opportunities. Interscholastic athletic competition is open to all.

THE VIEWPOINT SCHOOL, AMENIA, NEW YORK

FRANCIS C. ST. JOHN, B.A., M.A., Headmaster

Viewpoint believes that if young people are to develop into mature men and women they need to be challenged by high standards and at the same time encouraged by those who like them and have faith in their abilities. In classes averaging about eight students each the faculty aims not only to teach the fundamental skills and knowledge necessary for successful college work, but also to stimulate intellectual curiosity and to lead students to enjoy and understand our cultural background.

Life at Viewpoint is simple. The extent of the campus and the distance between buildings make it inevitable that the out-of-doors should play an important part. There are woods and trails for hiking and riding, a pond for skating and good slopes for skiing, in addition to facilities for the usual interscholastic sports.

Outside of classes as well as in them, we are working to teach self-discipline and acceptance of community responsibility. Participation in school government, a work program and numerous extra-curricular activities help the student to develop as an individual while giving him the vital sense of contributing to something larger than himself.

NORTH COUNTRY SCHOOL

LAKE PLACID, NEW YORK

WALTER E. CLARK, B.S., M.A.
Director

North Country School's 160 acres border the north boundary of the Adirondack Forest Preserve with lake, stream, hills and open fields. The 4 buildings are characterized by spaciousness, simplicity and cheerfulness.

A Coeducational boarding school, its well-balanced curriculum includes languages, arithmetic, the social studies and science. Small classes (12-14) allow for participation by each student, and for personal attention. Creative work is called for through art, crafts, shop, and music, — giving ample opportunity for expression. Sports are carefully balanced between formal and informal play and include all the favorite group games, as well as skiing and riding.

THE BALDWIN SCHOOL OF NEW YORK CITY

20 West 73rd Street, New York 23, New York

ROLLIN P. BALDWIN, A.B., M.A., Director

Believing that neither children nor the classroom should be "leveled", Baldwin (a coeducational day school) offers Grade I through VIII and High School 1 through 4 in such a manner as to provide for the maximum of individual consideration, — recognizing the fact that each student is an individual with a capacity to learn that is completely and basically different from any other student's capacity.

Baldwin welcomes the student's individuality and endeavors to help each child, through special curriculum planning, energetically to participate in academic pursuits and to derive the most from his school experiences.

To insure its overall program of individualization, the School arranges classes of from 1 to 10 pupils each; provides individual tutoring and/or remedial work when necessary; calls for frequent student and parent interviews; administers a series of diagnostic and achievement tests; and offers a sound combination of intensive academic work with rounded school activities. Graduation from 12th grade carries a General Diploma or a College Certifying Diploma.

THE READING LABORATORY, INC.

NEW YORK 36, NEW YORK

WILLIAM S. SCHAILL, President

Helping students improve their reading skills has been a great source of satisfaction both to them and to us. The progress that they make in increased reading rate, better comprehension and improved vocabulary helps them not only in their schoolwork but also in the pleasure reading which they have more opportunity to do in their spare time.

Thousands of Secondary School and College students have improved their academic performance by gaining advanced reading skills in the Reading Laboratory's Developmental Reading Training program.

Students' reading gains in this non-remedial program average more than one hundred percent in reading rates with improvement or maintenance of comprehension and retention. Tests carried out a year or more following completion of training establish the enduring quality of this training.

*Communications Skills Program

AND IN LEADING SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES THROUGHOUT THE NATION.

Preparing for leading colleges and universities throughout the country, Columbia Grammar, founded in 1764, bases its teaching on the accumulated wisdom of nearly two centuries of sound academic tradition and on the best modern technique.

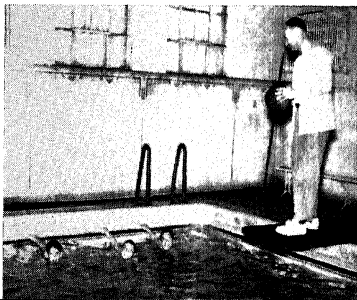

COLUMBIA GRAMMAR SCHOOL

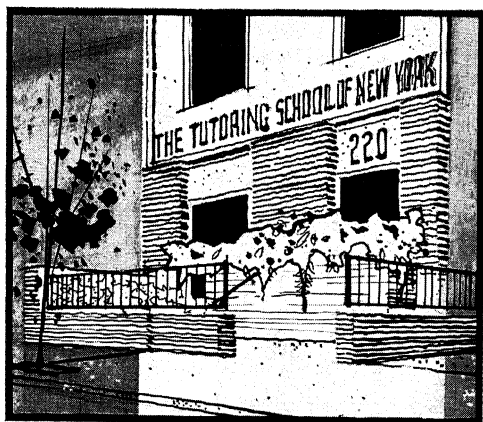

5 W. 93rd St., New York 25, New York

JAMES W. STERN, B.S., M.A., Head Master
FREDERIC A. ALDEN, B.S., M.A., Head Master Emeritus

The school offers boys and girls a complete day program from kindergarten through the secondary grades. The Lower School providing an atmosphere that stimulates social, emotional, physical and mental growth, encourages sound work habits, a spirit of cooperation, creative expression, and the values of group cooperation. The Upper School, exclusively devoted to the task of preparing for the college of each student's choice, offers small classes and individual attention in the courses for college admission.

An able faculty, representing graduates from many different colleges and universities, is particularly well suited to training young men and women academically, emotionally, and socially for the demands of higher education. Successful government permits pupils to share in managing their activities. Intramural and extramural sports are provided; there are also publications, drama, music, and various interests clubs. Full advantage is taken of the many cultural opportunities of New York City.

THE TUTORING SCHOOL OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK 22,
NEW YORK

ADELAIDE V. MCAULIFFE, B.S., Director

GERTRUDE ELLERY MACDERMOTT, A.B., M.A., Assistant Director

The Tutoring School of New York was organized in 1925 by Mr. George Matthew, and incorporated in 1927 to provide a regular preparatory school curriculum with the added advantages of individual instruction. Inasmuch as no two students have exactly the same background of school and home, nor the same ability, nor the same will-to-win, teaching is here addressed to the individual student, not to the average of the class. Group contacts are maintained through assemblies.

The Tutoring School offers programs of study leading to an academic college course, to scientific, and to business courses. Adult students are accepted. There are fully equipped laboratories for Chemistry, Physics and Biology.

For students who have been by illness or other causes separated from their schools, The Tutoring School offers a means of continuing their programs without loss of time. No class "adjustments" are needed.

All school records are validated by the Co-operative tests of the Educational Records Bureau, the Regents tests of the State of New York, or the achievement tests of the College Entrance Examination Board. A certificate of proficiency based on these tests is issued to students completing the usual 16 units of credit.

There are at this present time about 100 students in American colleges who have entered directly from the Tutoring School.

THE NEW LINCOLN SCHOOL

31 WEST 110TH STREET, NEW YORK 26, NEW YORK

JOHN L. BROOKS, Director

The New Lincoln School is a non-profit, private school with a student body representing the various racial, religious, and economic elements in the metropolitan area. Its primary purpose is to serve as a "pilot" school for public education in the development of the best curricula and methodology.

The Elementary and High School unit is located at 31 West 110th Street overlooking Central Park. Facilities include gymnasium, swimming pool, auditorium, library, homemaking departments, labs, art rooms, shop, classrooms, cafeteria. The Nursery and Primary unit is located at 6 East 82nd Street. This building is especially equipped for these age groups.

Skills in science, mathematics, creative and language arts are emphasized. The New Lincoln core curriculum is centered on basic problem areas: the common core of life experience.

WALT WHITMAN SCHOOL, NEW YORK, N. Y.

LOUISE KRUEGER, B.S., M.A., Director

Founded in 1937, this day school enrolling children from 4 to 13 years of age was created to prepare young people to live in today's complicated world and tomorrow's uncertain one. The School occupies its own building in Tudor City, at 340 East 43rd Street. By regarding the City's libraries, zoos, museums, as "branches", the School lives its full life in all of New York City.

Walt Whitman aims to strike a balance between interest and effort, freedom and discipline, rigorous thought and creative production; to harmonize work and play, individual and social skills, capacity and achievement. Its four principal divisions are: the sciences, the skills, the arts, the languages. A balanced recreation program is presented, including outdoor sports in all seasons, and indoor sports and swimming during the winter at a nearby recreation center.

Freedom from tension releases the children's vitality and interest; they learn to manage themselves alone and in groups, to control their impulses and to obey rules. A carefully selected faculty and staff are competent, imaginative and whole-heartedly in accord with the principles of the School.

YODER READING IMPROVEMENT CENTER

235 E. 46th ST., NEW YORK, N. Y.

HILDA W. YODER, A.B., M.A., Dir.
CAROLINE H. COREY, Head Mistress

In midtown Manhattan, near Grand Central Station, Yoder Reading Center (est. 1949) provides instruction for persons of all ages. Here reading disabilities are analyzed and corrected by a staff of experienced teachers, and there is a full-time tutoring program in all subjects. Students may have a complete intellectual and personality evaluation made, as well as a reading diagnosis; and vocational and aptitude tests are given. In addition, there is an Adult Course for business and professional people.

THE GARDEN COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL

JACKSON HEIGHTS, LONG ISLAND, NEW YORK

HENRY ROBERTS, B.A., M.A., Head Master

Founded in 1923, this twelve-grade co-ed school offers a well rounded school life yet makes possible the continuance of desirable home influences.

Small classes provide individual attention and supervised study.

The school is particularly proud of its effective program of student government and the varied club and athletic activities.

Fully accredited, the school sends its graduates to leading colleges and universities.

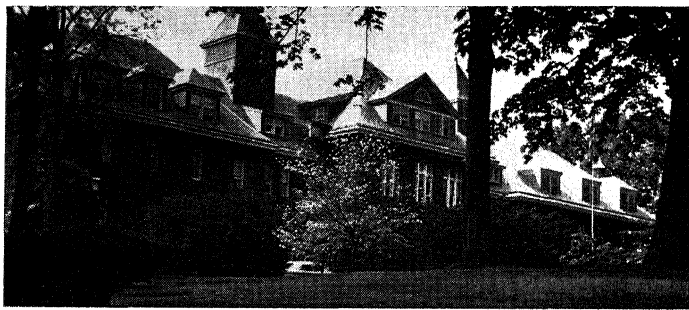

THE HENLEY SCHOOL

JAMAICA ESTATES, NEW YORK

ALVARO M. SANCHEZ, A.B., M.A., Head Master

The Henley School is a new school that has borrowed the very best from the old traditions. The primary and tangible objective of the curriculum is the preparation of boys and girls for admission into any of the foremost colleges of the country by College Board Entrance Examination.

From the seventh through the twelfth grades, the School offers a high calibre of junior and senior high school education. Its fine equipment makes possible a full Physical Education and Health Program. Henley has received charter approval by the Board of Regents of New York; it will be associated with the Middle States Association and the Secondary Education Board. It is chartered as a non-profit school by the New York State Department of Education.

FRIENDS ACADEMY, LOCUST VALLEY, L. I., N. Y.

VICTOR M. HAUGHTON, JR., B.A., M.A., Head Master

Founded as a boarding school in 1877, this Quaker coeducational school, now entirely day, offers continuous schooling from Kindergarten through Grade 12. Opportunities in the arts, coupled with a compulsory sports program, give balance to a fully accredited college preparatory program.

SANDS POINT COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL

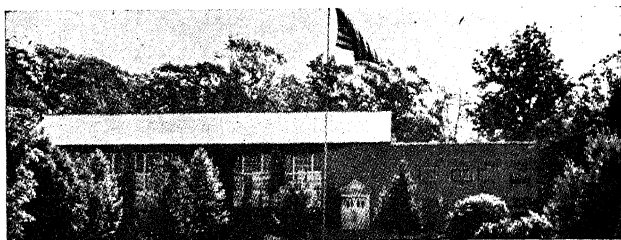

Elm Court, Sands Point, L. I., New York

JOSEPH T. FETSCH, B.E., Executive Director

Sands Point Country Day School is located in Elm Court, the magnificent Luckenbach waterfront estate on Sands Point overlooking the Long Island Sound. Here, in healthful and beautiful surroundings with acres of lawns, gardens, woodlands, and orchards, the School offers elementary education to children ages 3 to 14 including Kindergarten and through Grade VIII.

The educational program, its aims and goals, have been planned by a group of nationally known educators, who also supervise its operation. Science and nature studies, arts and crafts, music, Indian lore, citizenship training, dramatics, gardening, hobbies and animal care are taught in order to develop well-rounded personalities in the children and to bring out and develop their talents and abilities.

Elm Court has its own private beach on the open Long Island Sound (Hempstead Harbor) in addition to Olympic Swimming Pool and wading pools. Swimming, boating, fishing and all other water sports are under the supervision of trained American Red Cross instructors.

V. V. ANDERSON, M.D., LL.D., Director

LEWIS H. GAGE, M.A., Headmaster

With a 225-acre campus, this School offers country environment and excellent facilities including modern school building and gymnasium, 5 dormitories, dining hall, laboratory, and outdoor swimming pool. Girls live on separate grounds; classes and activities are coeducational.

The regents-accredited curriculum provides college preparatory, general, and non-academic courses. A diversified activity life, fundamental in the philosophy of the School, includes sports, dramatics, journalism, hobby clubs. Individual guidance under psychiatric direction.

OAKWOOD SCHOOL, POUGHKEEPSIE, NEW YORK

CHARLES W. HUTTON, A.B., A.M., Principal

Oakwood School is a Friends' coeducational boarding school which provides a community experience for grades IX through XII. Located in the mid-Hudson valley area 4 miles south of Poughkeepsie, its grounds look westward across the Hudson to the hills of the Catskills.

Oakwood presents a college preparatory program containing all the courses required for admission to leading colleges and universities. Seeking to develop ideas and to give students the sense that they are working with reality, class work emphasizes mastery of fundamental skills and details as tools in the application of ideas.

SEARING SCHOOLS

BOARDING AND DAY — SOMERS, NEW YORK
DAY ONLY — 22 E. 60th ST., NEW YORK 22, N. Y.

OTTO L. SWAN, D.D.S., Heidelberg }
MRS. RUTH S. SWAN, A.B., Middlebury } Directors

The original Searing Tutoring School was established by Ruth Sibley Searing at Bedford Hills, New York in 1936, chiefly as a summer tutoring school for day students. With the increased demand for this type of individual instruction, a winter session was started and a boarding department added in 1950. Because the school responded to vital needs in the educational program, it so increased in size that by 1955, a change of location was necessary. The school is now situated in Somers, in the lovely rolling countryside of upper Westchester County, about 50 miles north of New York City. Its $200,000 plant includes athletic fields, skating rink, ski facilities, toboggan slopes, and a swimming pool. The location provides unusual recreational, educational and social advantages. Riding academies, golf courses, movies, plays, museums and lectures are available under the supervision of members of the faculty.

Under the direction of a full-time faculty of twenty, a tutorial and remedial program is offered the co-ed day students; residence boys are offered a thorough academic program from seventh grade through high school.

In 1948 a second Searing School was opened in the French Institute Building, at 22 East 60th St., New York City. The same high standards of personalized instruction which have proved so successful at Somers, are maintained in the New York branch, which is staffed by twenty-five teachers. Here, beside the regular day time students, many advanced students find it helpful to take short term, evening or vacation courses.

All instruction is determined by the specific needs of the individual student as indicated by a strong Testing Program. Individual instruction increases the rate of learning, which is limited only by the student's ability. In the tutorial system, a student may often double the amount of progress made in a class situation, and a year at Searing may equip him to return to the school of his choice or to enter college.

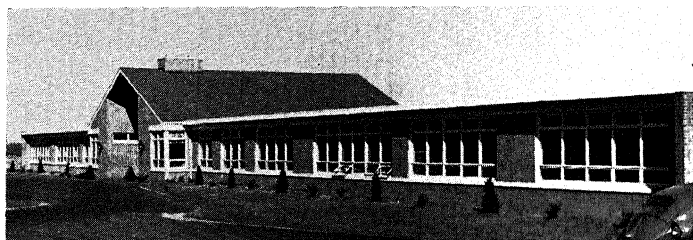

HALSTED SCHOOL, YONKERS, NEW YORK

RUTH S. LEONARD, Headmistress

Founded in 1874, Halsted is a co-educational high school, offering sound developmental education from kindergarten.

The Upper School, grades seven through twelve, is college preparatory with strong departments in Art, Dance, Dramatics and Music.

Depicted here is a student-conducted chapel service, the music for which was written and directed by a student.

YORK COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL, YORK, PENNSYLVANIA

J. KENNETH SNYDER, A.M., Headmaster

This coeducational country day school offers a complete program Grade I through XII. The Lower School, in separate wing of a new building, encourages development of sound work habits in basic subjects. The Upper School, entirely college preparatory, maintains small classes for individual attention. A full schedule of sports, made possible by a large new gymnasium and 14 acres of playing fields, a newspaper, year-book, music and dramatics fill out the program. School trips and visits to cultural centers are planned yearly.

THE GILL SCHOOL

BERNARDSVILLE, NEW JERSEY

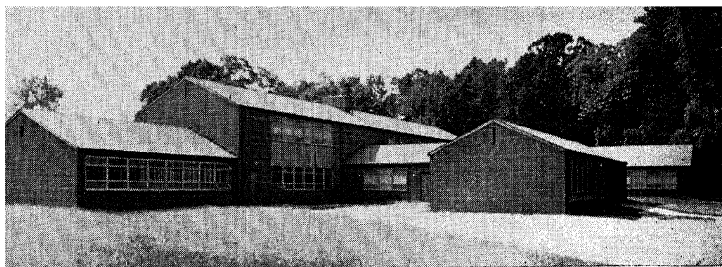

MISS MARGARET D. JEFFERSON, B.A., M.S., Headmistress

A co-educational school for children from pre-school level to grade 8. Girls day school, grades 9-12. Total enrollment is 194 students from the surrounding Somerset Hills area. Now a country day school, Gill was originally founded as a girl's boarding school.

Courses include college preparatory curriculum, carefully supervised guidance programs. Non-denominational Christian education is taught in weekly Bible classes. Class enrollment is limited to 17 students per class, grades 1-12, to provide close individualized relationships between faculty and pupil.

Located 40 miles from New York City and nine miles south of Morristown on a 40-acre estate, the school is housed in 4 buildings: Stronghold, the center of school life for upper school students, with the atmosphere of a spacious and elegant mansion built at the turn of the century, where 9-12th grade classes and all social functions are held. Lower and Middle School, a new, modern one-story, fireproof building which houses an art studio, shop, assembly room, in addition to the most modern of classrooms which overlook the beautiful countryside. Pre-school Building built just two years ago for the small fry and attractively decorated and furnished. An up-to-date gymnasium-auditorium and excellent sports field providing a varied sports program.

The school stands for good training in leadership through a well-established system of self-government.

THE BANCROFT SCHOOL

HADDONFIELD, NEW JERSEY

JENZIA COULSON COOLEY, Principal

Celebrating its 75th year of continuous service to the special child.

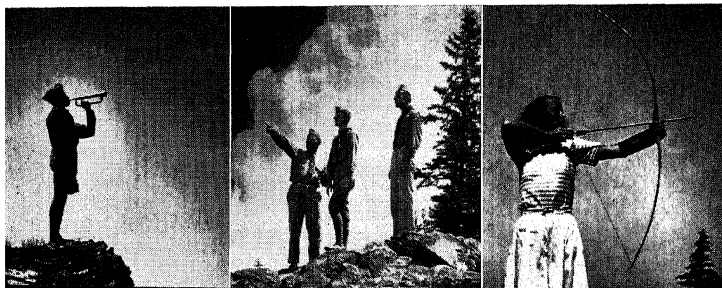

The Bancroft School was incorporated in 1883 as a boarding school for the child unable to progress at a normal rate in a normal environment. Its purpose was to create a way of life—an environment suited to his needs wherein he could work, play, grow, progress and be happy, free from the frustrations and worse, that awaited him elsewhere.

Haddonfield was chosen for its quiet country-like atmosphere and its proximity to Philadelphia with all the obvious advantages.

In 1895, an estate known as "Garthgannon" located at Owl's Head, Maine, was purchased as a summer home. The three summer months of each year are spent here, continuing school subjects while enjoying all the sports and activities of a summer camp in the invigorating climate of the Maine coast.

To further safeguard the future welfare and security of the children, the corporate charter has been changed to require that a "majority of the Trustees shall at all times be parents of children in attendance at the school."

The School provides a full twelve-month program, designed to develop each child to his maximum potential, to the end that he become a happy, respected, useful citizen.

UNDER THE DEVEREUX FOUNDATION

HELENA T. DEVEREUX, Administrative Consultant
EDWARD L. FRENCH, PH.D., Director

Eastern Schools at Devon, Pennsylvania

California Schools, Box 1079, Santa Barbara, California

Devereux Schools provide dynamic education to meet the needs of boys and girls who fail to make the usual progress in the conventional school setting, of children of average and superior intelligence who are emotionally maladjusted, and of children with educational difficulties. Pupils range in age from nursery school through high school.

The Eastern Schools, established in 1912, are in suburban Philadelphia, on the main line near Paoli. A student is placed, according to his age and educational needs, in one of a score of fully staffed and equipped, geographically separate, school-home units. Full psychiatric, psychological, and educational services are provided.

The Western Schools were opened in 1945 in a country location near Santa Barbara. Here in the delightful climate that encourages outdoor activities, children have all the benefits of Devereux' program of education with therapy.

For information about Devereux Schools, address

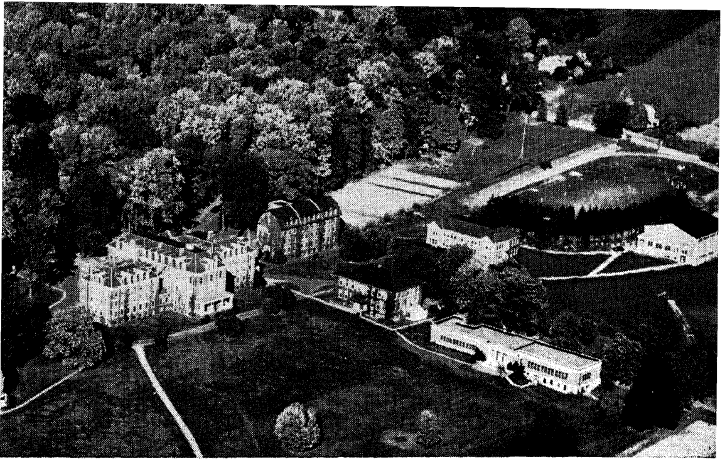

John M. Barclay, Director of Development, Devon, Pennsylvania.

GEORGE SCHOOL

GEORGE SCHOOL P.O., PENNSYLVANIA

RICHARD H. McFEELY, A.M., Principal

This Friends boarding school provides boys and girls of high school age with an educational experience in democratic group living. The 450 students and the men and women teachers live, work, and worship together in the atmosphere of a large, well-regulated family of high spiritual ideals. Careful testing precedes the admission of a pupil, and throughout his course he receives sympathetic counseling from specially assigned faculty and staff members. Half of the students are following the "sequence" curriculum method described earlier in this Handbook.

In four years graduates have entered 112 different colleges, universities, and technological institutes. Approximately half the students come from homes affiliated with the Society of Friends.

SOLEBURY SCHOOL

WILLIAM PENDLETON ORRICK, A.B., Head Master

This coeducational school offers thorough preparation for college, stressing English, mathematics, science and languages (Greek, Latin, French and German). Through small classes, informal discussion groups, and close association of students and faculty, independent thinking is encouraged. The Bucks County community provides unusual stimulus for students interested in creative arts. Simple country living, a modern gymnasium and daily sports program contribute to the student's well-rounded development.

Boys and girls, 12-18, living on separate campuses a mile and a half apart, enjoy the advantages of classes and activities together. Student government, daily chores, and special work programs develop individual responsibility and democratic living.

The Meeting House

Announcements—824

At Westtown, boys and girls from more than 27 states and 17 foreign countries share common experiences of good fun, intellectual exercise, and religious concern. The School feels strongly its obligation to endow its students with well-trained minds and bodies, and a deep appreciation of moral and spiritual values.

WESTTOWN SCHOOL

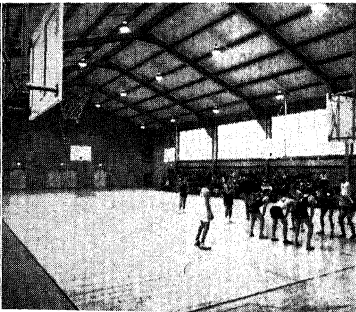

CHESTER COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA

DANIEL D. TEST, JR., A.B., A.M., Headmaster

Westtown, a Friends coeducational boarding school established in 1799, is particularly fortunate in its location. Located in Chester County, 25 miles from Philadelphia, its 650 acres include the beautiful, well-equipped campus, farm and orchard, woodland and lake. Here is afforded ample opportunity for out-door sports and hobbies such as hiking, camping, astronomy, and the study of bird and plant life.

Full and thorough preparation is offered for any college or university in the country. An effort is made to keep the life at the School one of wholesome simplicity. Informal student dances are held once a week; Friday evening is "hobby" time. The Work Program, born of war-time necessity, has become an important addition to the School program.

Westtown Lower School — coeducational country day — offering grades I to VI, is an integral part of Westtown School.

SANFORD PREPARATORY SCHOOL SUNNY HILLS LOWER SCHOOL

HOCKESSIN, DELAWARE

ELLEN Q. SAWIN, Head Mistress
WILLIAM N. WINGERD, Director
NANCY C. SAWIN, Director

Sanford Preparatory School and Sunny Hills Lower School are located 8 miles from Wilmington and 1 mile from Hockessin village. They offer an integrated program for boys and girls from nursery school through 12th grade. The Schools were founded by Mrs. Ellen Q. Sawin, the head mistress, "to provide a residence school where family life is nurtured and character building is an essential of all educative processes, and to give the best possible scholastic training accompanied by cultural living."

There are approximately 225 students in the combined school, with 15 states and 7 foreign countries represented (in 1957-58). There are 19 full-time and 6 part-time members of the faculty, most of whom live on the campus. College preparatory and general courses are offered. The curriculum includes art, music, home economics, typing, shop, and remedial reading in addition to academic subjects. There is an average of 12 students per class.

The 180-acre campus is slightly hilly and is crossed by several streams. A modern gymnasium and fine athletic fields provide facilities for the 8 interscholastic sports in which the School competes. There are 24 buildings, an outdoor swimming pool, 2 composition all-weather tennis courts, 14 acres of woodland, 2 ponds and a 70-acre farm.

THE TATNALL SCHOOL, WILMINGTON, DELAWARE

MRS. ROBERT LEE MYERS, B.A., M.A., Principal

The Tatnall School has three divisions: Elementary and Upper schools held at Sedgely, a country property on Barley Mill Road; and a pre-school at 2506 Delaware Avenue, a city location. Boys are enrolled in the pre-school and will be accepted through the seventh grade in 1958/1959. Grades 8 through 12, enrolls only girls at this time, but consideration is being given to the inclusion of boys in this division at a future date. Founded in 1930, the school aims to provide a sound education in a homelike atmosphere and at a comparatively low tuition. It offers thorough preparation for college, as well as a general course. Through small classes, friendliness and courtesy are emphasized.

Sedgely comprises 100 acres. There are 1 hockey field; 3 playing fields; 1 football field; 2 all-weather tennis courts; 2 swimming pools; about 20 acres of woodland, the remainder of the property in rolling countryside and formal gardens. Wilmington and the University of Delaware (in nearby Newark) offer many cultural advantages. The Student Association cooperates in organizing all extracurricular activities. Team sports include hockey, lacrosse and softball.

THE EVERETT SCHOOL, VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA

HELENA A. EVERETT,
Principal

Located in an exclusive residential section, near Army and Naval Stations, Everett School offers an advanced curriculum with small classes and individual attention.

The program emphasizes phonics, reading, arithmetic, social studies, French, art, music appreciation, and piano; remedial reading and tutoring when necessary. In homelike atmosphere, pupils are encouraged to develop their own talents, satisfy their individual needs in a socially acceptable manner, and meet new situations with self-reliance. In kindergarten and grades I through V, pupils are given national tests; these marks gain them admission to schools throughout the country. The success of Everett is attested by the fact that many present pupils represent the second generation of patrons.

BARRIE—PETER PAN SCHOOLS

801 Fern Place, N.W., Washington 12, D. C.

FRANCES LITTMAN, Director

NATHAN SINROD, Associate Director

Barrie and Peter Pan are private day schools administered by qualified and experienced educators, — Peter Pan enrolling pre-school children 2 to 5 years old; and Barrie School beginning with Kindergarten and continuing through Grade XI.

A full year-round program is offered emphasizing the general academic educational curriculum, which includes French, Latin, Music Appreciation, art, dance instruction, health and habit training. Guidance and testing are an integral part of each student's program. Over four acres of well-equipped playgrounds make possible an equally well-rounded recreational program highlighting a variety of season sports such as horseback riding, tennis, swimming and ice-skating.

Operating from two locations — a 4 1/2 acre city property in north-west Washington D.C. for the preschool and primary grades, and a 41-acre country site in suburban Maryland for the secondary grades — enrollment is limited to permit small classes and individual attention. Remedial instruction by experienced teachers is available. Nutritious meals are served, and transportation facilities are provided within the metropolitan area.

The Barrie Day Camp in Silver Springs, Maryland — only minutes away from suburban Georgia Avenue—is a pleasant, protected summer playground for active boys and girls, ages 5-16. Truly a scenic wonderland with lush trees, sprawling lawns, and a fresh-water creek, the camp offers a wide variety of indoor and outdoor activities; and features a corral with safe, gentle horses; a "zoo"; a ranch-style community center; a natural amphi-theater; and a barbeque pit.

BREWSTER HALL TUTORIAL SCHOOL

BRADENTON, FLORIDA

DOROTHY C. ANDREWS, M.A., M.S., Director

Brewster Hall is located on 110 acres on Upper Manatee River 10 miles east of Bradenton. Mild climate permits year-round outdoor activity. The School is primarily for the emotionally disturbed and academically retarded child. Psychotherapy, speech therapy, medical and psychological services are provided. Medical and psychological examinations afford means of understanding the child's capabilities (interests, aptitudes and talents) and appreciation of his limitations. A well qualified staff collaborates in planning a flexible program to meet the needs of the individual. Its aim is to guide each pupil to help himself attain social adjustment and economic usefulness.

As the entire program at Brewster Hall is psychotherapeutic, the academic instruction is tutorial. Limited enrollment provides home-like atmosphere. Individual instruction permits emphasis where needed, eliminating tension sometimes engendered by group instruction. The athletic and arts and crafts programs are planned to develop the maximum of motor ability and coordination. Brewster Hall has U. S. State Dept. approval for enrollment of foreign students.

GRAHAM-ECKES SCHOOL, PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

Limited enrollment of 100 evenly divided in boys' and girls' schools, represents 38 states, 18 foreign countries. Thorough preparation for College Entrance Board Exams; every graduate has been admitted to college. The school is accredited to Southern Assn. of Colleges & Secondary Schools; Florida State Bd. of Education; approved by Federal Govt for foreign students. A non-profit organization founded in 1926, it has a C.E.E.B. Exam Center, a Cum Laude Chapter, and is a member of S.E.B., E.R.B., S.A.C.S.S.,

S.A.I.S., Nat. Reg. Office and N.C.I.S. The school offers a broad cultural program; Remedial Reading Clinic; organized athletics; Sailing, Swimming, Tennis; and is member of Amateur Athletic Union of U.S.

During its 74 years of existence, this Friends country day school has adapted its techniques and curriculum to prepare successive school generations for colleges that best meet individual needs, including the leading Eastern colleges. Its basic purpose, as laid down by the founder, Thomas W. Sidwell, is sound scholarship, integrity of character, and tolerance based on good will and understanding.

THE SIDWELL FRIENDS SCHOOL

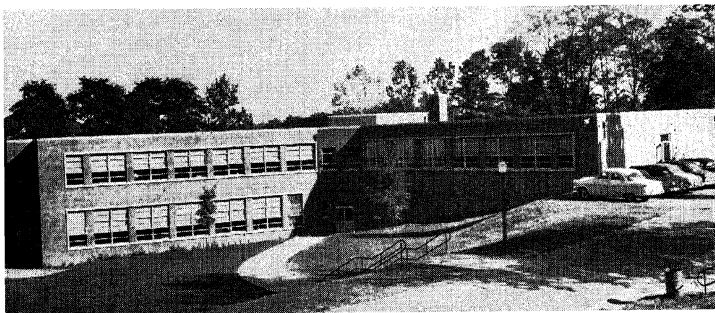

WASHINGTON 16, D.C.

ROBERT S. LYLE, A.B., M.S., Headmaster

This oldest co-educational day school in the nation's capital offers 14 years of Friends education from kindergarten to college. Its 17-acre campus provides excellent playing fields and ample space for recreation and sports. A full and varied extracurricular program affords ample opportunity to develop individual interests. The School has had a Cum Laude chapter since 1937.

The Kindergarten meets the needs of children from 4 to 6. The Lower School (grades 1-4) emphasizes good work habits and high standards of achievement in the tool subjects. In the Middle School (grades 5-8), academic work is carried forward; student government, which begins here, develops readiness for responsibility. Upper School (grades 9-12) is devoted to college preparatory courses, with particular stress on thorough understanding of underlying principles, formation of efficient habits of study, and stimulation of new interests. From first grade, science, art, and music are an integral part of the curriculum.

The School operates an accredited summer session and a day camp.

OXFORD SCHOOL

MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA

ABRAHAM M. CASSEL, B.A., M.A., Ph.D., Director

LOUIS A. CASSEL, B.A., M.A., Dean

JOHN W. LORTON, B.A., M.A., Headmaster

This coeducational Boarding and Day School, situated on beautiful Biscayne Bay in Miami Beach, offers a thorough and sound education from pre-school, through elementary, high school and college preparation. Its basic policy is stated simply by the Director: "Education geared for each individual student according to need and ability."

Boarding students live in handsomely appointed dormitories with separate campuses for boys and girls supervised by resident counselors, and enjoy the comforts of a "beautiful home away from home". Day students are given transportation to and from school and wholesome lunch daily. Oxford's complete educational program is followed by both Boarding and Day students. Students are accepted in all departments for short-term semesters, especially during the winter months when many families flock to Miami Beach for the health-giving sunshine.

Oxford also offers a complete program of land and water sports.

PALM BEACH PRIVATE SCHOOL

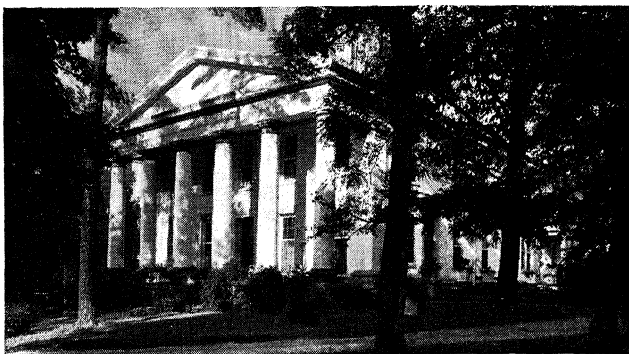

PALM BEACH, FLORIDA

DONALD E. W. NIEMANN, A.B., Head Master

Established in 1921, the Palm Beach Private School is a non-profit co-educational day school serving both winter and year-round residents. Students are accepted in the pre-school department and carried through high school, with the work well coordinated with that of northern private schools. The majority of children are prepared for the northern boarding schools. In the high school grades college preparatory work is emphasized. The study of French is begun in Kindergarten and the study of Latin in Grade 7. With the new, completely equipped laboratory, the School offers a full science program.

In addition to maintaining a balanced sports program, the school offers such activities as art, dramatics, literary magazine, newspaper, sculpture, shop, and year-book, plus the French, glee, and science clubs and an active student council. A $325,000 expansion program is in process, with the results thus far being 10 classrooms, alterations to the main building, and additional playground space. A new 400 seat auditorium will be completed by January, 1959.

STEWART HOME SCHOOL, FRANKFORT, KENTUCKY

JOHN D. STEWART, Owner and Director

Located seven miles from Frankfort on a large country estate, Stewart Home School is ideally equipped for education and training of mentally retarded children. School department features academic instructions for children. The residential department provides a happy well-rounded home life for those past school age.

THE LATIN SCHOOL OF CHICAGO, CHICAGO, ILL.

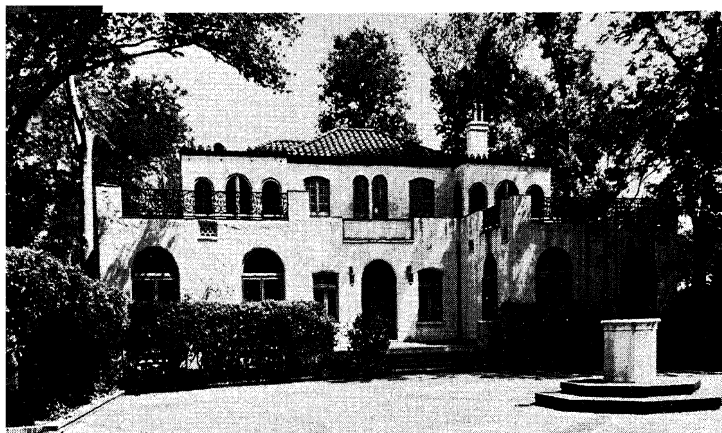

ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — 1531 NORTH DEARBORN PARKWAY

SECONDARY SCHOOL — 59 EAST SCOTT STREET

MARK A. NEVILLE, A.B., M.A., Ed.D., Head Master

The Latin School of Chicago is a private coeducational college-preparatory day school. The elementary school includes kindergarten through grade six, and the secondary school includes grades seven through twelve. Enrollment, limited to 480 pupils, is equally divided between girls and boys.

The program of education is dynamic, including the best in traditional education and the most promising of the new theory and practice. Through its methods of instruction, the school seeks to discover and develop the potentialities of each child, to promote normal school relationship among pupils and between pupils and teachers, to bring about a widespread respect for other people and a capacity to work with them happily, to develop sound and thorough scholarship through purposeful habits of study, and to foster high ideals and sound qualities of character.

RIDGEWOOD PREPARATORY SCHOOL

METAIRIE, LOUISIANA

OTTIS O. STUCKEY, B.A., M.A., Headmaster

To foster its objectives of Self-Realization, Human Relationships, Home Efficiency, and Civic Responsibility, Ridgewood provides a program to meet the needs and abilities of individual students. Classes are limited in number so as to permit each child to express his own personality through the talents with which he is best equipped.

Ridgewood is accredited by the State Department of Education and Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. A complete academic program from Kindergarten through Grade XII is offered to prepare students for college. In addition, Ridgewood offers a well-organized physical education program, which includes every student. The sports, of which each student has his choice, are coached by members of the faculty who have had training in a wide variety of intramural and varsity athletics.

The School maintains an elaborate testing program including testing in academic achievement, intelligence, interests, and aptitudes. This testing program enables the guidance program to function accurately and efficiently. Long range plans have been formulated to provide more classroom space, more equipment, and a greater choice of elective subjects for the student.

THE DAY SCHOOL,

800 BUENA AVENUE, CHICAGO 13, ILLINOIS

For Emotionally and Socially Maladjusted Children

ELIZABETH B. ANDREWS, B.A., Director

The Day School, operating on a year-round basis, offers remedial and make-up education for children of average or better-than-average intelligence who are in need of social and emotional adjustment. The program includes Kindergarten, Grades I through VIII, and High School I through IV.

With an enrollment of between 55 to 60 children, The Day School maintains a large teaching staff which assures close attention and supervision for each pupil. Physically or mentally handicapped or psychotic children are not admitted.

The services of a child psychiatrist are available to the staff for consultation and instruction.

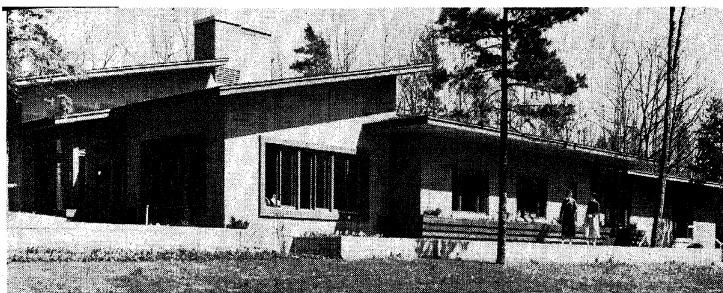

THE PRINCIPIA, ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

WILLIAM E. MORGAN, M.A., LL.D., President

DAVID K. ANDREWS, M.A., Head Master

Three educational units for children of Christian Scientists are maintained, all of recognized academic standing with rich extra curricular programs.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS, Elsah, Illinois, offers a four year course leading to a B.A. or B.S. degree. UPPER SCHOOL offers three plans of study: College Preparatory, General, and Special. LOWER SCHOOL: pre-kindergarten, kindergarten and 8 grades. Students in grades 7-8 accepted as boarders.

THE LEELANAU SCHOOLS

LEELANAU FOR BOYS — PINEBROOK FOR GIRLS

GLEN ARBOR, MICHIGAN

ARTHUR S. HUEY, A.B., President

CHARLES W. SHINN, B.S., M.A., Head Master

Established primarily for children of Christian Scientists, these two schools do not limit enrollment to boys and girls of that faith. Situated on the shores of Lake Michigan, the schools' atmospheres are conducive to study and to the love of the out-of-doors.

The curriculum is fully accredited for college entrance. In addition, time is given to a wide variety of cultural, vocational, and remedial courses. These include music, art, dramatics, speech, pottery, lapidary, woodshop, typing, homemaking, journalism, reading, and vocabulary.

The aim is to graduate young people who are well equipped for life both at home and in college.

Regular sports activities have the additional advantage of full instruction in skiing.

The work program gives students an opportunity to earn and to gain an appreciation of labor.

The faculty members are Christian Scientists who are well qualified as teachers and friends.

Coeducational Schools—835

ELGIN ACADEMY, ELGIN, ILLINOIS

MARVIN L. BRETT, M.A.,
Head Master

This coeducational Academy, the oldest endowed College Preparatory School in the Midwest, enrolls boarding and day students, 7th grade through high school and also offers pre-school and elementary courses for day students. Curriculum and standards meet the requirements of all accrediting agencies.

Elgin was chartered in 1839. During the past 40 years, 95% of the graduates have enrolled in leading colleges and universities. A potential achievement rating, PAR, for each student stimulates individual academic progress.

An Art Gallery and a Conservatory of Music offer opportunities unusual for a preparatory school. Attractive dormitories for both boys and girls furnish comfortable boarding accommodations and recreation rooms. Athletic facilities include 2 gymnasiums, swimming pool, tennis courts, football field, and track.

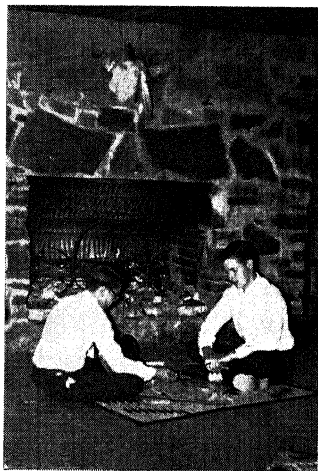

THE WHITEMAN-GAYLORD SCHOOL

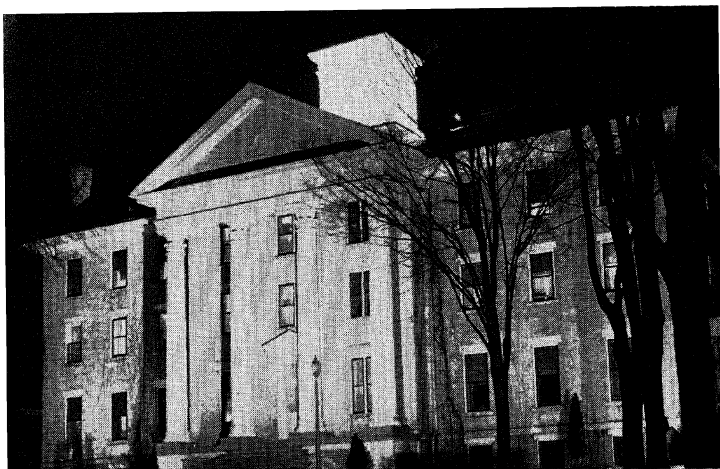

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, COLORADO

LOWELL WHITEMAN, B.A.,
Headmaster

Situated in the high Rockies of Colorado at an altitude of 7000 ft., Whiteman-Gaylord School is four miles from Steamboat Springs, a famous ski center. The campus joins beautiful Routt National Forest, dense with pine and aspen.

By insisting on hard work and mental discipline, the co-educational school prepares 9th, 10th, 11th, and 12th graders for college entrance. The entire school spends March and April studying abroad.

WAYLAND ACADEMY

BEAVER DAM, WISCONSIN

RAYMOND A. PATTERSON, JR., B.S., M.S., Headmaster

Wayland Academy is a coeducational, college preparatory, boarding school at Beaver Dam — a small industrial city in the heart of the Wisconsin dairy country, two hours by rail from Chicago, five hours from Minneapolis and St. Paul. Founded in 1855 Wayland has retained its Christian traditions and religious services; and enrolls qualified students of any faith or denomination. The Academy aims toward the acquisition of knowledge and skill, the instilling of Christian character, the growth of personality, and the development of a normal and natural friendship between boys and girls.

The school buildings are strategically located on the twenty-acre landscaped campus and include dormitories, dining hall, two gymnasiums, swimming pool, auditorium, chapel, infirmary, classroom building with laboratories, library, music building with practice studios, and recreation rooms.

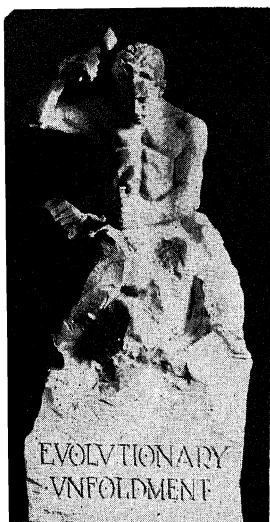

Besides the academic program of full college preparatory curricula, Wayland maintains an intensive athletic program for both boys and girls. Extra curricular activities include religious clubs, varsity letter clubs, a yearbook, newspaper, press club; special interest groups in photography, radio, hiking, skiing, hunting, dancing, public speaking; dramatic presentations; choir, glee club, orchestra, swing band, vocal ensembles; and week-end activities.

THE SEBAGO SCHOOL

5515 Cates Avenue

St. Louis 12, Missouri

MR. AND MRS. L. MATTHEWS WERNER,
Directors

"Soundly maturing youth assumes growing self-responsibility for his continued unfoldment and fulfillment of realistic democratic techniques of living — only to find upon reaching maturity that there is now the responsibility to aid society to continue its democratic evolutionary unfoldment and fulfillment of the needs and rights of all the people everywhere."

L. Matthews Werner

TEACHING TECHNIQUES OF LIVING to not over eight maladjusted boys and girls with intelligence ranging from average to brilliant.

A happy home life and a personalized educational program are provided in this residential treatment home. Students are accepted anywhere from grade school through college.

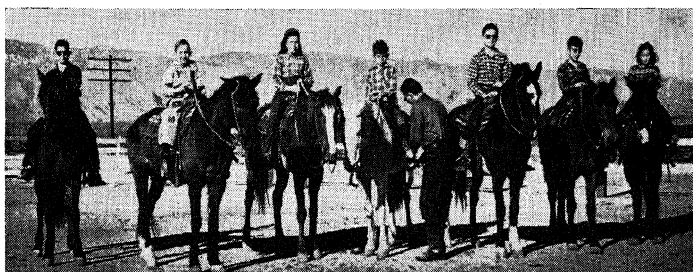

By creating a warm home environment the directors are able to help the student become a relaxed, friendly, cooperative member of the group.

Sound individual guidance and group work techniques are used to satisfy the scholastic, social, physical, intellectual and emotional needs of the individual child.

The tuition varies from $5000 to $6000 according to the needs of the student.

The names of psychiatrists, psychologist, parents and outstanding educators who know Sebago and recommend it, will be sent on request.

The directors also conduct Camp Ironwood Community at Harrison, Maine during the summer months.

The experienced faculty (1 teacher to 6 students), including members from foreign nations, assures a high measure of success in achieving the School's dual purpose. Large library for reference and research. Laboratories for sciences, with individual laboratories for research students. Art studio, with kiln. Music building, plus 6 pianos. Practical cultural insight is derived from 5000 miles of field trips annually to Indian reservations, agricultural and industrial areas, and to Mexico. Dry climate consistently sunny at 4000 feet; San Francisco peaks offer excellent skiing; ranges and trails, riding; work jobs; fascinating archaeological sites, deserts, forests, and 3 hours to Grand Canyon. All graduates have been accepted at college.

Announcements—842

The dry climate of Phoenix is particularly suited to those suffering from asthma, colds and chronic sinus, but no one with communicable diseases will be admitted to Judson School. Two trained nurses are on duty at all times in the school's new infirmary.

HENRY C. WICK, YALE, A.B., Director

DAVIS M. ASHLEY, Harvard, Director

DAVID WICK, UNIV. OF ARIZ., A.B., B.S., M.A., Head Master

Judson School, co-ed Boarding and Day students six to eighteen, founded in 1928, is owned and directed by men who have had many years experience at Judson and at other private schools in Arizona.

The Judson School is accredited by the State Board of Education, and students are well prepared for any University or College. All colleges which do not require the College Entrance Board Examinations will accept its graduates upon recommendation of the director. The College Examinations are held each spring at Phoenix. The school combines a high standard of scholarship with a healthy out-of-door life.

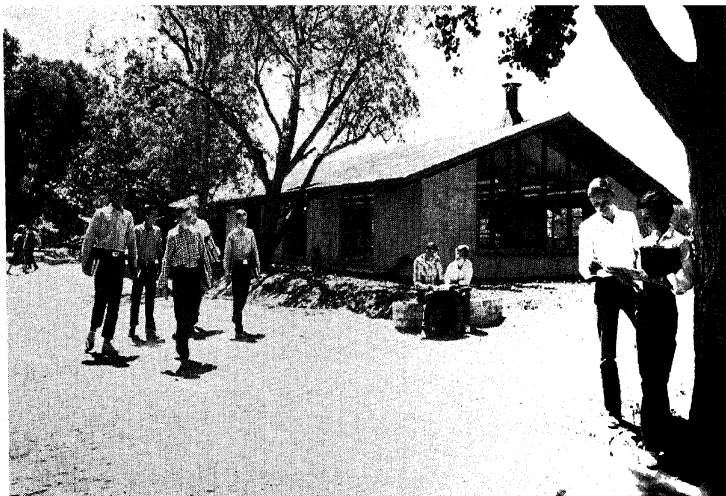

JUDSON SCHOOL carefully considers the particular needs of each student, and through small classes each student receives almost individual attention. The forty teachers are carefully chosen for their ability to impart their knowledge to others. The buildings are modern, well heated and well furnished.

Every student rides, and there is no additional charge for the use of a horse and riding equipment. Polo, tennis, swimming, basketball and riflery are among the other sports enjoyed by all. Camping trips and trips to the Grand Canyon and other points.

Special Pullman cars in charge of a member of the faculty bring the students from New York in the fall, return them in May.

ORME SCHOOL

ON THE QUARTER CIRCLE V-BAR RANCH
MAYER, ARIZONA

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES ORME, B.A., Directors

This college preparatory school, with 105 boarding students, is located at an altitude of 3,800 feet, 75 miles north of Phoenix on a 40,000 acre cattle ranch. It offers boys and girls a healthful, happy, industrious and well-rounded out-of-doors life, to accompany a strong scholastic program.

Although the atmosphere is one of informality, a counter-balancing emphasis on graciousness and refinement is stressed. By bringing a well-planned academic program to an actively operating ranch, Orme School presents opportunity for developing well-balanced individuals with an appreciation of important basic values, including the acceptance of responsibility, the dignity of work, consideration for others, learning of self-discipline with good habits and methods of study. There is a functioning student government.

A horse is assigned to each student and all boys and girls participate in the ranch roundups. A complete program of coached team sports is of special interest to boys.

Ford Country Day School is situated 5 miles south of Palo Alto and Stanford University on a 7 acre knoll overlooking the Santa Clara Valley and southern San Francisco Bay.

It functions as a "pre-prep" school offering kindergarten through 6th grade, and graduating pupils to junior high schools—both private and public.

Transportation throughout the nearby suburban area, hot lunch, books and supplies are included in the one tuition fee.

FORD COUNTRY DAY SCHOOL

JOHN CARTER FORD; MARGARET WHITE FORD, A.B.
Owner-directors

Because they enjoyed working together to help capable boys and girls to realize satisfaction and stimulation from their beginning school experiences, Mr. and Mrs. Ford — in 1935 — established this project to provide foundation education. While allowing it gradually to increase in size, the owner-directors have maintained an awareness of individual pupil progress through daily classroom contact, and through nationally standardized achievement tests given twice each year.

There are sufficient teachers for the 150 pupils so that such studies as arithmetic and reading are presented to class groups of 10 or less. However, social groups — of like age and grade — average 20 members.

A departmental plan of instruction is followed since it is felt that both staff and youngsters gain enthusiasm and refreshment when each teacher's special interests, ability and experience are thus utilized, and when both teachers and children meet many varied personalities during the day. By this means, also, the pupils receive an introduction to the system followed by secondary schools.

French — from kindergarten, Spanish — from 3rd grade (both mostly aural-oral), music, basic dance, primary and elementary games and sports, science, arithmetic, reading, spelling, writing, social studies, and paint-clay workshop are presented by teacher-specialists.

Punahou School in Honolulu has served the Hawaiian Island community with distinction for more than a century. Founded in 1841 by the missionaries of the American Board for the education of "their children's children", Punahou is today the largest non-parochial independent school in the nation.

PUNAHOU SCHOOL

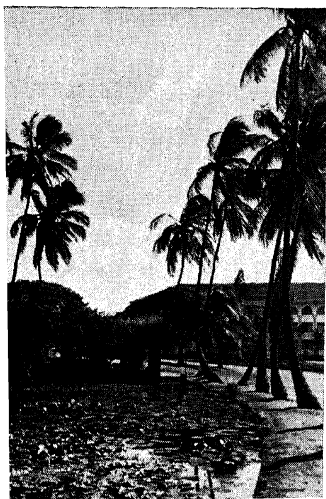

HONOLULU, HAWAII

DR. JOHN F. FOX, PH.D., President

As an independent school, Punahou endeavors to prepare youth for:
CHRISTIAN LIVING—by inculcating the moral and spiritual values and attitudes which stem from its missionary heritage;

COLLEGE—by stimulating the intellectual development and special talents of each child to his maximum potential in accordance with his individual needs and abilities;

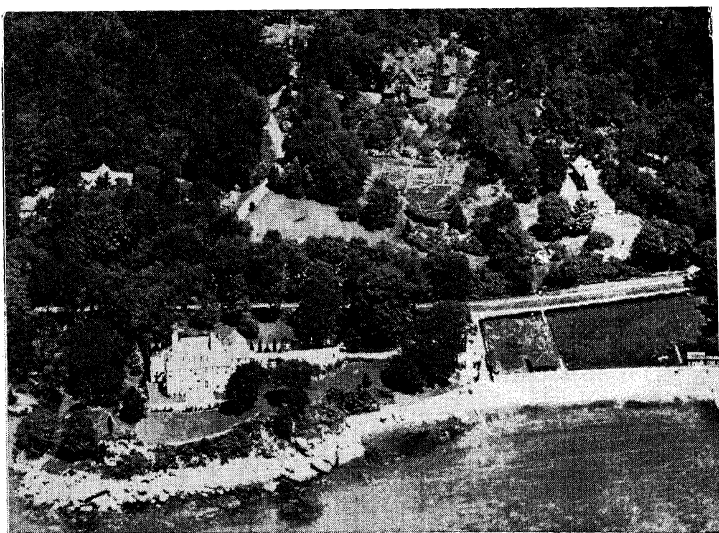

CITIZENSHIP—by developing responsible persons of integrity, social conscience and courage who are dedicated to the ideals and principles of the American way of life.

Centered about Ka Punahou, the new spring, are Punahou's 76 acres of beautiful campus, where 2800 students from kindergarten through twelfth grade study in 30 academic buildings, and play on 3 athletic fields, 9 tennis courts, swimming pool and gymnasium. Since virtually 100% of Punahou graduates enter college, the academic preparatory program is augmented by occupational and college counseling services. In addition physical education, art, dramatics, shop work, music and athletics are stressed.

ENDICOTT JUNIOR COLLEGE

GEORGE O. BIERKOE, M.A., B.D., LITT.D., President

ELEANOR TUPPER, M.A., PH.D., Dean

Endicott Junior College is a fully accredited college for young women, granting the A.A. and A.S. degrees. It is a resident Christian college, offering two years of vocational training for careers, or two years of liberal arts for transfer to a four-year college.

Endicott's well-rounded program encompasses the responsibilities of daily life, including cultural, recreational and civic interests and activities, and an Internship (work experience) Project. The vocational courses include: Advertising; Art; Ceramics; Clothing; Foods and Homemaking; Interior Decoration; Junior Teacher Training; Merchandising; Photography; Journalism; and Public Relations; Radio, Television and Theatre; The Secretarials: Business, Medical, and Legal; Pre-professional: Nursing, Medical Technician, Occupational Therapy, and Social Service.

Endicott's 110-acre shore front campus, 18 miles from Boston, offers all sports and an environment of beauty and inspiration in the historic City of Beverly.

NICHOLS JUNIOR COLLEGE

DUDLEY, MASSACHUSETTS

JAMES LAWSON CONRAD, B.B.A., President

This degree granting Junior College of Business Administration and Executive Training was first in the East for men and first of its type with full campus and dormitory equipment.

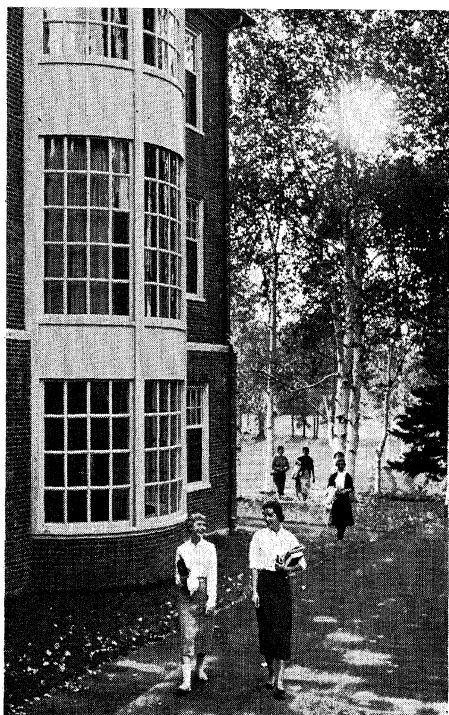

With students discriminatingly chosen from many states and foreign countries, the College avoids provincialism.

Situated in the Dudley Hills, Nichols is readily accessible, but away from the distractions of the large cities. The spacious 200-acre campus, with 23 buildings and a 3152 yard nine-hole golf course, encourages participation in all phases of college life.

Nichols has contributed substantially to educational progress through coordination and supervision of curricula by an Advisory Council comprising 40 outstanding executives representing the entire business community. Contact with the Council serves to clarify practical factors giving the student a conception of the possibilities in, requirements and demands of any given field.

The recent inclusion of a major course in Conservation and Forestry on a two year basis, utilizing a 1500 acre forest for field and laboratory work, has proven to be another fine educational offering.

Conferences permit the student to discuss the demands and phases of business and industry which seem to present possibilities for himself. Through the student's Personalized Executive Analysis Chart, the student is guided towards fields where his inherent qualities will find the greatest opportunity for expression.

Pine Manor Junior College offers its 225 young women a two-year program of liberal education. The curriculum is carefully organized to meet the needs of two predominant types of students, those who wish to qualify for advanced liberal arts work, and those who wish a solid foundation before entering professional study or leaving formal education at graduation. The college is a member of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

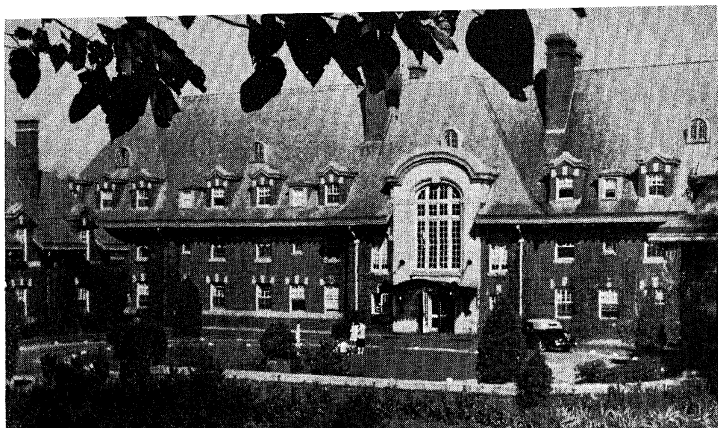

PINE MANOR JUNIOR COLLEGE

FREDERICK C. FERRY, JR., A.B., Ed.M., President

The students, who come from homes in thirty-four states and territories and eight foreign countries, live in relatively small houses in groups of ten to twenty. Two of the residences are French Houses where only that language is spoken. Third-Year-Aboard Programs in Paris or Madrid are available for qualified graduates.

Pine Manor's location in a residential college town only fifteen miles from Boston makes many cultural and educational opportunities available to its students. At the same time students find excellent sports facilities, including indoor and outdoor riding rings, available on its extensive campus.

BRIARCLIFF COLLEGE

BRIARCLIFF MANOR, NEW YORK

MRS. ORDWAY TEAD, B.A., LL.D., President

This fully accredited junior college in Westchester County offers to secondary school graduates liberal arts courses, vocational and pre-professional courses. Associate in Arts (A.A.), and Associate in Applied Science (A.A.S.) degrees are granted graduates.

The major courses are General Liberal Arts, College Transfer, Child Development, Painting, Music, Creative Writing, Speech-Radio-Drama, Secretarial Training and Cartography. The course in cartographic techniques and map compilation has been added to give training for an important branch of aviation and business administration in which there is a growing demand for women workers.

Day and resident students enjoy the college's splendid facilities for many outdoor and indoor sports. New York City provides a valuable laboratory for field trips and research projects, as well as abundant cultural resources of theatre, music and art.

CAZENOVIA JUNIOR COLLEGE

CAZENOVIA, NEW YORK

MRS. RHEA M. ECKEL, President

In the rolling hills of central New York, overlooking Cazenovia Lake, the College offers young women careful training in the first two years of a Liberal Arts program, Secretarial, Nursery School and Merchandising training, and special courses in Music and Art. Terminal and transfer curricula are available.

Graduates since 1934 have been accepted as juniors by leading New York State colleges and some thirty other institutions. Superior personnel and individualized advisory system, student organizations operated on democratic principles, high scholastic standards, a distinctive social program are outstanding characteristics. Eight dormitories house the students. A wholesome health and sports program is maintained with advantage taken of the surrounding woods, lake, hills and ski trails.

BERKELEY SCHOOL

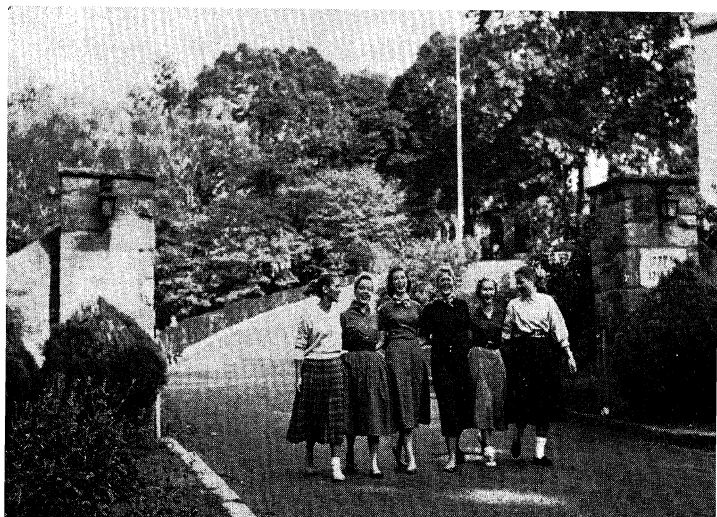

420 LEXINGTON AVE., NEW YORK 17
22 PROSPECT STREET, EAST ORANGE, NEW JERSEY
122 MAPLE AVENUE, WHITE PLAINS, NEW YORK

At each Berkeley School thorough secretarial training prepares young women for responsible positions in a wide variety of fields. An intensive One-Year Course or a comprehensive Two-Year Course meets the individual requirements of high-school graduates.

Women with two semesters of college may enroll for the Executive Secretarial Course for College Women. The full-time, college-trained faculty is supplemented by visiting professors who conduct courses in Business Administration.

Berkeley School offers a flexible curriculum that can be adjusted to the requirements of each student. The courses are planned carefully to enable the student to qualify for the career for which she is best adapted. This policy permits the development of personality and judgment. It stimulates individual responsibility, and awakens valuable new interests. It cultivates an appreciation of sound thinking.

Placement Department. Entrance in February, June, and September. Send for catalog.

MARJORIE WEBSTER JUNIOR COLLEGE

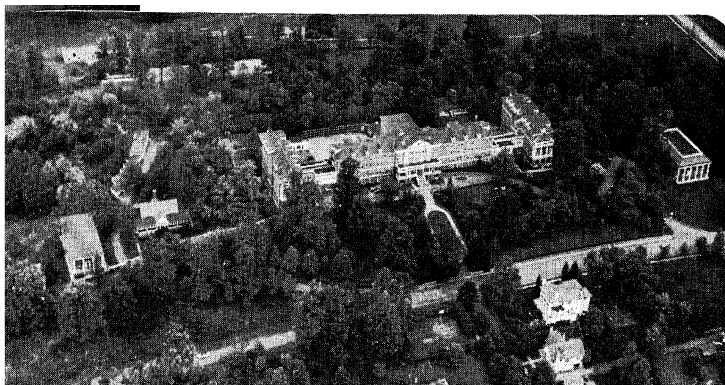

ROCK CREEK PARK ESTATES, WASHINGTON 12, D. C.

MARJORIE FRASER WEBSTER, M.A., L.H.D., President

A fully accredited junior college for young women, granting the A.A. degree, Marjorie Webster offers transfer Liberal Arts and a balanced program of Liberal Arts with transfer or terminal vocational arts of Physical Education; Kindergarten; Speech, Radio, T.V., Dramatics; Secretarial; Medical Secretarial; the Arts, Merchandising; Music. The terminal basis includes more practical subjects to prepare the student to be self-supporting; the transfer basis, more academic subjects to prepare for transfer to senior college.

The College dominates a 15-acre campus facing beautiful Rock Creek Park in suburban Washington, D. C. Recognizing the unusual value of its cultural environment, the College arranges trips to places of interest and inspiration. Classes in History, Art, Humanities and English are supplemented by field trips to Congress, the art galleries, museums and famous libraries of Washington.

There is an active student government association, and full social, cultural and athletic programs.

SULLINS COLLEGE

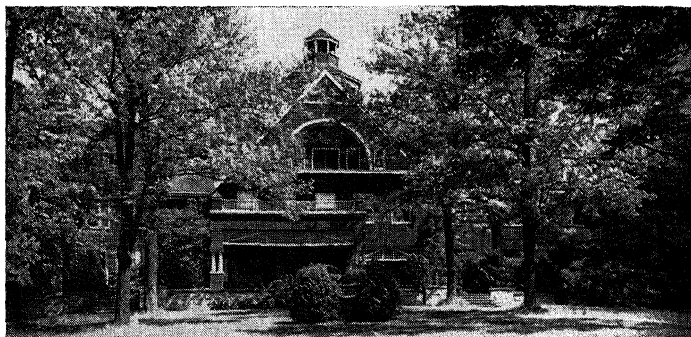

BRISTOL, VIRGINIA

WILLIAM T. MARTIN, B.A., L.L.B., President

Sullins is a fully accredited junior college for young women. Established in 1870, the school began construction of its present plant in the suburbs of Bristol in 1918. The 2-year college program includes foundation and terminal courses in liberal arts, home economics, secretarial, merchandising, radio, dramatics, music, art, physical education and ballet. Qualified graduates transfer with full junior standing to leading senior colleges and universities in every section of the country. Students represent over 35 states and 8 foreign countries. It is believed the wide representation among students, alumnae and faculty makes the college the most national of all girls' colleges of its size. The campus of 200 acres has a private lake, stables and recreational facilities.

The college is endowed, non-profit, non-denominational. The faculty ratio of one teacher for each nine students and the progressive guidance system assure individual attention. Tuition, residence, meals, $1750.

FAIRFAX HALL, WAYNESBORO, VIRGINIA

WILLIAM B. GATES, M.A., President

This old Virginia school in the Shenandoah Valley is noted for high scholastic standards and beauty of campus. Accredited four-years high school program offers college preparatory, fine arts, and elective diplomas; typing, shorthand, piano, organ, voice, art and dramatics. Fairfax Hall has a full athletic program, riding and swimming.

GREENBRIER COLLEGE, LEWISBURG, WEST VIRGINIA

JOHN F. MONTGOMERY, A.B., M.A., PH.D., President

In the "Greenbrier Country"—atop the Allegheny Mountains, 2300 feet above sea level—Greenbrier College has, since 1812, enjoyed an invigorating and healthful climate, inviting to outdoor life at all seasons. Standard Liberal Arts and Career programs including Secretarial courses, with choice of electives in Fine Arts provide two college years rich in educational experiences. College preparatory and elective programs are offered for the 11th and 12th grades.

THE MARION INSTITUTE, MARION, ALABAMA

CATO DOUGLAS GLOVER, ADMIRAL USN (Retired), President.

Marion Institute maintains three departments: Junior College, two years of accredited standard college work; Preparatory School; Army-Navy-Air Force Department with preparation for entrance to Government Academies: Annapolis, West Point, Air Force Academy, and Coast Guard Academy.

Ample grounds for military training program, intercollegiate athletics and intramural games. New fireproof dormitories, modern brick gymnasium and a new Science building have been completed in the past few years.

Military training provided and compulsory for all students in an MJC Unit of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

FOREIGN

ST. GODRIC'S COLLEGE

For

Administrative and Secretarial Careers and Languages
(Founded 1929)

2, Arkwright Road, Hampstead, LONDON, N.W. 3.

St. Godric's is a day and residential College of 300 full-time students; about two-thirds from English universities and leading schools, the remainder from nearly 40 nations throughout the free world. American girls are welcomed; they will benefit from the international atmosphere, — it will teach them to look out beyond their own immediate horizon.

The courses of training are designed to suit different needs. The Basic Secretarial Course of 1-year is for those educated girls who wish to gain quickly a thorough training to fit them for employment as private secretaries and in progressive posts. The 26-weeks' course covers similar ground but is highly intensive and is normally recommended for university women only. The 2-years' Course for the Secretary-Linguist offers opportunity for advanced language studies to girls of linguistic ability; these studies are practical and intensive to ensure a high standard of achievement. The 2-years' Finishing Course, in addition to secretarial training, provides benefits usually only acquired through years of experience. Additional courses in Journalism, Political work, Administration and Management, Advertising, Hospital and Library work, Accountancy for secretaries and Club or Hotel work, are designed to enable students to gain early recognition in entering these specialist fields. Arrangements for tuition are based on the individual. Personal care and guidance for each girl are ensured through a tutorial system and a high ratio of full-time staff to students. The various courses are under the direction of university graduates and experienced business executives.

A variety of cultural and social activities are organised by the College, including visits to places of interest in London, Windsor, Oxford, Cambridge, Canterbury and Stratford-on-Avon. American students may divide their course of study into two parts, allowing a free term for travel in Europe.

Hampstead has fresh air and a tranquil atmosphere. The Principal and his wife reside on campus, and give personal thought to students' problems, progress and careers.

LA CHATELAINIE

Saint-Blaise, Neuchatel, Switzerland

PROFESSOR ALBERT JOBIN, Dr. of Economics, Director

La Chatelainie is a scholastic establishment where girls can either have their full secondary or American High School curriculum, and all subjects required for the College Board Entrance Examination; these subjects being taught by American and British teachers on the Staff. Alternatively, students can simply take the "finishing course".

Besides these studies given in the English language, younger students also have at least 14 lessons of French a week, so that they can pursue their regular school studies and learn French at the same time. There are 12 different classes in this language, ranging from beginners to advanced students taking certificates and diplomas, and students are placed in the one corresponding with their previous knowledge.

Plenty of time is devoted to sports and an outdoor life. Girls have the opportunity of enjoying many different sports such as tennis, swimming, riding, hockey, basket-ball, sailing, and in the winter, skiing and skating. The School has three chalets at Gstaad, which is situated in the Alps, and these are open all the year round.

In May, there is a tour arranged to Italy, seeing particularly Milan, Florence, Rome and Venice. A further tour is organised to Paris and the Chateaux of the Loire. During the year, students visit various towns in Switzerland such as Berne, Zurich, Geneva and other places of architectural and historical interest, as well as castles, museums and exhibitions in the vicinity. They are also escorted to various concerts and theatres and older girls who have their parents' permission may attend dances, always accompanied by a member of the staff.

La Chatelainie was founded in 1880 by Mme. B. Jobin, grandmother of the present owner. It is now directed by Professor Albert Jobin, Doctor of Economics.

The assistant-directors have been connected with the school for many years, and there are 35 internal and several visiting teachers.

BRENT SCHOOL, BAGUIO, PHILIPPINES

REV. ALFRED L. GRIFFITHS, A.B., B.D., Headmaster

Brent School, a private coeducational boarding and day school under the auspices of the Episcopal Church, offers classes from Kindergarten through High School. In curriculum and general character, it follows the pattern of private preparatory schools in the United States. High standards of scholarship are maintained under a staff of competent American and Filipino teachers. Classes are small, allowing individual attention, and special emphasis is laid upon the development of character and personality.

At an elevation of 5,000 feet above sea level, Baguio enjoys a cool, healthful, and invigorating climate with temperatures averaging 70 degrees. The School is beautifully located near the center of the city. The buildings, including classrooms, dining hall, chapel, gymnasium, boys' and girls' dormitories, and library are situated on a pine-studded campus of about 24 acres.

For further information, write the Headmaster, Brent School, Baguio, Philippines.

SPECIAL EDUCATION

To help parents, teachers and advisers of children requiring special education, the Porter Sargent office offers the following: DIRECTORY FOR EXCEPTIONAL CHILDREN: Schools—Facilities—Services. It includes private schools, psychiatric and guidance clinics, state facilities, for the emotionally disturbed, the physically handicapped, the mentally retarded, etc., with listings of associations and foundations, periodicals, national societies.

SPECIAL EDUCATION FOR THE EXCEPTIONAL, three volumes, edited by Merle E. Frampton and Elena D. Gall. Here is a comprehensive work dealing with every phase of special education for the exceptional. The clear and concise chapters and supplementary readings are written by foremost specialists. NEW HOPE FOR THE RETARDED: Enriching the Lives of Exceptional Children, by Morris P. and Miriam Pollock. Avoiding complicated phraseology and vague generalizations, this book provides a detailed, total program toward developing the true potentialities of the retarded child.

ANNOUNCEMENTS OF SUMMER CAMPS

74 Forest St., Hartford 5, Conn. Tel. Jackson 2-0053.

26th Season — June 25 to August 21

Established 1933. Tuition $825.00. A co-educational school-camp offering special instruction in all secondary school subjects, and individually directed remedial work in English which includes training in reading, spelling and writing in charge of experts.

WAYA-AWI

Boys' Section

3 groups of boys — juniors, intermediates and seniors beginning at age 10. Total enrollment 125. Juniors have their own camp in a different set up from the older boys, with the supervision the age demands. All campers enjoy leisure hours in the open. Organized athletics are a part of the recreational program—hardball, softball, track, tennis, manual arts, crafts, riflery, archery, wood lore. Sailing, water skiing, swimming, fishing, mountain climbing, cook-outs are popular activities.

OUANANICHE

(Wah-nah-nee-chee)

Girls' Section

Girls aged 12 to 19 are accepted for this section. The girls have their own campus on the camp property, but yet are an integral part of Waya-Awi. Recreational facilities are shared with the boys, and the girls' presence makes possible social activities which would otherwise not be available. This section runs on its own scholastic schedule.

Enrollment limited to 50.

LONG LAKE LODGE

NO. BRIDGTON, ME.

WILLIAM R. WYMAN,
Lawrenceville, N. J.

The pioneer Tutoring Camp of America, established in 1902, offers an unusual combination of study and recreation to boys 14 and over who wish to remove conditions, prepare for fall examinations. Many boys start subjects they expect to take the next year. The corps of efficient and experienced tutors, the atmosphere of real work, the high standards maintained have enabled many boys to save a year of college preparation. Every effort is made to overcome faulty habits of study. No boy is accepted unless he has serious work to complete. The 56th season of continuous operation opens July 1, 1958.

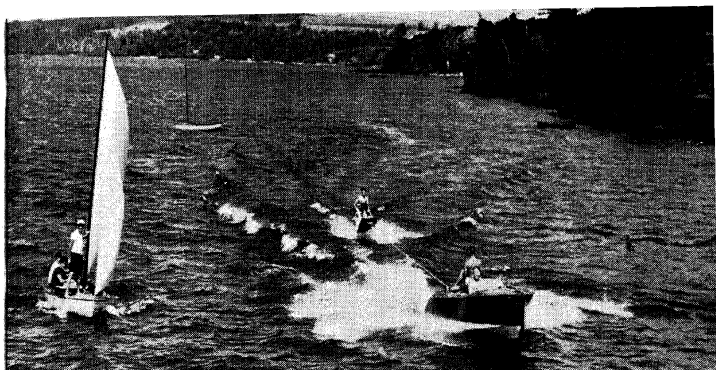

CAMP MILBROOK, Bridgton, Maine Est. 1939.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Adkins, 70 boys and girls, 6-18, $450.

Winter Address: Phillips Exeter Academy, Exeter, N. H.

Located on beautiful Highland Lake, boys and girls share together the problems of living, government and recreation. Buildings are comfortable, modern and sanitary. Write for illustrated booklet.

WASSOOKEAG, THE SCHOOL-CAMP, DEXTER, MAINE

LESTER E. MAY, 118-T 84th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Wassookeag, founded in 1926, was the first School-Camp combining the facilities of an accredited summer school with outdoor activities on a lake-shore campus. It offers young men, 10-20, a summer of study and recreation in an environment where all students are campers and all campers are students.

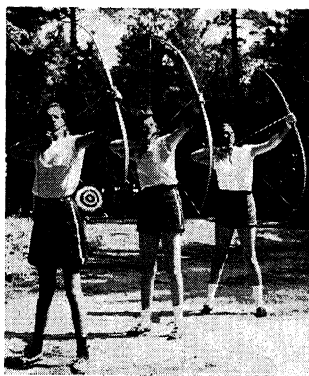

The educational program is twofold: Academic and Remedial. The former, meeting the requirements of the College Entrance and Secondary Education Boards, permits students to complete academic courses for credit. Instruction in study habits and methods develops self-reliance. Classes average 3 students to a master. The Remedial program corrects a student's basic difficulties. Remedial instruction in reading, spelling, grammar, and mathematics is individual.

Afternoons are devoted to aquatics, landsports, and hobbies. All activities are supervised by experienced faculty.

MOY-MO-DA-YO, CORNISH, MAINE. Established 1907.

MR. AND MRS. CARL C. PETERSON, Directors
81 Winslow Road, Waban 68, Massachusetts.

25 miles west of Portland, Me., on the sandy shore of Lake Pequaket amidst tall pines, 90 girls, 5-18, enjoy an educational summer.

LAKE GEORGE CAMP FOR GIRLS

GLENBURNIE-ON-LAKE GEORGE, N. Y.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN E. DONAT,
Directors

Located in a pollen free area on the eastern shore of Lake George on one of the purest bodies of water in the world. 100 girls divided into three distinct groups, Juniors (6-10), Intermediates (10-14), and Seniors (14-17). Programs are arranged to suit the interests and capabilities of the campers. In addition to swimming in the coves of the camp's shoreline, girls enjoy canoeing, sailing, water skiing, arts and crafts, riding, hockey, tennis, basketball, volley ball, archery, riflery and badminton. Dramatics in fully equipped theatre. Exceptional rainy day activities. Mature, experienced counselors. Excellent food.

GRAND OAKS FARM CAMP, Columbia, Virginia. Est. 1947.

Mary Alice Ankers, 20 boys and girls, 8-14, $90 month.

On the campus of the school, the complete facilities are used by the camp. In a Christian atmosphere and restful setting, a liberal education combined with varied recreation and sports under excellent leadership are offered boys and girls 8-14. All usual camp sports are available plus horseback riding. The food is wholesome and nutritious. Write for particulars.

CAMP-4-FUN, Watervliet, Michigan. Est. 1952.

Elizabeth B. Andrews, 50 boys and girls, 6-15, $275-$600.

Winter Address: 800 Buena Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Located on 116 acres, Camp-4-Fun is primarily to supplement the work of The Day School, Chicago, but admits children as vacancies permit outside the school enrollment. Transportation from The Day School to camp and return is included in fees. Activities include crafts, tennis, badminton, baseball, basketball, hobbies, riding, canoeing, trips, water sports and new completely equipped swimming pool. Academic program is available with special attention to individual problems and adjustment.

PIED PIPER'S CALL, Los Gatos, Calif. Est. 1936. Day Camp.

Mrs. Nathalie O. Wollin, 90 boys and girls, 3-6, $35. week; 6-13, $245.00 season.

Situated on 48 acre ranch and orchard in rolling foothills of Santa Cruz Mountains 50 miles south of San Francisco. A unique summer experience for children still in the formative years. Activities include swimming, horses, farm, sports, nature, creative art, music, dramatics. Trained leaders, guidance in character growth. Camping trips. Camp season, six weeks, June 24 to August 3. Transportation throughout Santa Clara Valley areas. 2 hour morning classes in reading, arithmetic, and language for those who wish.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN WORK CAMP, CARBONDALE, COLO.

JOHN H. CALDWELL, JR., Director

Here boys and girls learn the fundamentals of community living by maintaining and literally building the foundations of a growing school and camp. Carpentry, construction and farm work are carried on under careful supervision. Afternoons the campers are instructed in riding, swimming, fly fishing and other sports. Singing, square dancing and group activities make up the evening program. Week-end trips include camping, mountaineering, and educational trips to points of interest around Colorado's scenic and historical Western Slope. The nearby Aspen Music Festival provides outstanding concerts and musical instruction if desired. June 26 to August 21. 40 boys and girls, 13-17, $450.00.

VERDE VALLEY SCHOOL SUMMER CAMP

SEDONA, ARIZONA

Answering the requests of many of its students and graduates, Verde Valley School has added to its program a summer camp for boys and girls, 11-15 years of age. The camp is open to all (regardless of race, religious affiliations, and social background) who are willing to work and enjoy themselves together according to principles of mutual cooperation and respect.

The staff consists of many of the regular faculty and staff members of the school, and is supplemented by outside specialists. Counselors are graduates of the school and seniors.

Activities include astronomy, drama, horse care, music, arts and crafts, photography, science and construction, work jobs, trips to Indian reservations and trading posts, and numerous sports, including swimming and riding.

An hour and a half each day Monday through Saturday, the campers, under staff supervision, help with repairs, construction, cleaning, landscaping, and other essential projects. This is intended to instill respect for physical work, develop useful manual skills, and provide a sense of accomplishment.

Fee $450 (6 weeks) includes field trips and riding.

ACADEMIC SCHOOLS CLASSIFIED

These lists are designed to be of aid to the parent in searching for programs to meet particular needs and interests.

These are made up from data submitted by the schools and represent a general indication of their features and offerings.

Listing are selective and omissions may be for reason of space or lack of recent data.

The Descriptive Text section of this Handbook gives further data about many of these features. Study of the bold face entry for each school will reveal those courses which have been remarked as of unusual depth.

Reference should also be made to the Concise Listings for schools not included in this section,—as this list has been made up of the schools in the Descriptive Text section. Most of these listing relate to boarding schools and their offerings.

For further information write directly to the school or Porter Sargent.

CONCISE LISTING OF SCHOOLS

Herewith are presented schools that complement those in the preceding Descriptive Text and Announcement Sections.

The first listing includes as well cross references to all boarding schools in the Descriptive Text.

Each of these lists is arranged in geographical sequence from Maine down the East coast to the South Central states, and from the lake states through the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific states and Hawaii.

In each state, listings are alphabetized by the name of the city.

For lists of schools not here represented, consult earlier editions of the Handbook as well as latest editions of separate publications of this office,—Junior Colleges, Specialized Schools and Colleges, and the Directory for Exceptional Children.

BOARDING SCHOOLS

This is a complete list of all U. S. academic boarding schools in the Handbook. The phrase "See Text" indicates that a full description of the school will be found in the Descriptive Text.

For Junior Colleges with high school boarding departments, consult the separately published "Junior Colleges, Specialized Schools and Colleges" issued by Porter Sargent.

For residential special schools, consult the separately published "Directory for Exceptional Children," also issued by Porter Sargent.

HOME SCHOOLS

These schools, including those drawn from a section in the 35th Handbook entitled "For the Underprivileged", are of low or no tuition and primarily for dependent children.

For information concerning admission policies, contact the school directly.

Additional schools in these categories may be found in the "Directory for Exceptional Children" (published by Porter Sargent) where schools offering special helps for handicapped are described and classified.

For other schools of lower tuition see our list of Boarding Schools in the preceding pages.

GUIDE TO SUMMER CAMPS, Annual edition, 136 pp., cloth $2.20 (cash $2.00), paper $1.10 (cash $1.00). Summarizes programs, fees, and enrollments of over 1000 private residential camps throughout the country. Provides summer and winter addresses of directors.

DIRECTORY FOR EXCEPTIONAL CHILDREN: Schools—Services—Other Facilities, 3rd edition, 336 pp., cloth $6.00. This is the only publication to provide detailed information to meet the inquiries of parents, teachers, social workers, psychiatrists, pediatricians, school administrators, and others concerned with health, education, and welfare of exceptional children.

It includes descriptions of more than 2500 schools, camps, and other facilities for the emotionally disturbed, the physically handicapped, the mentally retarded; also data on psychiatric and guidance clinics, and state schools. The names and addresses of state directors of special education, mental health, services for crippled children, etc.; national societies, associations and foundations; periodicals; etc. are listed.

THE SARGENT SERVICES

Since 1915 Porter Sargent and Staff have served as educational advisors to parents.

Information on a great variety of schools, colleges and camps is available from our office, and a bureau is maintained to advise parents and guardians.

Thousands have been helped by sending details of their child's needs.

A complete form will be sent on request, to be filled in with data that will make our suggestions pertinent and helpful. Write to Porter Sargent, 11 Beacon St., Boston 8, Mass., specify name of child, age, school and class, grades received, the type of school sought, tuition range, and desired geographical location.

With this and additional data provided on the form which will be sent from this office, recommendation will be made in the best interest of the child.

Compensation to defray expenses of handling inquiries is usually asked of parents able to pay, as we accept no enrollment fees from the schools.
